George J. Roberts, head of the Elitch Gardens Co., Denver, was here last week to attend a convention of those engaged in another branch of the company's activities and took the opportunity to visit some of the places of trade interest. The Elitch Gardens Co. operates about 200,000 feet of glass in cut flowers and pot plants, doing a large wholesale business.

Carl Dumke, a former Chicagoan, now with the Boise Floral Co., Boise, Idaho, is here for a visit.

Zech & Mann's remodeled store is ready just in time for Christmas. Nearly seven weeks have been consumed by the alterations, undertaken for necessary repairs on the building. The firm has suffered many inconveniences, but is repaid by having increased available space and much better light and arrangement than before. A. J. Zech has been ill for a few days, with a severe cold.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Prices were a little better last week. Mums are practically gone and the commission men breathe a fervent thanksgiving as the crop diminishes. A few mums remain uncut, but some of these are too ripe. The carnation crop is late. There are not enough to fill orders now at $8 per hundred. There will be a scarcity of carnations for Christmas. The prices will be $12 and $15 per hundred. Roses are coming in well. There will be an abundance of long-stemmed stock. Columbia and Premier will be from $10 to $50, while extra long Milady and Premier will be as high as $50. Most of the stock will run from $10 to $35. Stevia will be plentiful at $3 and narcissi at $8 per hundred. Christmas orders are coming in earlier than usual and the indications are that the holiday business will be heavy.

William L. Rock Flower Co. President T. J. Noll announced that a meeting of the publicity committee had been held that afternoon. Miss Hayden, chairman of that committee, submitted a report showing that about $2,900 of the $4,500 subscribed last April for local and national publicity had been paid in. M. E. Carter, chairman of the entertainment committee, reported great enthusiasm among the members of the four bowling teams already organized. He said there would be more teams ready for action in the near future. Miss Hayden was given the work of organizing a women's team. William Wade, secretary, announced that the ten slogan boards allowed Kansas City by the S. A. F. had been given as follows: George Johnson, nurseryman on the Golden Belt highway; J. B. Masson, Bethel, Kan.; L. C. Fields, Kansas City, Kan.; E. A. Humfeld, Admiral boulevard and Pasco street and the Lexington road; W. J. Barnes, A. F. Barbe, Adolph D. Mohr, William L.

Rock's greenhouses and Samuel Murray's greenhouses.

William Foith had on display a vase of beautiful Laddie carnations and a red sport of Laddie. Rock's Gardens had a display of Cryptomeria japonica. The room and decorations, palms and ferns, were furnished by the William L. Rock Flower Co. Refreshments and cigars were the courtesy of H. Kusik & Co. Miller's orchestra furnished music for dancing. Various Notes.

P. A. Manson, formerly manager of the Pinehurst Floral Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo., is now associated with the Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. Mr. Manson is now making a trip through the southwest, calling on the trade.

Carl Hagemeyer, Paola, Kan., was a recent visitor.

Samuel Murray had a telegraph order for a blanket of pink roses in Kansas one day last week.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. moved a quantity of fine roses, together with much other stock, last week.

Harry Blake, local manager of the Pinehurst Floral Co., drove to Pleasant Hill, Mo., December 8.

The Sunset Hill Gardens have just closed a long-term lease on a 15x50 foot store room at 3930 Main street. An artistic flower shop will be opened there December 15. This will be a branch store of the Colonial Shop, Ward parkway and Wornall road, which was opened several years ago by the Sunset Hill Gardens. Like the original shop, the new place will have an ebony ice-box and woodwork, gray walls and blue draperies. A. R. Smith and Harold L. Heakin, proprietors of the Sunset Hill Gardens, will divide their time between the two stores and their greenhouses in Leavenworth, Kan. The greenhouses in both cities comprise about 40,000 feet of glass.

health. He spends a good deal of time hunting, as the doctor ordered him to be outdoors as much as possible. When not indulging in this recreation he is putting in nursery stock, which will be ready to sell in the spring. Mrs. Jarrett, who suffered a nervous breakdown last spring, is entirely well again.

J. C. Eggleston's first crop of sweet peas was an entire loss. The plants looked fine; some of the vines were seven feet in length and were full of buds, but not a bloom came out.

Mrs. Harnden had been ill several months. Funeral services were held from the home, December 9. Mrs. Harnden is survived by a daughter, Mrs. A. B. Calkins; three sons, Glen C. Harnden, W. W. Harnden, Jr., and Cash E. Harnden, and a sister, Mrs. W. M. Knapp.

Biederman Florist had several decorations and a good deal of funeral work last week. He made a star of violets and white carnations for the funeral of J. H. Chandler, president of the White Star Gas & Oil Co.

The Market.

The market improved the week of December 5 to 10. The trading was brisk in carnations and in short-stemmed roses. It was fair in long-stemmed roses, while it was dull with most of the other flowers. Violets, valley, Sweet-heart roses, sweet peas and gardenias were duldest of all.

Bright carnations like Laddie, Mrs. Ward and reds are in active demand, also some white. Enchantress is less sought. The price on all good carnations has advanced. The shorter grades of roses are eagerly bought; the color preferred is pink. All roses are a little higher priced. At the close of business Saturday, December 10, some pink roses were bringing $6 to $8 per hundred; other colors were lower than pink. Some long-stemmed roses brought higher figures than a week ago, but there was less demand for them.

Fancy chrysanthemums, like Chadwick, sold pretty well at $4 a dozen to $25 per hundred, as did selected pompons and singles at from three bunches for a dollar to $25 for 100 bunches, but the ordinary end-of-the-season run of chrysanthemums, both big and little, were of little value, despite much effort.

The yellow narcissus, Soleil d'Or, has come, but neither yellow nor white narcissi are selling well.

The indications are that there will be a good supply of flowers at Christmas.

Christmas Plants.

The stock of Christmas plants is fine this season. Flowering, berried and the department stores placed Christmas wreaths on sale early in November; yet our florists, who ought to have the cream of this business, have not always placed their orders before December.

Many retail merchants place their orders for Christmas toys in January; ought we not to place our orders for Christmas supplies in July? It would pay.

A Suggestion.

All of us are, in sentiment, with the limitation of armaments conference at Washington. To express our feelings, E. J. Fancourt suggests that everyone of us, individually, send our nation's representative or some member of his staff a few flowers with a card like this:

PEACE ON EARTH, GOOD WILL TO MEN.
All hail to you in your peaceful endeavors. Your sentiments are fragrant and beautiful as the flowers.

Signed.....

If a florist is at a long distance from Washington, the telegraph delivery service will cover the ground nicely. We extend our peaceful welcome to all nationalities, and there is no better way of saying it than to "Say It with Flowers."

An Important Change.

Announcement is made of an important change in the management of the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., and in the personnel of the stockholders of the company. has purchased the shares held in the Florex Gardens by David Fuerstenberg, Henry C. Geiger, Eugene Bernheimer and R. Dutt.

The warranting of these changes is that the management of the Florex Gardens has passed from the hands of David Fuerstenberg to those of William A. Geiger. The Florex Gardens owe their existence and their magnificent development to his creative brilliancy and business enterprise. Their present splendid equipment is the work of William A. Geiger and with him and with his able associates a bright future is predicted. Mr. Geiger first gained fame as a grower of that beautiful and difficult rose, Mrs. Jardine, for J. Stephenson's Son, Marcus S. Stephenson, of Oak Lane. Later he took charge of the big house, 72x800, for the same firm. From there he went to the Florex Gardens as manager, succeeding with that gigantic enterprise as no one before him had succeeded, the position demanding a combination of qualities that is rare.

Various Notes.

While in the city last week, E. G. Hill called on some of our leading men in the central district, and also visited some of the growers in Kennett Square, at Brandywine Summit, at North Wales, at Southampton and at Roslyn.

Alfred Burton has some wonderful Russell.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., spoke on "The Glory of the Annuals" before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, at the New Century Club, the afternoon of Tuesday, December 13.

Jesse Ash, of Vineland, N. J., has built one greenhouse, 60x400 feet. It is planted with Chrysanthemum Mrs. E. D. Godfrey. The flowers, as seen at the store of Berger Bros., are excellent. Mr. Ash, who formerly grew vegetables, will follow chrysanthemums with sweet peas.

Isaac M. Bayersdorfer has undergone a serious operation in the Kensington hospital. His surgeon, the famous Dr. Beaver, says that Mr. Bayersdorfer is doing well. He wants his florist friends to know that he is looking forward to seeing them soon again.

Edward Reid is receiving some of those fine Premier that were so popular last Christmas.

L. M. Ruch has returned from New England.

The Godfrey Aschmann greenhouses are interesting to plant buyers. The begonias are lovely.

A Word About Birds

As you probably realize, all canary birds are not alike. In my

Tyrolean Warbler

I have a bird that will delight every customer. I import this sweetest of singers direct from the famous Tyrol district of Switzerland. Here every bird is taught by the peasants to sing when still young. Each bird shipped to me is a trained singer of great beauty.

The St. Andreasburg Roller has a peculiar song all his own, that gives him his name. The sweet song of these birds attracts customers to your store. 100% profit on each bird.

The Market.

The quantity of flowers arriving is much reduced and a tolerably good clean-up is made on nearly all lines. The amount of buying is not heavy and, with the advance in prices due to the near approach of Christmas, retail buying is light, the retailers taking away most of the flowers before the general public comes in. Chrysanthemums look the worse for wear and few really good lots of blooms now come in; about all are changing their color and showing signs of age. Some nice pompons are still coming in and are in good demand at an average of $9 per dozen bunches.

Roses make a good clean-up daily, with prices not greatly altered from a week ago. Some American Beauties are coming in from a distance; the best are quoted at $100 per hundred. Fancy Hadley is likely to reach this price for Christmas; even white roses have been cleaning up well of late.

Carnations have stiffened. Receipts are much reduced, with growers holding back their crop on the plants. The general average is $6 to $8 per hundred,

Paper White narcissi are druggy and stevia is in overwhelming supply. A few Soleil d'Or narcissi have appeared and some tulips, hyacinths and freesias are promised for the holidays. There are small lots of mignonette, bachelor's buttons, calendulas and myosotis. Yellow marguerites are as yet quite short-stemmed, but are moving better. There are few lilies, but callas are in moderate supply at $2 to $3 per dozen.

White bouvardia is getting scarce; small lots of colored are offered. Gardenias are worth $6 per dozen. Valley is in moderate demand. There is a good supply of cypripediums, but few catleyas, the latter realizing high prices. The abundance of stevia hurts the sales of asparagus.

The near approach of Christmas is shown in the numerous offerings of wreaths of evergreens, berries and cones, bunches of colored berries and other decorative material on many of the stands. Great quantities of Christmas trees, laurel roping, laurel wreaths, holly, etc., are offered.

Plant trade has not been as active as might be desired. Splendid lots of well fruited oranges, solanums, ericas, camellias, cyclamens, primulas, poinsettias and other plants are offered. Cyclamens were never so fine and well flowered, salmon pink being the predominating color. Mixed baskets of colored-leaved plants as well as flowering plants are most attractive, and the weather, which has been clear so far and only moderately cold, has been ideal for shipping.

cember 10, at Arlington, and drew a large crowd of growers. In the morning the members visited the gardens and experimental greenhouses at Lexington, to inspect the test crops of lettuces. A lunch was served in the old town hall, after which President A. H. Burnham called a business session. F. C. Stokes spoke on "The Seed Situation," and James A. Bailey, of Arlington, on "Some Present-Day Problems." There was a fine display of Arlington-grown fancy vegetables in the hall.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 20, officers for 1922 will be elected. There will be several short, practical talks. James Marlborough, of Topsfield, will speak on winter-flowering begonias of the large-flowering English type; Peter Arnott, of Chestnut Hill, will treat of both cyclamens and large-flowered begonias; Fred E. Palmer, of Brookline, will talk on commercial cyclamen culture, and Eric H. Wetterlow, of Manchester, will talk on the culture of the small-flowered winter begonias, Melior and Lorraine varieties, and cyclamens. The four speakers are all expert growers and the talks should prove valuable. The January meeting of the club will come one week later than usual, January 24; it will be ladies' night and officers will be installed.

The devastating ice storm which ravaged a great part of Massachusetts November 26 to 29 has caused an unprecedented demand for saws, axes, pruning shears and similar tools, as well as great calls for tree paints, coal tar and other dressings. New "tree experts" and "tree surgery firms" are becoming numerous. One Ohio firm has run half-page advertisements in the Boston dailies and has sent a big force of men to New England. The damage is so widespread that there is ample work for everybody. Owners of valuable trees are being warned to beware of the numerous fake "tree doctors," now canvassing for work.

Penn's have had an exhibition the last week of what the firm calls perfect specimens of cyclamens at $25 each. They have had a great demand for cyclamens. Henry Penn is indignant at the tactics of a rival retail firm in practically stealing the words of his Christmas announcement to customers word for word and mailing it to its customers. Too bad that retailers should adopt these tactics. Just when retailers were beginning to get together, this action caused an embittered feeling not in line with Christmas good cheer.

At the emporium of H. M. Robinson & Co., on Winthrop square, the street approaches are now almost blocked with Christmas trees, laurel wreaths and great quantities of other Christmas greenery. The store is a hive of industry, with everything for the festive season predominant. Cut flower trade is good, with an excellent shipping trade.

At John J. O'Brien's, on Beacon street, the large, handsome store presents a charming appearance for the holidays. Tubs and vases of evergreens stand outside, while within splendid groups of well fruited oranges, begonias, ericas and other seasonable plants are tastefully arranged. The choicest of cut flowers, such as gardenias, cattleyas, cypripediums, valley, roses, bouvardia, etc., are to be found in quantity here, and the outlook for business is good.

shire street, is out of the beaten track of retail stores, but has a big, commodious and well equipped store at a rental far below that of others and has the advantage of being located close to the wholesale flower markets. His business shows a steady increase. Funeral orders are numerous and a considerable number of large decorations are secured. The big show windows here are at present resplendent with splendid poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, oranges and decorative plants of all kinds, while the offerings of holiday evergreen wreaths are many and beautiful.

Wax Bros., at 44 Temple place, have an attractive store for the holidays. Some fine designs in holiday wreaths are to be seen, and groups of plants are quite effective. Here the huge bunches of pansies are always noteworthy, while all seasonable annuals, such as bachelor's buttons, calendulas, mignonette, etc., are well featured, in addition to the usual fine line of roses, orchids and other flowers.

A letter received from James Warr, well known in Boston and now visiting his old home at Havre des Pas, Jersey, C. I., England, and dated November 24, states that the weather there is mild. Huge camellias planted in large beds outdoors are in full bloom, while geraniums, marguerites, dwarf and climbing roses, heliotropes and other plants are all blooming profusely.

R. & J. Farquhar Co. cleaned out practically all its Dutch bulbs and the seed store is now more like a florists' store, with cyclamens, begonias, poinsettias, palms, ferns, fern dishes, etc., seen in quantity, all produced at the Dedham greenhouses. W. N. C.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

A considerable quantity of funeral work has practically cleaned up the greater part of the cut stock received at the wholesale houses last week. Stock consists chiefly of chrysanthemums and roses. The former are not so large and beautiful as they were, but what are received are of medium size and chiefly in the yellow varieties. However, these have been in fairly good demand. A small quantity of pompons is seen and sells readily. The rose supply is becoming greater and extra good stock brings good prices. The demand is chiefly for the medium-grade flowers.

There has been a good demand for valley, which is arriving in fine shape. The supply of orchids is fair, but the local demand is not at all what it should be at this time of the year. Cypridiums are plentiful and sell fairly well. Some splendid violets arrived last week, but the season does not open up for them readily, and, consequently, the sale is not large. Carnations are not in heavy supply, but there promises to be a good crop on for Christmas. Calendulas are good and sell well. Stevia is of good quality and sells well. Little else is seen in small flowers at this time. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful and of good quality. Quantities of laurel roping, holly, boxwood, pine, mistletoe and spruce trees have been sold during the last week. The supply of holly received here is of fairly good quality and well berried.

Various Notes.

Hill's Baby Xmas Trees

FOR

Florists' Trade

Hill's Xmas Trees are cut fresh the day your order is shipped. They arrive bright and fresh, so that the needles will remain on until the Holiday season is over.

NOTE: As shown in illustration, trees are shipped without roots. Some of our customers prefer to use trees with roots for potting. We will gladly furnish trees with roots, if specified at time of placing order, in which case no holder is furnished.

Trees are packed in wooden cases and are shipped by express, so as to arrive a few days before Xmas. These prices include attractive holders painted green. Retail prices, 50c, 75c and $1.00 each.

at the club's headquarters, the Osburn House, Friday evening, December 9, when thirty-five members of the club were present. A general discussion was held, following the address by the secretary pro tem., John Davis, whose topic was "Bettering the Condition of the Grower and Defining More Clearly the Objects of the Florists' Association." The president of the club, James Sproat, proposed that an open election of officers take place at the January meeting, instead of making up a slate. This was voted upon and carried unanimously.

Congratulations are in order. A stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter La Vigne, Sunday, December 4, and "Said It with a Bouncing Baby Boy." Both mother and baby are doing well.

George Cramer is assisting the S. A. Anderson force, at Buffalo, for the Christmas and New Year's business.

We are glad to hear that the condition of Mrs. George M. Patrick, of Auburn, N. Y., is improved. She has been confined to her home for the last few weeks with a hard attack of typhoid fever.

Mark Palmer, of Buffalo, N. Y., was in the city the early part of the week and assisted in organizing the "Ziro" Club. The next day he visited the various florists of the city.

Visitors to the city last week were Mrs. W. F. Quance, of Newark, N. Y.; S. W. Morgan, of Le Roy, N. Y.; W. Runyon, of Runyon & Runyon, Shortsville, N. Y.; T. Speelman, of C. J. Speelman & Sons, of New York city; G. W. Perkins, of Fulton, N. Y.; Manuel Oppenheim, of Olean, N. Y.

It is somewhat surprising to note the demand for dried flowers and grasses this year. For a while it was thought that there would not be nearly so many used as during the last few years, but at the time of writing the demand has been away in excess of previous seasons. The windows of George T. Boucher are tastefully arranged with scores of baskets, from the small favor basket to the larger gift size. Colonial bouquets, vases, hanging baskets and cemetery wreaths are seen in a host of styles and all made with the dried flowers. The East Main street store of Salter Bros. has a wonderful collection in the windows.

Alberts the Florist showed the latter part of last week some excellent cyclamens and begonias in the window. Large clusters of honesty pods graced the outline of the window and made a pleasing appearance. The firm has a large quantity of poinsettias and red peppers on hand and is in readiness for the Christmas trade.

E. B. Fry reports satisfactory business. He has had much funeral work of late and he feels confident that the Christmas business is going to be quite heavy. His new store is attractive.

Wilson the Florist is making a good showing of berry bowls, which are well filled with berries and tied with red ribbon. The firm is also displaying a great many Christmas baskets, which are attractive and seasonable. H. J. H.

The Market.

As is often the case between Thanksgiving and the opening of the active Christmas trade, there is a lull in the florists' business here. The outlook, however, is that there will be a good Christmas trade. Mums are good for this season of the year, while begonias and cyclamens are coming into the market in larger quantities each week. Jerusalem cherries and other early winter plants are making their appearance. A few poinsettias have arrived, and from now on there will be larger quantities daily. Prices are much more reasonable than they were through the holiday season last year.

Various Notes.

Charles Luthy, 363 Springfield avenue, reports business slow since Thanksgiving, but he expects a fair Christmas trade.

A. C. Begerow, Inc., 946 Broad street, has had a Christmas display in the window in which red candles, holly, poinsettias and other holiday flowers have their place. On three sides of the display is a beautiful portiere.

Henry Penn's Christmas Message:

This year more than ever, have an outlined advertising program to be used in the local newspapers to stimulate more sales. More energy is being directed in this channel by all other lines.

Why shouldn't flowers receive the same support as all other commodities?

Penn

The Most Modern and Artistic Home of Flowers in New England

A VERITABLE crystal palace of flowers is the Penn salesroom, the daily scene of the greatest activity in the Boston retail flower trade. The tiled floor is in soft buff colored stone and walls of Ivory Caen stone. In the rear is the crowning scenic feature of all—"The Fountain Court." In the center plays a wonderful Italian fountain, the work of a Boston sculptor. The Court is surrounded by eight marble pillars and each top with an ornamental frieze, while above is a steel and leaded glass ceiling which lights the Court day and night, for at night there are electric fixtures sculptured and modeled by a famous Italian artist in the purest of alabaster marble above the ground glass to take the place of the sun.

sold a good many of it." I asked, "How many can you let me have?" He said, "Well, I am not going to let you take all I have. I have to keep some for my own trade." I said, "How many? Let's get down to business." He said, "About 300." I was the happiest fellow in the world when I got those 300 over here. But what do you think? Somebody put J. D. Eisele on to it and Dreer's had it in their catalogue, so that I put Ophelia on the market about a year too soon. However, I have no cause to complain, because Ophelia has been the mother of nearly all the roses I have raised thus far.

Beginnings in Hybridization.

It is so long since I began to hybridize that I have almost forgotten how I did it, but I worked it out. Do you know the first rose I got that gave me any encouragement was General MacArthur? I had been plodding along for a number of years working at the job—but let me tell you about General MacArthur. I was over in the London gardens last year, and the man who had charge of the roses—they have, of course, beds containing twenty-five to fifty and sometimes 100 varieties—came to a red rose and said, "I think this is the best red rose we have over here. If you haven't this rose, you ought to get it." I asked him, "What's the name?" I recognized it at once as General MacArthur. He said, "General MacArthur." And I said, "Rather an old acquaintance; I originated that rose." He replied, "You did?" I said, "Yes. I happen to be the originator." I met another man at the flower show in London, from South Africa. I think he was one of those diamond merchants, and he was looking around through the show when somebody told him that Mr. Hill was there from America. He said, "I want to see that man," and so he was brought over and introduced to me. He said, "I want to shake your hand and thank you." I asked him, "What for?" He said, "I am from South Africa, and, do you know? the finest rose we have in South Africa is your General MacArthur. It grows with exuberance and there is a charm about it." I felt that that was compensation for some of the work that had not brought returns. And so we go through life. We must not expect to make money out of everything.

Disseminating the New Ones.

Recently a writer was extolling the method, practiced by some rosarians, of distributing plants over the country among different growers for trial, saying that was about the only honest method of putting out a new rose. Now, it kind of stuck with me—the plan to give out trial plants. We figured up the other day, if we were to give all the persons who have applied for America twelve plants apiece it would take about 2,400 plants to go around. But not only that; if we were to distribute that many plants and other friends of ours found some had it and they did not get it, where would we be? We would be "in the soup," because we should make more enemies than we should friends. I bought a rose, William R. Smith, from John Shellem; I gave him $500 and you fellows had a spread and a great time naming it for old Mr. Smith. Of course, the name of the man was all right; but John said, "You get all the stock of it." Well, John, out of the goodness of his heart, had sent it around, and when I came to announce the sale of the rose, bless your life! they said, "Why, this thing has been kick-

MR. JOHN T. MUIR, 4647 Grand Blvd., City.

Dear Mr. Muir:

It might be of interest to you to know how much the officers of this bank appreciated the admirable taste which you displayed in the arrangement of the design and the beautiful flowers used in the floral piece furnished by you at the time of Mr. Lampert's funeral.

It was an occasion on which we felt that the best was none too good and we were very much gratified at your efforts in that direction. It was also spoken of by Mrs. Lampert afterwards as being the most wonderful assemblage of flowers that she had ever seen.

Feeling confident that you would be pleased to know of these favorable comments, I have taken the liberty of writing you this letter.

Very sincerely,

ing around here for two or three years; we have plenty of them." John did not mean any harm, but he had been importuned by men. Some of them did not treat John fairly. They went to work and propagated the rose, and when I came to put it on the market, other people had the rose and had it in quantities. And another thing: When you give plants to some of your friends among the rose growers and deny others, you are going to beget enmity. It has worked out that way in instances where we have done that. I have in mind Columbia. I let a man have a considerable quantity. I made no bargain with him; it was kind of a gentlemen's understanding; but do you know I never got a penny return from what I sent him. Now, another thing: There are a good many men who have not succeeded in growing Premier. I could cite you a number of people, who, if they had had Premier to try out, would have condemned it. I know on our own place we had a bench of Premier that we had

Are You Setting On China Eggs?

Down at our Southampton place, we have an old hen named Japan. We named her Japan because she is forever setting on China. That is to say, on a China egg.

Once a day, regularly, she goes clucking by and disappears for half an hour. Then with great pride she struts about making a noise like a new laid egg. But always when we look, it's the same old China nest egg.

The other day I got to thinking about some of the things we have been doing for so many years—things that don't pay and never did. Says I to myself, says I, Stumpp, you are exactly like that old hen, Japan. You are setting on a lot of China eggs. So straightaway I called all the boys together and we promptly began collecting all the China eggs we could lay hands on and threw them into the garbage can.

I'll gladly tell you what some of those eggs were, if you'll write or call in. Two of them at least have to do with giving better F. T. D. Service.

propagated a certain number of years and if the other two benches had acted as that one bench did, there would not have been any Premier rose disseminated. I think there is some justification for not handing out your new roses. When you get hold of the other fellow's new rose and test it, it is marvelous how it depreciates in value when it gets out from under the disseminator's control.

That's a fact. Charley Totty let a friend of his have Mr. Lemon's new rose. He put it beside some Russell. The Russell had a bad case of black spot and died in two or three days.

Cross-Fertilization.

In the matter of hybridizing roses it is to be remembered the two sexes are not in all varieties. There are some varieties that are morphodite, that cannot be fertilized. But, of course, when we want to use a variety for the mother plant, with little scissors we cut the pollen-bearing stems and masculine, then waiting until the end of the stems are healed over. I do not believe I could tell you or anybody just when to apply the pollen, or when conception would take place in the rose. The knowledge comes only by actual experience. I can tell in most cases when the organs of the plant are in a receptive mood, and I can tell when it has been fertilized and impregnated. I think if you wish to gain that information you have to apply yourself to it. We shall begin to cross-fertilize in a short time, and it will be next August, or perhaps September, before the seed properly ripens. In the meantime you must keep your plants in fairly good health—not too moist. Sometimes moist atmosphere, a continuous rainy season for some weeks, will affect the health of the rose in spite of all you can do. We have tried charcoal and lime in order to check it, but it is next to impossible; when that things starts, it will undo weeks and weeks of work. I think if we had steam pipes in close proximity to the plants that are fertilized we should obviate that. That has been the great drawback to ripening a good proportion of the seeds in which impregnation and conception has taken place.

We have no secrets about this thing. We sow that seed along in October. We do not let it kick around and dry up and get hard. Throw it away if it does so.

Put it in a cool place and then, as St.
Paul says, "Let patience have her perfect work." You will find out what the apostle meant when you get into sowing seedling roses. That is the modus operandi in simple form, as simple as I can put it.

Accidents Will Happen.

We had our plants labeled and to be uniform we put on "H. B. Columbia,"
"H. B. Premier"; that is, Hoosier Beauty and the other parent. Our foreman read "H. B." when it was "A. B."
—American Beauty and Premier. That is the real parentage of America, and if you will look at the wood, you will find it resembles American Beauty, except it will produce a dozen flowers where American Beauty produced one. I think it gets its long growth from American Beauty. The variety, of course, is between Columbia and Ophelia.

There are strange things in nature.
You never can tell what you are going to get. In the human family you do not get a Gladstone or a Lincoln or a Roosevelt, or even a Harding or Woodrow Wilson, but once in a good long time, and so with roses. If any of you young gentlemen start out with the idea that you are going to get immediate results, in all probability you will be mistaken.
But there is a possibility that you may hit the bull's eye in a short time—that is, without waiting as long as some of us have had to do.

Of course, sports have contributed to the rose family; they have given us desirable varieties—Bride and Bridesmaid, White Killarney and two or three other Killarneys. It is a strange law governing the production of valuable things. You take the variety Madame Catherine Mermet. As nearly as I could find out, this variety sported into a climber in Oakland, Cal. This same variety had the same growth in France, 6,000 or 8,000 miles away, and nearly every variety of rose that has been forced has produced a climbing sport. We had last year a sport of Columbia that ran up eight or ten feet. Who can explain that? What is the law that governs those sports? The plantsman, the scientist cannot explain it. I have never heard any explanation that is satisfactory.

Sarah's Work.

Naming a rose is a great thing, and it is beset with difficulties. I think I have had a hundred applications to name America for some dear lady or some nice young miss, but I do not have any authority at Richmond. My sister runs the naming of the roses. She gets away from Miss This and Miss That, and gives them good names; she picked out Premier and Butterfly and Richmond and America. She deserves the credit.

Now I am trying for an ideal crimson, scarlet rose that will force in winter. There are four or five in sight. Of course, Milady, a beautiful rose, is grown by a few people. I wish we could grow it at Richmond. If you go to Poehlmanns' today, you will find Milady in splendid shape, and if we could grow it as they do we should like to have a good big lot of them. We have not succeeded, I do not know why, whether it is cultural ignorance or lack of something in the soil, or something else.

Fred Lemon is the luckiest fellow I ever knew. I was after him to go into cross-fertilization, and the first job he made he got those two roses, Angelus and Amelia Gude. The way the latter name originated was that Miss Gude took such a liking to it that we named the rose after her. Of course, she is a lovely little girl, and Fred Lemon could not say no. So the rose is nicely named

The Market.

The conditions at the various wholesale markets were not so good as one would like to see them. Stock is more than equal to requirements. The retailers say trade is not any too brisk at present, as society has eased up on activities until after the holidays.

Conditions as to stock from our local growers largely depend upon the weather. If it continues clear, with plenty of sunshine, there is going to be a fine crop of roses and carnations and an excellent supply of late mums, which are holding on longer than in any previous years.

There was a splendid supply of excellent roses in all varieties daily all last week, with prices still under quotations at this time last year. The same condition prevails in carnations. Christmas prices on carnations will run all the way from $15 to $20 per hundred. Special grades in all varieties will, they say, run from $35 to $50 per hundred, with Beauties from $75 to $100 per hundred. Mums, if good, will demand a high price.

Prices on violets, sweet peas, valley, lilies, Paper Whites, calendulas, orchids and stevia will also go up a little from present quotations.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held a most interesting meeting Thursday afternoon, December 8, at the establishment at the Bourdet Floral Co.

This being the last meeting in the old year, the attendance was quite large and when President Rowe called the meeting to order, there were sixty members present, with all the officers in attendance. After the disposal of the usual preliminaries, the chair called for reports of all committees.

The trustees reported that the New Year's meeting, January 12, would be held in the salesrooms of the new wholesale commission house of the A. W. Gunz Wholesale Floral Co., and that a paper would be read by a member of the club, on "How a Successful Flower Show Should Be Managed," and, as we are going to stage a big show, this should be interesting to all members.

The committee in charge of the distribution of the ten "Say It with Flowers" slogan boards reported that all had been taken up. The committee was continued.

Several communications were read and ordered filed for future reference.

nig filed applications for membership. The committee on the applications of H. G. Frey and W. D. Augspurger reported favorably and the secretary on motion cast one ballot for the members present for their election.

Nine members paid ten cents each for failure to wear a flower during the meeting.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich., exhibited a display of late-flowering chrysanthemums, a vase each of December Beauty, a large white, scoring 84 points, and Adrian Pride, a large yellow, scoring 87 points. In anemone-flowered mums, Lida Thomas scored 85 points; Golden Lida Thomas, 85 points, and Loyalty, 75 points. The judges were F. J. Fillmore, George Pring and D. S. Geddis.

J. F. Ammann, president of the St. Louis Flower Show Association, was called upon by the chair for a talk on the flower show to be staged next November, which greatly interested all present and all present pledged their hearty support for its success.

Mr. Fillmore's usual motion prevailed that a rising vote of thanks be extended Mr. Bourdet and his sons for the afternoon's entertainment.

invited to partake of refreshment and cigars by Mr. Bourdet, after which all inspected the new range of glass and the fine Christmas stock. These were voted up-to-date. The last meeting in 1921 will be long remembered by those who attended.

Flower Show Association.

The meeting and dinner given by the St. Louis Flower Show Association to the florists of St. Louis and vicinity took place Tuesday evening at the Planters' hotel, where 150 were seated, including many ladies. All were seated in the banquet room at 7 p. m., and the committee in charge had all arrangements perfected in a most pleasing style.

After dinner President J. F. Ammann, acting as toastmaster, opened the meeting with well pointed remarks touching on the proposed fall flower show for 1922, during which the Chrysanthemum Society of America will hold its annual meeting and exhibition, and asked for the support of all in the trade for its success. He asked all of those who would work for its success to rise; not one remained seated. Mr. Ammann show and inviting the Chrysanthemum Society of America to meet in St. Louis in 1922. The club would support the show.

Theodore Miller, president of the Retail Florists' Association of St. Louis, was the next speaker, making a pleasing talk in which he stated that the members of the retail association would do all in their power for the success of the show.

George H. Pring, president of the St. Louis Association of Gardeners, was next called upon and said that the members of his association were ready to put their shoulder to the wheel for the success of the show.

The wholesalers present, H. G. Berning, W. C. Smith, Frank A. Windler, A. Gumz, G. H. Angermueller and D. S. Geddis, pledged their hearty support in anything asked of them for the show's success.

Louis A. Hoerr, of the hall committee, read a report of the various halls available in which the show could be held gested November 8 to 10 for next year's show.

Other speakers called upon were H. W. Endres, for the nurserymen; Fred C. Weber and Frank Gorly, retailers; L. P. Jensen, gardeners; H. C. Irish, Missouri State Horticultural Society, and L. Baumann, landscape gardeners. W. J. Pileher then moved that the appointment of the manager of the show and the twenty-two chairmen of subcommittees be left in the hands of President Ammann and the executive board. The motion was carried and the meeting adjourned, after which the room was turned over to the young folks and A. Beyer's jazz band for dancing, which kept up until midnight.

Gardeners' Annual Meeting.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners held its annual meeting December 7, at the municipal greenhouses. The attendance was large, when President George Pring called the meeting to order.

Secretary Schaff read his annual report, which showed the association in a healthy condition both financially and in number of members.

Then came the election of officers, which resulted in the reelection of President Pring, Vice-President John Moritz and Secretary Hugo Schaff. L. P. Jensen was elected to the office of corresponding secretary.

President Pring then called upon John Moritz, head of the municipal greenhouses, for a discussion on the growing of chrysanthemums, on which he is an authority. His talk greatly interested the members.

The fall flower show to be held next fall by the St. Louis Flower Show Association, next came up for a discussion, which resulted in a motion to endorse the show and pledge full support.

The New Year's meeting will take place January 3, 8 p. m., at the same place.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Growers' Publicity Association met Tuesday afternoon, December 6, in publicity headquarters. In the absence of Chairman Bourdet, J. F. Ammann presided over the meeting. Bills to the amount of $1,000 were ordered paid, these covering advertising for the month of November. Contracts were let for 20,000 lines in the four daily newspapers to cover the season's advertising. Advertising Manager W. A. Henry Heitmann, who has been doing all his business at his house on Labadie avenue for the last few years, has opened a store, at the corner of St. Louis avenue and Sarah street, and reports a splendid run of trade since the opening.

Mrs. M. Rickards, formerly with Ostertag Bros., has branched out for herself and opened a flower store at the corner of St. Louis and Jefferson avenues.
Charles Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., owing to the health of Mrs. Johann, has offered his greenhouse establishment for sale, consisting of 15,000 feet of glass and 8-room residence and forty-two acres of land.

Those in the trade who were off on hunting trips were W. A. Rowe, Albert Kopp, Oscar May and Frank Windler. All returned with a fine lot of game.

The Bourdet Floral Co. has a house of 2,500 cyclamens in full bloom and another house of 3,000 poinsettias of fine

M. C. Wright, manager of the western branch of Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago, stopped off for a day, December 8, on his way for a month's vacation in southern Texas. Benjamin Bakker, of A. Hender-

The Retail Florists' Association met
Monday night, December 12. J. F.
Ammann was the speaker of the evening; his subject was the value of advertising from a retailers' standpoint and the great publicity given them by the St. Louis Flower Growers' Publicity Association.

The Florists' bowlers spent a most pleasant evening, December 7, and excitement ran high in the match between the Sweet Peas and Violets, in which the Peas won the odd game. The Carnations defeated the Daisies, and the Roses did the same to the Orchids. Ow-

The Market.

Last week the market was only fair. Chrysanthemums were cleaned up, but a glut of Paper Whites was on hand to take their place. There is no flower harder to handle than Paper Whites when there are too many, and this has been the case with the market for the last two weeks. Roses, mums or carnations, when the market is overstocked, can be disposed of at some price to the street fakers, but these merchants have no use for the Paper Whites. With Christmas just two weeks off, the supply would indicate that the growers are letting them come as nature dictates and are not holding them back. This may make them scarce when the demand becomes abnormal.

The carnation crop bids fair to take care of the demand, but roses are going to command a good price. This will make the demand for carnations greater. Poinsettias are going to be in good supply, both cut stock and pans. Cyclamens will be scarce. From what I can learn, made-up baskets of plants will be the principal item of growing stock that will be offered this year. The retailers have been going over the ranges for the last several weeks, gathering up whatever stock they could find suitable for this made-up work. Berried holly is going to be scarce. Wherever you can find any, do not fail to secure it.

Grow More Smilax.

Several weeks ago in this letter I made the above suggestion, saying that it would be a good crop for some live growers to specialize in. This idea was not original with me. I have been asked for cultural methods, what fertilizer was best to use, etc. I wish to say that when I made this suggestion it was made from a market standpoint. I have not been growing it for a number of years. Some years ago we grew some of it, but at that time we transplanted it from 3-inch pots into solid beds of good loam, with plenty of rotten cow manure, and fed it, as it grew, with plenty of liquid cow manure water. Smilax, as I remember, will burn easily, so care should be used in applying any of the fertilizers. We always considered it an easy crop; like Topsy, with ordinary care, it just grew.

The Percentage Plan.

The committee having in charge the inauguration of the percentage plan for the club had luncheon at the Hotel Rennert, December 8. After dinner it formed teams and canvassed the florists of the city and surrounding country to get them to sign up, with splendid success. Enough signers have been secured to perfect the organization, which will be done at an early date. The committee will be in a position to make a full report at the next club meeting.

Robert L. Graham, Jr., has been appointed district representative of the F. T. D., for Maryland. This district is known as No. 28, and the association is to be congratulated on appointing such a live wire to succeed Charles F. Feast. The goal in Maryland is, every retail dealer a member before the 1922 business meeting, but by the way the F. T. D. is being talked in this town, it is not going to be hard to accomplish this purpose.

John J. Perry was confined to his home for a few days last week. It's not often that he gets sick. He is now back on the job again, however.

John Cook will spend the winter at home. Since the death of Mrs. Cook he has not taken his usual trip to Fla., and he misses the balmy climate of that state. Being a sufferer with neuritis, he is obliged to stay indoors. This, to a man with Mr. Cook's love for nature and the outdoors, is hard.

E. Gurney Hill, of Richmond, Ind., who was in Philadelphia last week as a guest of the Florists' Club of that city, stopped off on his way to Washington to shake hands with some old Business during the last two weeks has been somewhat slow, but, as the holidays approach, a big change is looked for.

Pot plant offerings this year are not quite up to standard, but an excellent crop of roses, carnations and miscellaneous cut flowers is looked for.

Business may not be so profitable as last year, but there is no question that everything offered will clean up in fine shape.

Various Notes.

Joseph Stark, who recently opened a flower store at Price, Utah, reports business as being better than expected. Mr. Stark has had twenty-two years' experience in the business and, with the outlay he has, should build up a good trade.

The Miller Floral Co., at Farmington, will have a bumper crop of roses for Christmas. The plants are in better shape than ever before and, if weather conditions continue favorable, it looks like a record cut. G. J. B.

TORONTO, ONT.

Monday night, December 5, the Toronto Retail Florists' Club entertained the growers at a dinner-dance in the Pompeian room of the King Edward hotel. It has been customary to entertain the growers at least once a year. There was a short program and during and following the dinner there was dancing. There were representatives present from all the prominent growing concerns and the spirit of good fellowship prevailed.

G. M. Geraghty was a recent visitor to Chicago.

J. J. Higgins has been confined to his home for a few days with blood poison-

Carl Grobba had a wonderful show of plants last week. On Wednesday and Thursday, December 7 and 8, his green-houses were the Mecca of the trade, while on the following Friday the houses were thrown open to the public, with the tickets removed. There were potted plants, ferns and palms by thousands. Tea was served in the afternoons.

January 2 the electors of Mimico will vote on giving Carl Grobba a fixed assessment. He does not want to pay less taxes, but thinks they should be fixed at the present rate for a term of years. Mr. Grobba gives employment to about fifty people regularly and more in rush seasons. He has been offered sites on a railway siding by other municipalities, but the council of Mimico is unanimous in favor of having the people vote on giving him a fixed assessment, so as to keep the industry for Mimico.

S. A. Frost is distributing two car-loads of Christmas trees, which he has just received from his nursery and farm. General Rennie, president of Rennie Seed Co., did not make the grade at the recent elections. Running in a conserva- tive city, he was defeated by Mayor Church, by a small majority.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Although wholesalers say that their business is extra good for the season, retailers, in general, are complaining, but this is by no means unusual a week or two before a holiday. Outdoor stock was badly damaged by the wind storm, but indoor roses and other flowers are good and in ample supply. Poinsettias in quantity show the time of year and the great number of cyclamens and other Christmas plants give a holiday appearance to the stores. There are the usual all-around hopes and fears regarding the holiday business, but judging from the way in which the department and other stores are filled with buyers and the great crowds already on the streets, there is plenty of money being spent, and there is no reason why the florists should not get their share. The green goods men are busy with roping, wreaths and other decorative stock.

Unusual Weather.

The worst wind storm for many years occurred in this vicinity December 3, and it is lucky in the extreme that it did not, as is so often the case, follow a heavy rain. Had the ground been soaked with water, the damage would have been enormous. As it was, however, plants were badly damaged and much loss was caused by broken glass. Telephone and power lines in many places were put out of commission. Bushes were actually blown out of the ground; tough, upright, leafless shoots of bamboo, which present little surface to the wind, were twisted off in chunks and many trees were uprooted.

Various Notes.

W. B. Clarke, of San Jose, made one of his periodical visits to the city and vicinity last week, having driven down as usual and made other towns en route. Mr. Clarke is handling many lines, especially bulbs, imported and local-grown. He also has a good line of novelties and standards in nursery stock and reports business good. He says the demand for Spanish and Dutch irises is phenomenal this season.

The California Floral Co. is handling a line of prepared and dyed foliage that is most attractive. The colors are rich and the subjects well chosen. Desert holly is exceedingly pretty and in various colors. This plant apparently takes the dye well.

The store of S. Murata & Co. is always a busy place and the shipping trade here is exceptionally heavy now.

W. Armacost & Co. were unloading another carload of baskets last week. It is the policy of this firm to have every size and pattern in stock, so that when orders come in, they can be shipped without delay. It necessitates carrying a large stock, but they do an extensive business.

George Hall, of Geo. J. Hall & Co., says that the firm is opening a large number of new accounts this year from out-of-town points, many of them from people and towns never heard of before in the florists' business. With the shipping trade of this firm constantly on the increase, it looks as though this firm would have to seek larger quarters.

Everything in the trade, seems to be the goal of the E. C. Amling Co. New stock of all kinds is arriving at the busy store of this firm daily. The roses from Amling Bros., at Santa Ana, handled by this firm, are fine and are giving good satisfaction to the trade.

Wolfskill's & Morris Goldenson have opened a new store at 705 West Sixth street. This is in addition to their old store, where they have conducted a business for over twenty years. As noted recently, they will probably be forced out of their old location shortly, but some changes in the ownership have been made and Albert Goldenson says that there is still a possibility that they may remain.

Daniel Stathatos, of the Broadway Florist, reports a good decoration at the Ambassador hotel. That funeral work is brisk at all times, is apparent by a look in at the store. Mr. Stathatos has purchased a new Hudson six.

Hunter Graham, one of the decorators at the Alexandria Florist, and one of the best florists in the city, is putting a Christmas touch to all of his baskets and other effects now, and they are most attractive.

George Eischen reports a good time among the ducks on his recent trip.

Roy F. Wilcox & Co. are shipping some extra large trees of various pittosporums from the Montebello nurseries to Pasadena. Shipment is made by truck. The roses and heather now reaching the market from this well-known firm are of excellent quality, as usual.

Considerable damage was done to Gebhart Precht's greenhouses at Montebello by the recent wind storm, and also to the greenhouses of Robert H. Uesick on the Whittier road, although the latter place was not so badly damaged as the former.

Adams Nursery is a large number of trained specimens of Eugenia Hookeri in full fruit, the clusters of crimson-purple fruit being most attractive. Frequently only a small amount of fruit is seen, but in this case there is enough to make a most showy and attractive plant, aside from its foliage value. According to Mr. Nishida, some of the plants had recently been root-pruned and, in consequence, some of the fruit was dropping. On established plants, however, the fruit hangs firmly. In the greenhouses a fine batch of fancy kentia seedlings were noted, about eighty cases having been sown last spring.

Paul Ecke says that the severe wind damaged his poinsettias somewhat, even in sheltered Hollywood, but he is glad it happened when it did, as the damaged flowers will show now before the big shipments for Christmas go out. He will still have plenty for all comers.

H. R. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Cold weather has greatly reduced the outdoor stock, though it has done no harm to the violets, which are now plentiful and of excellent quality. The large chrysanthemums are practically gone and the medium-sized mums are not of particularly good quality, though they are commanding good prices. Pompon mums are fairly good, and they are expected to be in through the holiday season. Many of the growers have been pinching back their greenhouse stock for the holiday season. Roses, however, are now arriving in larger quantities than for some time past. These include Russell, Columbia, Hadley, American Legion and Ophelia. Carnations are becoming slightly more plentiful. Valley, orchids and gardenias are scarce. Holiday sprays and berries are in the market, with redwood sprays and the California toyon berries dominating. Cut poinsettias are not plentiful, but it is anticipated that there will be enough to take care of the holiday trade. Freesias are in, but not in any large quantity. On the whole, good stock is not plentiful and the market is still somewhat quiet.

Various Notes.

J. A. Axell finds that in spite of the Californian's love for the native toyon berries, there is a growing demand for English holly. To satisfy this, he has sent to British Columbia for his supply, which is large.

The San Francisco Coöperative Flower Market has a force of men busy making wreaths of redwood and other evergreen sprays.

The Growers' Floral Co. is cutting all the roses in season, including Butterfly. This firm, says Yukiechi Noda, is specializing in some new carnations of fine quality.

Enomoto & Co. are preparing to specialize in sprays of red California berries and redwood sprays.

The United Flower & Supply Co., like many of the growers, has been pinching back its roses and other stock for the holiday season.

The Alameda factory, of the Mas-Art Basket Works, is working overtime to keep up with the influx of orders, according to J. A. Axell, who is the San Francisco distributor for the firm.

When Marshal Foch visited San Francisco, there was a strong desire to "Say It with Fleur-de-lis." The young granddaughter of the late sugar king, Claus Spreckels, was to make the presentation. No one had fleur-de-lis, and there was a wild scramble to find the lilies that figure in the royal arms of France. Finally Mrs. Copeland, of the Misses Hannon store, produced fleur-de-lis from her Alameda acreage. Miss Irma Copeland made a bouquet that became famous, and the general smilingly received it, surrounded by a battery of cameras.

The California Industries Exposition, which ended December 12, was one of the most successful and most featured "short time" expositions ever held in San Francisco. In some respects it surpassed world's fairs given in the west. Florists took a certain pride in it, because Angelo Rossi, one of their number, was president of the board of managers and one of the chief organizers of the striking display of coast industries.

Joseph's is combining California's most featured products, fruit and flowers, in holiday boxes.

So many people stopped to look at the ball made of lily of the valley in Podesta & Baldocchi's window, that the sidewalk was blocked for part of the time this ball was on display. This piece, made for Mrs. Flood's ball, was four feet in height and nearly three feet in diameter. The ball was composed of one hundred and three dozen lilies of the valley, and the support and base were one solid mass of purple and yellow pansies.

Robert Newcomb, representing the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, passed through San Francisco recently, en route for the south.

San Francisco stores are ordering more floral and evergreen decorations than ever before, according to L. Capurro, of Avansino Bros.

A whole window of the Art Floral Co. is devoted to handsome baskets of California fruit, nuts, etc. For local delivery, these baskets are combined with flowers. Many of them, however, are being shipped east. The other window has recently been filled with orchids.

Mrs. Darbee, of Darbee's, says that the best copy for holiday advertising is to draw attention to the fact that one cannot buy a gift that looks like anything for less than $10 or $15, whereas, for $5 one can buy a potted plant or a basket of cut flowers that looks like real money.

Miss Isabella B. Lacy, who recently died in Oakland, where she grew flowers for the market, has left a will that is being discussed. The deceased, who was well known, decreed that her executor must destroy her pet horse, dogs and cats. The executor had the felines chloroformed, but he declines to execute the old race horse or the two dogs. "Anyone thinking that executing a will is a snap, has another thought coming,"

C. R. Wagenet, of the Oakland Flower Shop, has been doing a fine shipping business; but, owing to the frost and rain, he does not think there will be any more long-distance shipping of chrysanthemums. However, he looks for mums of fair quality for local use to last until Christmas. Mr. Wagenet reports considerable long-distance shipping of violets recently. He notes that carnations are much improved since greenhouse stock began to arrive.

H. Hayashi & Co. have five houses of cyclamens and will have a fine stock for Christmas. This firm considers the nursery business in good shape this year.

W. I. McDonald, 1931 Broadway, has been spending a good deal of time at the nurseries, but has also enjoyed a good store trade.

Mr. Seulberger, of J. Seulberger & Co., 418 Fourteenth street, has had a good trade. A number of large funerals have helped this business considerably. He has enjoyed an unusual amount of shipping to surrounding towns. Mr. Seulberger has been in the florists' business for forty-one years, and is as enthusiastic as ever. The way in which the trade has withstood the widespread business depression has aroused his enthusiasm. Speaking of the local whole-affected by a business depression. In spite of such optimism, one is hardly prepared for Mr. Thorsted's next statement. He says that his business has increased nearly thirty-five per cent in the last year, which must be admitted as being a remarkable showing.

The H. M. Sanborn Co. reports a remarkable seed and bulb business this year. This phase of the trade has been steadily growing in importance. SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Offerings of poinsettias, tulips and hyacinths featured the potted division of the market last week, and led to general inquiries among buyers as to probable Christmas prices.

The cut of mums continues plentiful, with the smaller stock showing good keeping qualities. Maud Dean is one of the most popular varieties showing at present and the reasonable prices have made pompons a favorite with buyers.

Roses are plentiful. Carnations are holding up well in everything but color. Late deliveries of violets have been a little off grade, according to most receivers.

There is much interest being manifested in holly. The northwestern crop this year is generally heavily berried and it will be large. California dealers have been securing Christmas trees by the carload in Washington lately and some cutters have encountered state officials through cutting their supply on prohibited public lands. California and Oklahoma mistletoe are being shipped in to augment the northwestern supply. Stores are using larger quantities of cedar roping this year than ever before.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. O. Hankins has been called to Portland by the illness of her mother. Upon the latter's recovery, she and Mrs. Hankins will go to southern California for the winter.

The Hollywood Gardens are receiving some notably fine Laddie carnations from the greenhouse. The demand for these has been excellent. General decorations, including those in mercantile establishments, and a heavy run on funeral work have featured the last week.

Felix Rosaia handled the decorations for the annual winter ball, the largest social event of the season, in a manner that attracted favorable press comments and the approval of those who saw the finished work. Steel blue and silver were the tones used throughout, these being produced by California eucalyptus leaves and pods, dipped in the blue, and magnolia leaves and greens dipped in silver. Blued pampas grass was used along the walls and the large wall mirrors were surrounded by broad frames of silvered magnolia leaves. In the supper

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

How to get down to the farmers' level in the matter of prices is puzzling seedsmen. Seeds are down, but overhead still is far above pre-war levels.

A FINAL dividend has been filed by the receiver for J. Bolgiano & Co., Baltimore, as noted under the heading, "Business Embarrassments," in this issue.

GENERAL RENNIE, president of the Rennie Seed Co., of Toronto, Ont., who was running for mayor at the recent elections there, was defeated by a small majority.

THE 1921 production of lespedeza seed is expected to be ten per cent less than that of last year. Reports indicate lower yields per acre in practically all producing sections.

THE catalogues for the southern trade are going into the mails in considerable quantities, with prospect of moderately good response, because of improved conditions in the cotton states.

NOTICE of the death of Everett E. Bruggerhoff, head of the defunct seed firm of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, who died suddenly December 6, appears in the obituary column of this issue.

MORRIS S. SMITH, formerly with W. W. Barnard Co., the Madson Seed Co., and, recently, Vaughan's Seed Store, has been appointed secretary and manager of the Oshkosh Seed Co., Oshkosh, Wis., in which Everette R. Peacock, Chicago, holds the principal interest.

THE seed trade finds little encouragement in the monthly sales reports published by the Chicago general mail-order houses. As an index to rural ability or inclination to spend money, the reports of reduced sales by Sears and Ward afford small hope of a big seed season soon to open.

THE first calendar for 1922 to arrive is that of Tromp Bros., Lisse, Holland. A handsome view of one of the firm's bulb farms at Lisse shows the single tulip, White Hawk, and the village in the background. To the sheet carrying this, perforated sheets bearing the calendar for each month are hand-tied with a bow of orange cord.

WISCONSIN again holds first place in canned pea production, with a 1921 output of 4,063,000 cases. This figure, however, is lower than that for 1920, which was 5,804,000 cases, the largest output on record. New York ranks second with more than one and a third million cases to her credit. The grand total of all the states is over 8,000,000 cases.

DENMARK has long occupied a high position among those countries which devote a considerable area to the production of seed crops; it is, therefore, interesting to find from official reports that during the present year there were in that country 1,500 acres of mangel; sugar beet, 2,441; Swede turnip, 1,922; English turnip, 2,132; carrot, 297; cabbage, 593; cauliflower, 109; other cabbage seeds, 257; other garden seeds, 319; red clover, 1,609; yellow trefoil, 1,124; other legumes, 1,186; orchard grass, 24,060; English rye grass, 3,585; Italian rye grass, 2,874; meadow fescue, 5,851; brome grass, 1,001; other grass seeds, 872 acres. This gives a total of 51,732 acres.

REPORTING SERVICE ENDED.

The government's reporting service for the seed trade ended with the issue of the Market Reporter for December 10. Henry C. Wallace, secretary of the Department of Agriculture, has issued this statement:

"Under a provision of the sundry civil act of March 4, 1921, government departments were required to suspend publication of all periodicals except those approved by Congress by December 1, 1921. A resolution empowering the congressional joint committee on printing to authorize the continuance or discontinuance of these periodicals, among them the Market Reporter, passed the Senate but did not come to a vote in the House before the adjournment of the last session of Congress. The Market Reporter will, therefore, be suspended beginning with the issue of December 10 until its continuance is authorized by Congress

WESTERN SEEDSMEN MEET.At Kansas City.

The midwinter convention of the Western Seed Dealers' Association was held Saturday, December 10, in the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo. About sixty delegates were in attendance. Fred Mangelsdorf, president, called the meeting to order at 10 a. m. After the usual routine was disposed of, Mr. Mangelsdorf made an address on "The Master Key," in which he briefly reviewed the work of the association for the last six months and launched into the essential qualifications of a successful business man. Character, the ability to master and handle details, conservation of energy, not only in himself but in his workers, and a broad outlook were named among the necessary equipment of a business man.

Charles Massie spoke on "Garden Seeds." Mr. Massie anticipates a satisfactory demand for seeds of this kind the coming year. He believes good results will follow, as the average householder will find pleasure and economy in planting a small garden.

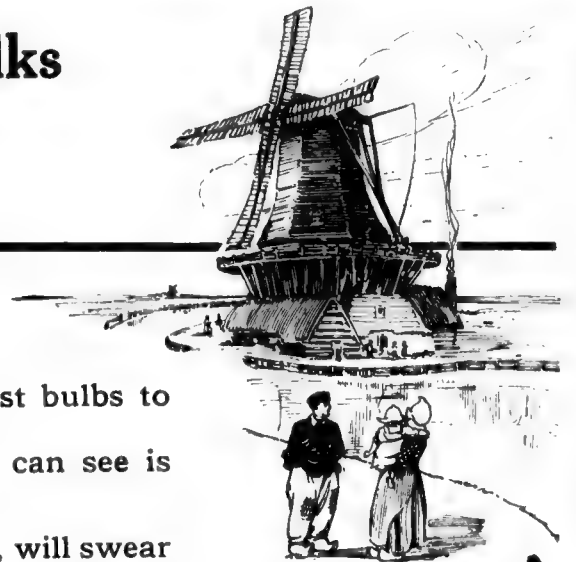

J. List Peppard, of the Peppard Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo., spoke on "Seed Conditions." The great service of the federal reserve bank system, not only to seed dealers but to various branches of business, was dwelt on by Mr. Peppard. The federal reserve bank was humorously referred to as Noah's ark in the present period of business adjustment, the different lines of business being likened to the animals carried in the ark.

Luncheon was served at 1 p. m. in the Doric room of the hotel.

Afternoon Program.

J. W. Perry, of the Commerce Trust Co., Kansas City, and Henry J. Waters, editor of the Weekly Kansas City Star and former dean of the Kansas State Agricultural College, were the speakers in the afternoon.

Mr. Perry said it would take at least a year's time for the farmer to pay back indebtedness and that only the practice of thrift and careful methods would put him on his feet. Mr. Perry lately returned from a visit to Europe. While there, he was impressed with the wonderful crops grown on small plots of ground. He said he was impressed with

on Bulbs

Isn't it so, that bulbs are just bulbs to some folks?

The only difference they can see is the difference in price.

Those same folks, however, will swear that their boy is better than their neighbor's.

You pin them down to why he's better, and they will finally say: "That boy just GREW up. We BROUGHT ours up."

It's the same with bulbs.

Some Holland bulbs grow up.

Others are BROUGHT up.

We sell the brought up kind.

How painstakingly we bring them up, we are going to tell you in these Windmill Talks.

Next one will be next week. It has a surprise for you.

the possibilities of an increase in the productivity of the land. He was also emphatic as to the need of conservation of soil fertility.

Dr. Waters spoke along the same line. The farmer had been particularly hard hit, he said, by the liquidating process. He will produce many crops this year at an actual cash loss, and will realize from their sale less than he paid in farm labor and seed. Of particular importance to the seedsmen was Dr. Waters' impression that the farmer was showing an unusual disposition to sow down more land to field seeds and plant only as much grain and cereal crops as the man himself could care for.

The visiting members were guests of the Kansas City seed dealers at dinner in the Hotel Savoy at the close of the meeting. J. E. K.

are now so well known and are in such great demand that you, as a grower or florist, cannot afford to be without them. No other strains are now so popular, nor can you secure so many beautiful blooms from any other. They always bring top prices in the markets.

Heretofore there has not been a sufficient supply to afford growers a share in their great sale.

*I offer you a through the School Garden Association, was made by J. Keur, of Hillegom, Holland, who has recently become a resident of New York.

Mr. Keur was impressed by a published account describing the large response of the schools to a call for bulb culture by Dr. Gustave Straubenmuller, president of the School Garden Association. Mr. Keur immediately offered to duplicate free the narcissus order with daffodils. The orders for narcissus bulbs by boroughs were as follows: Manhattan, 23,262; Brooklyn, 9,673; Bronx, 7,081; Queens, 4,844; Richmond, 406.

A school narcissus show will be held by each school whenever the principal finds the plants in his school in the best condition for exhibition. The School Garden Association will give to each school holding a narcissus show three of its new medals, one silver and two bronze.

DUTCH BULB SEASON.

Reviewing the salient points of the past season in bulbs, Tromp Bros., of Lisse, Holland, state:

"French bulbs were shipped a little later than the previous year, owing to the well known deadlock. However, we were able to execute orders in the best quality and required quantities, before the middle of July. Roman hyacinths were scarce and prices high, making the article almost useless for the trade. This fact undoubtedly accounts for the enormous sale of prepared hyacinths, of which the variety L'Innocence is taking a great deal the place of the white Roman.

"Contrary to last year's experience, when at the end of the season a surplus was noticeable, this year ended unexpectedly with a clean-up in almost every line and, with a few exceptions, firm prices.

"Hyacinths held their own up to the end, although a price adequate in view of their high cost of cultivation could not be realized, which fact is due to the still unsatisfactory eastern trade.

"Tulips sold out well at fair prices, except the varieties La Reine and Murillo, of which a good quality was still on hand late in the season. The best quality of the leading Darwins soon showed an advantage in price, while breeders, offered at more reasonable prices, found a ready market.

"Daffodils and narcissi sold out entirely, with increased prices for some leading varieties. Golden Spur and poetaz narcissi could not meet the demand, and late orders had to be refused.

"Taken all around, the season closed favorably for the bulb trade. The usefulness of the article to the trade was again shown by the firm demand on the part of the consumers, while on the part of the producers a lively activity was exercised."

Madison, Wis.—A new company is being formed here to grow cut flowers and potted plants for the wholesale and retail trade. Ralph Ogden, R. F. D. No. 1, is devoting his entire time to organizing this new firm.

 - ZVOLANEK ROSE, the famous bright pink, at $10.00 per pound.

No order of less than 1/2 pound of each at these prices accepted.

All these varieties are not only winter-flowering, but they will produce more and better flowers out of doors than the old late Spencers, because they bloom 3 to 4 weeks earlier, before the hot weather sets in. Plant after the Chrysanthemum and get full crop for Easter. Plant in cool frames or outdoors just before the freezing begins and get full crop in May for Decoration Day. Plant out of doors in the spring and they will bloom early in June.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

JOHN BELLARDI, of Berkeley, Cal., is conducting a business under the name of the American Nursery.

THE Ingleside Nurseries, Macon, Ga., of which R. P. Klose was the proprietor, has gone out of business.

FIVE greenhouses were completed last week for the D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill. The A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, erected them.

A PETITION in bankruptcy has been filed by the Narrows Nursery Co., Marine avenue and Orchard street, Brooklyn, N. Y. The liabilities of the firm totaled $8,715 and the assets amounted to $2,700.

FRANK PETERSON, a life member of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society, who conducted a nursery for eighteen years at Bancroft, Neb., is now undertaking the conduct of a hardy perennial garden and a small fruit farm at Irma, Alberta. Mr. Peterson expects to be in the market with his stock in the spring. He sold his nursery business in Nebraska three years ago.

STATING that practically all fall orders for perennials have gone out, the Weller Nurseries Co., Holland, Mich., reports, "Our fall business was fine, in a way far beyond our expectations. An extra heavy demand is prevailing this season for hardy plants for forcing, such as delphiniums, Canterbury bells, bleeding hearts, chelone (pentstemon), myosotis, etc. The demand for perennials and gladioli for spring plantings indicates a wonderful spring trade in these lines.

NURSERY STOCKS COMING.

Heavy shipments of Manetti and fruit tree stocks arrived last week. On the steamer Rotterdam, which arrived at New York from the Dutch port December 5, were the following consignments:

ILLINOIS NURSERYMEN.

Executive Committee Meets.

The executive committee of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association held an important meeting in Chicago December 10. The convention of this association will be held in Chicago, January 19 and 20. The hotel will be decided upon a little later. The executive committee is increasing the effort to put into effect a "standard practice service," as outlined at the last convention. Any nurseryman outside of the Illinois association who is interested or who desires to cooperate can obtain full information by writing the secretary, J. A. Young, Aurora, Ill.

The executive committee formulated a plan of cooperation with the planting service bureau, now being conducted by F. F. Rockwell. The secretary was directed to secure from members of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association the names of the newspapers and forward them to Mr. Rockwell; also, Mr. Rockwell is to forward to the association advance copies of the articles and the members of the association will undertake to see that the articles are published in the various papers.

DAMPING-OFF OF CONIFERS.

Loss of Seedlings in Nurseries.

Most nurserymen who propagate their own stock have had occasional unpleasant experiences with the damping-off of seedlings. This is especially true of nurserymen who grow large quantities of conifers; the loss from the disease in the growing of deciduous stock is relatively small. The trouble is not confined to any one or two narrow regions. Reports received from widely separated states, even from districts which might be expected to be exempt on account of the comparative dryness of their soil and climate, indicate the wide scope of the operations of the damping-off fungi.

Moreover, a considerable proportion of the supposedly poor germination of seed is now believed to be due to the depredations of these same fungi. In other words, the fungi sometimes begin their destructive work when germination is only in its first stages.

A bulletin entitled "Damping-off in Forest Nurseries," recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, is valuable for its scientific confirmation of some commonly accepted ideas on the subject, rather than for the disclosure of many facts hitherto unknown.

Four Types of Damping-off.

The bulletin, which was written by Carl Hartley, a noted plant pathologist, enumerates four types or phases of damping-off: First, germination loss, when the radicles are killed soon after the seeds sprout and before the seedling can appear above ground; second, "normal" damping-off, when the seedling is killed by fungi invading either the root or underground stem, after the seedling has appeared above the soil, but before the stem has begun to harden; third, late damping-off, which includes cases of the root-rot type occurring only after the seedling stems have started to become woody and the cortex has begun to shrivel; fourth, top damping, when the parasite attacks the cotyledons (seed leaves) or upper part of the stem, sometimes before the seedling breaks through the soil.

Of these four types of damping-off, the first two usually are the most formidable. As already stated, the first type, designated as germination loss, is highly important as affording a partial explanation of many cases of poor germination. Late damping-off, the third type, says the bulletin, is rarely as serious as the normal type of damping off, as the more advanced seedlings frequently outgrow the injury caused by the fungi, and recovery takes place by laterals. "Top damping," the bulletin continues, "is only of importance in cases of excessive and unusual atmospheric moisture; in the middle west it has proved relatively insignificant."

Conditions that Foster Fungi.

As the bulletin states, it is a common conviction, among men who have had experience with seedling diseases, that "damping-off is favored by thick seeding, by much organic matter, especially by poorly rotted manure in the soil, and by excessive moisture in the air and soil." It is also believed, though not with as general agreement, that "high temperature favors the disease."

The author of the bulletin, though not giving positive assent to these prevailing opinions, says that they seem to be sustained, to a greater or less extent, by experiments conducted under his supervision. With reference to thick seeding, he says that "heavier losses have been found in drill-sown beds than in those sown broadcast, presumably for the reason that with equal numbers of seed per square foot of seed bed the seedlings are much closer together in seed drills than in broadcast beds, and thus the spread of the mycelium of parasites from one seedling to another is facilitated."

While considering soil conditions, it is well to note that experiments seem to prove conclusively that acidity of the soil, though unwholesome in a general way for many kinds of plants, "is not favorable to damping-off." In fact, the writer of the bulletin considers the application of a certain chemical acid one of the best methods—perhaps the best method—of combating the disease, and he adds, "Conifers are apparently especially tolerant of acid treatment." He is inclined to think, indeed, that some conifers are more than tolerant of the acid—they actually enjoy it—for he suggests that "the apparently salutary influence of soil acidity in decreasing the damping-off of some of the conifers may be exerted in the direction of increasing the resistance of the host rather than of inhibiting the parasites."

Methods of Control.

Before giving his special recommendation of the acid treatment, the author discusses, with varying degrees of favor or condemnation, some of the other methods that have been used in attempting to control the disease. Surfacing with dry sand "cannot always be counted on," he says, "to give any measurable advantage over untreated beds." "Making the upper part of the bed, to a depth of several inches, of recently dug subsoil," though apparently an effective expedient so far as tested, "is rather expensive in large-scale work and, under some conditions at least, undesirable because of the poor subsequent growth on such soil." Sterilization by steam or hot water is considered worthy of further trial at any nursery where fuel and the needed equipment are cheap. "Copper sulphate solutions have been used on pine seed beds, at the time of sowing, with considerable success at some nurseries," but with difficulty in avoiding injury to the pines. "Treating seed beds with ordinary Bordeaux mixture is probably worth further tests in various amounts of application." Zinc chloride "is more expensive and apparently less dependable than copper sulphate."

The advantage of thin sowing has already been mentioned. Treatment of the seed itself with mercuric chloride or with copper sulphate is said to be of little avail, since "there is no reason to believe that seed-carried infection is of any importance in coniferous seed beds."

In Favor of Sulphuric Acid.

Finally the author institutes a comparison between formaldehyde and sulphuric acid as disinfectants and gives judgment in favor of the acid—not for indiscriminate use for all sorts of plants, but principally for conifers. On this point he says: "Both the acid and copper sulphate treatments which have been found useful in pine seed beds are of very doubtful value for most hosts other than conifers, as the angiosperms on which observations have so far been made are too easily injured by the disinfectants. The weeds in the nurseries have been injured or entirely kept from appearing by treatment which caused no injury to the pines. The decrease in the number of weeds as a result of the use of acid is itself sufficient at a number of nurseries to pay the entire cost of the treatment."

His main objection to formaldehyde is "its tendency to kill dormant seed. The length of time which must be allowed to elapse between treatment and sowing in order to avoid this killing varies with conditions. Formaldehyde is more expensive than sulphuric acid and seems on the whole to have been less effective in disease control."

He advises, however, that care be taken to avoid the use of the acid in excessive quantities, as "the acid on a few soils has caused injury to radicles," but he believes that this injury "was due to unnecessarily large applications of acid and that the trouble can be eliminated by determining by test the minimum quantity of acid which will be reasonably effective in each locality. If this can be done, it should establish the acid treatment as the most profitable method which has so far been extensively tested."

The author emphasizes the fact that "no treatment applied after germination begins can have the maximum value in controlling the disease, because the damping-off parasites frequently, if not usually, do part of their work before the seedlings appear above the soil. Furthermore, any treatment at all effective against the disease is almost certain to hurt the seedlings if applied after the seed starts to sprout."

The disappointing feature of the bulletin is, that it contains no description of the method to be followed in applying the sulphuric acid. A detailed account of this operation may be found, however, in another bulletin, No. 453, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture in 1917, under the title, "The Control of Damping-off of Coniferous Seedlings."

The Market.

Last week business showed some signs of awakening, especially as regards holiday plants and novelties. The advance offerings of greenery, roping, wreaths, boughs, etc., have come in large supply and at slightly reduced prices, as compared with last year. Potted plants include cyclamens, begonias, cherries, rubbers, ferns, palms, evergreens, box, peppers, dracaenas, genistas, aspidistras, bougainvilleas, calendulas, cinerarias, araucarias and others. One of the features of the Christmas offerings this year is the increasingly large number of bulbous plants in bloom. Fancy dishes with narcissi, pans of tulips, hyacinths and lilies, as well as pots with single plants, furnish great variety and pleasing color to the stores. Prices are also unusually reasonable, especially for holiday selling.

Roses, carnations, bouvardia, calendulas and the last arrivals of the chrysanthemums furnish the staples for the general market, at prices that are within the reach of everyone desirous of a few cut flowers or more imposing bouquets. A few weddings and social gatherings have given a slight impetus to the demand, but it is to funeral work dealers turn for the greatest activity.

Bowers, Johnston Bros. and others had several orders for the same funeral.

Scott the Florist has been elected a member of the Providence Chamber of Commerce.

Charles Smith made a business trip to Worcester and vicinity last week, in the interests of the Eastern Wreath Mfg. Co., of this city.

Macnair, Florist, has been making extensive alterations at his store, corner of Broad and Chestnut streets. A new plate glass front, the entire length of the store on Chestnut street, has been put in, as well as a new entrance on the same side.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was in Boston last week, looking for novelties.

William B. Hazard was one of the guests at the sixty-eighth annual banquet of What Cheer Lodge of Masons last week.

Because of the extensive damage done to fruit and shade trees and vines and shrubs by the recent storm of sleet and wind, all of the forestry concerns are working hard in making repairs. It is estimated that the damage will exceed $150,000. The damage was especially severe in the northwestern section of the state.

Kinder, of Bristol, had the wedding bouquets and decorations, both church and house, for the Ingraham-Easterbrook wedding in that town.

W. H. M.

NEWPORT, R. I.

John J. Sullivan and Michael Doyle have been serving as grand jurors in the Superior court for Newport county.

Anton Christensen, for many years one of the leading landscape gardeners of this city, has gone into business for himself, having purchased a retail candy, tobacco, ice cream and newspaper store.

Eugene S. Hughes, for several years superintendent of the public parks of this city, died at his home here November 29. He had been in failing health for some time.

At the annual meeting of the Newport County Farm Bureau, held at Portsmouth last week, John B. Urquhart and Alexander MacLellan were elected members of the board of directors.

The Cream of the Lists

are my specialty. I have tried them nearly all, but have retained only the kinds that are best for the commercial grower. My Mums were widely recognized as the best offered on the Chicago market this past season and sold readily even when the market was most crowded. If you don't grow all the varieties listed here, you need them to cover the season. My stock is strong, clean, healthy and vigorous. Send me your order now, as I shall propagate only as many as I can send out of absolutely first-class quality.

THE VARIETIES ARE LISTED IN THE ORDER OF THEIR BLOOMING.

Wm. H. Chadwick

	Rooted Cuttings, per 1000
Golden Queen —The best yellow for early October, maturing about the 10th. Same color as Golden Glow, fine incurved form and double from any bud	$35.00
October Queen —Pure white, large size, maturing October 15 to 20; exceptionally fine stem and foliage	40.00
Early Frost —A very good early white to follow Smith's Advance; pure white, incurved	35.00
Richmond —Bright, golden yellow. A perfect type of commercial mum. The variety is noticeable for its fine form, perfect fullness, its silk-like finish, and the perfect uniformity on the bench. It is absolutely free from culls	35.00
Nagiroc, or Golden Champion —Fine, large exhibition variety; color, deepest glowing orange bronze; every petal reflexing, showing the color to the best advantage. Every bud makes a splendid flower; stem and foliage perfect; height, 5 feet. Any bud after August 15. Certificated C. S. A.	35.00
Alice Day —An ideal commercial variety, flowering October 10 to 20; color, purest white, with no poor buds; medium-sized foliage, which permits of rather close planting; one of the most perfectly formed varieties ever introduced	35.00
Marigold —A monster yellow; flower unsurpassed, either in size or color, in its season; must be secured on an early bud	35.00
Col. Appleton —Still one of the best yellows for commercial and exhibition use	35.00
Corporal Piper —Immense yellow on the type of Col. Appleton, but larger and better in color and growth; stem and foliage ideal; Corporal Piper is assured of a hearty welcome from growers looking for a really fine yellow; crown bud any time after August 20; height 5 feet	45.00
Mrs. Leslie Davis, or Pink Turner —Absolutely identical with Turner in every respect save color, which is clear lavender-pink. The growth and habit are a duplicate of the parent and no other description is necessary; height 5 feet	45.00

	Rooted Cuttings, per 1000
William Turner —A decided incurved of purest white; fine form and a strong grower, with clean foliage; semi-dwarf	$35.00
Delight —An immense reflexed pink that was awarded the certificate of the C. S. A., scored 92 points; color, clear, bright rose; size enormous; stem stiff and able to support the flower perfectly; any bud after August 15; height 3½ to 4 feet	40.00
President Everitt —Color, very unique chamois buff; when first opening the petals are very closely incurved, forming a perfect ball, 27 inches in circumference; as the flower develops the center petals open outward and show considerable of the bronzy-crimson reverse; very dwarf, robust grower; bud August 15 onward; height 3½ feet	40.00
Wells' Late Pink —One of the finest things sent out in its color in many years, flowering from November 10 onward; crown bud after August 25	35.00
Major Bonnaillon —A fine yellow, easy of cultivation; incurved form; still the standard mid-season yellow	35.00
White Bonnaillon —Incurved white; still grown in quantity	35.00
Wm. H. Chadwick —Large, incurved white, sometimes shaded pink	35.00
White Seidewitz —White sport of the popular Seidewitz, resembling it in every respect except color, which is a pure white; this variety should rank, as does its parent, as one of the best varieties for Christmas blooming	45.00
Seidewitz —A beautiful late, incurved, bright pink, maturing from Thanksgiving to early December; surpasses all late pinks we have grown	40.00
Harvard —Japanese reflexed; very dark crimson; in perfection November 15 or later; the best red yet introduced; double from any bud	35.00
Thanksgiving Pink —Baur & Steinkamp's new pink; one of the best commercial pinks in existence; clean, healthy grower; a flower which sells itself	50.00

The Cream of the Pompons

Pompons

are indispensable, but it makes a lot of difference what varieties one grows. I have tried and discarded scores of varieties.

of the lists.

These are the varieties it pays me best to grow---and they will pay you. Let me book your order for rooted cuttings now, as I shall propagate only as many as I can send out of absolutely first-class quality.

THE VARIETIES ARE LISTED IN THE ORDER OF THEIR BLOOMING.

Clemencia

	Rooted Cuttings, per 1000		Rooted Cuttings, per 1000
Mrs. H. H. Crane —Particularly striking in color, a brilliant mahogany with golden reverse. This is one of the very best of early flowering pompons. It is a strong, clean grower with good foliage. It has an abundance of buds that open practically at one time. An especially fine variety.....	$40.00	Mrs. Henry Vincent —An exquisite shade of fawn and bronze with salmon-pink shadings; this variety is very strong in growth and the foliage is perfect in every way.....	$40.00
Firelight —Brilliant carmine shaded with scarlet; in perfect condition to cut October 1; one of the choicest varieties we have; very productive.....	40.00	Eugene Langaulet —Best yellow anemone for commercial growers	40.00
Anna L. Moran —The color is splendid, a brilliant flame-scarlet, so vivid as to be easily the most striking flower in the entire collection. The flowers are nicely divided on the stem without disbudding and the growth, foliage and stem are all that can be desired; the individual flowers on this pompon are large, on the order of the Doty type, and it is worthy of note to the commercial growers that this variety in a glutted market brought 50c per spray, wholesale price.....	40.00	Hilda Canning —A very attractive bronze, of the small-flowered section. Very striking and desirable	30.00
Fire Bird —Can be disbudded; a color by itself; very bright red, strong, upright growth and productive	40.00	Mrs. Frank Ben —The very best Thanksgiving bronze, shading to fine red; every florist wants some of this grand late variety.....	30.00
Lillian Doty —Flowers beautiful shell pink; best grown to several leads and disbudded to one bloom; strong, upright growth.....	35.00	Clemencia —Deep pink, shading to a deeper pink in the center cluster; this latter is very prominent, since it is just crowded with petals and reaches across the flower about 4 inches; petals very crisp and showy	40.00
Adelaide —A splendid deep, rich mahogany; one of the earliest to develop, being ready to cut by October 10; strong, healthy grower and a desirable variety in every way; about 4 feet high.....	40.00	Godfrey's Perfection —Resembles Garza, being the same size and pure white, but is a better shipper, having four or five rows of ray florets instead of one; matures better for Thanksgiving and is one of the best recent introductions; dwarf, making excellent pot plants.....	35.00
Frances Huckvale —Gardenia white, with a creamy shaded center; far in advance of Queen of the Whites or any other pompon. An exquisite variety to use for cut flowers, being particularly valuable also for florists' made-up work.....	40.00	Sunshine —Deep yellow in color, firm and fresh for Thanksgiving without any holding back and remains in perfect condition, if desired, for two weeks longer; should be partially disbudded, otherwise the perfectly formed flowers will be too crowded	40.00
Iva —Pure amber, fimbriated petals, medium size....	30.00	Quinola Improved —Clear orange yellow, excellent form and good size, an improvement over its popular parent	35.00
Mrs. Buckingham —Midseason pink. Has proved itself one of the best varieties for cutting or market purposes ever introduced. It fills all the requirements of an ideal market single.....	30.00	Source D'Or —Also known as Golden Feather; a wonderful variety when grown in sprays.....	40.00
Pink Sport of Buckingham —Superior in every respect	40.00	Mrs. Godfrey —Late, light pink, very finest for Thanksgiving; a strong grower and used in large quantity; a worthy running mate for Mrs. Buckingham	30.00
Madge —Very perfect in form, golden yellow; same shade as Golden Harvest and the better of the two	35.00	Becky McLane —A small bronze, but richly colored and very popular. It is a strong, upright grower and makes good single plants. The stems are stiff and straight	35.00
		Mrs. Mazey —Bronze sport of Godfrey.....	40.00
		Annabell —Wine colored sport of Godfrey.....	40.00

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING WITH CHEMICALS.

Do you know of a chemical substance to be mixed with ashes or cinders, which would give satisfactory results for heating purposes? How would a mixture of sulphuric acid, oxalic acid, saltpeter or nitrate and common salt, mixed in small proportions with ashes, work? I should appreciate a reply. O. W.—Minn.

There are no chemical mixtures which can be used economically for heating purposes. The various nitrates, such as saltpeter (potassium nitrate) and sodium nitrate, burn with an intense heat, but at $75 per ton for the latter, and considerably more for the former material, it is impossible to see how they could be economically used. There is also no way in which a regular heat could be secured.

When sulphuric acid is added to a great variety of materials a violent heat results, but this takes place at the moment the union is made, and is soon over, so that it would not seem a promising method of heating a greenhouse. Besides, the use of sulphuric acid, or any of the other chemicals mentioned, would have an injurious effect upon the boiler.

A suggestion along this line would be to use some of the cheaper petroleum products, mixed with muck and perhaps with cinders, as fuel. It might be possible to mix them in small quantities and use in a loose form, from day to day, or they could be made into briquettes and stored.

UPHILL VS. DOWNHILL PIPING.

I have observed that your heating expert advocates putting the highest point of the flows, in a hot water system, near the boiler. You are, of course, aware that there are hundreds of miles of hot water systems in the greenhouses of America today which have the highest point of the flow at the farthest end of the greenhouse. I will be piping a house in the near future and should appreciate an explanation of the reason why the system with the highest point in the flows near the boiler is preferable.

D. R.—Neb.

While it is true that water will circulate fairly well in a hot water system in which the highest point is at the end of the house farthest from the heater, and also that many houses are piped in that way, there are at least two good reasons for locating the highest point as close to the heater as possible.

The first reason is largely a matter of convenience. This method of running the flow pipe, or pipes, makes it possible to connect the expansion tank with the highest point in the system, and thus, not only do away with the use

Good Judgment in Buying a Boiler

C. H. Totty

For many years C. H. Totty has used Kroeschell Boilers. He expresses great satisfaction with the service of his boilers and highly commends the efficiency of Kroeschell Boilers in greenhouse heating.

Good judgment based on experience is what makes successful business and, naturally, the more capable a man is of using good judgment and the greater his power of utilizing his experience and the experiences of others in exercising his judgment, the greater will be the success of his business.

It is impossible to believe that the judgment of a man that is responsible for the establishment of a large, permanently successful greenhouse business is anything but good. It is sensible to let the judgment of the big men in the flower business guide you in making decisions for your own flower business.

Merit alone is responsible for the favorable opinion of Kroeschell Boilers that prevails among the largest and most successful growers. They select Kroeschell Boilers for their heating problems and recommend them for all growers, large and small. You can make no mistake by installing a boiler in your greenhouses that has gained the favor of men whose success in the greenhouse business qualifies them as experts in knowledge of greenhouse requirements.

What does a few thousand dollars mean to you?

You do not want to lose a few thousand dollars. You are always trying to increase your profits, and guarding against anything that may result in a loss. Yet, if you have no thermostat, you are overlooking one of the most important means of protecting your profits.

Careless employes, and many other causes, permit the temperatures in greenhouses to fall unnoticed and greatly harm or completely destroy large crops.

With the Standard Thermostat on guard day and night it is impossible for the temperature to fall too low without being noticed. As soon as the temperature gets near a point that is not safe the thermostat bell rings its warning, giving ample time to prevent damage.

Standard Thermostats can be connected so that the bell will ring at the grower's bedside, or any place he may choose. They are strongly made, hermetically sealed, making them safe from water. They are easy to put up, anybody can do it. Complete instructions are supplied with every instrument.

WHY WAIT?

Why wait until it is too late? Today your crops may be fine, almost ready for the market. Will they be in the same good condition tomorrow morning? Right now you should protect yourself against possible loss. Do not wait until the accident has happened, when only $10.00 or $15.00 will prevent it. Send us your check now for the style you want, or write for a booklet.

Standard Recording Thermometer

Growers who have once used Standard Recording Thermometers never want to be without them. Progressive growers who spare no effort in raising the highest grade stock use recording thermometers and know the great aid of a complete record of temperatures. As in all other businesses, nothing is more important in growing plants than having complete records. With a Standard Recording Thermometer you can know why stock was good or bad, as the case may be, as far as temperatures are concerned; and the records will be of invaluable assistance in growing the next crop. Your equipment is far from complete if you have no Standard Recording Thermometer.

The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal, which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with.

The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

of air valves, but avoid the bother of frequently testing them to make sure that the system is free from air.

The principal advantage of running the flow pipe downhill, after carrying it to the highest point in the system as quickly as possible, is that the circulation of the water in a hot water system depends upon the fact that cold water is heavier than hot water, and the greater weight of the cold water results in its traveling back through the returns, forcing the hot and lighter water in the boiler out into the flow pipes. The hot water does not rise naturally in the pipes, except as it is pushed out of the way by the heavier cold water. A hot water system is something like a wheel, supported so that it will swing freely. If of the same weight at all points, it will remain stationary, but if any portion of the wheel has more weight than the remainder of the wheel, it will revolve until the heaviest portion is at the bottom.

In a hot water system, the water in the pipes between the highest point of the system and the boiler on one side, and the water between the highest point and the boiler on the other side, will be balanced against each other. Everything else being equal, the tendency to circulate will be in proportion to the temperature of the water, which will really determine the weight of the water on the opposite sides of the highest point in the system. So far as the present question is concerned, the size and length of the pipes makes no difference, although the higher the point at which the water cools, the greater will be the tendency to circulate.

Now to return to the point in question, "Why is it better to have the highest point in the system near the heater?" The nearer it is to the heater, the less opportunity for the water to cool; if the flow runs uphill through the house, the amount of cooling will be increased and, as this will take place on the warm side of the system, it will tend to retard circulation.

Since the flow pipes are generally larger than the returns, the actual effect will not be great, but if the piping on both sides were of the same size and with the same number of feet, the circulation would be greatly impeded. Of course, the uphill system will circulate, but, for the reasons given above, it is advisable to run the flow pipes downhill.

In the earlier days of hot water heating, 4-inch cast iron pipes were used, and it was generally more convenient to run the flow pipes parallel to and on the same level or over the returns.

The downhill system has been used for more than thirty years and it is found equal to the uphill piping in every way, and superior in the points mentioned.

The Market.

The market has tightened up, as is usual at this time of year. Roses are bringing from $6 to $25 per hundred. Carnations are scarce and are commanding $6 per hundred. The demand has greatly improved, the supply cleaning up daily.

A few late chrysanthemums are appearing, but the great bulk has gone. Narcissi are in larger supply and sell at from $4 to $8 per hundred. Other flowers available are sweet peas at $2.50 per hundred, violets at $1.50 per hundred, calendulas and orchids. Calla lilies have been moving at $2 per dozen.

Various Notes.

Oscar Carlstedt is in the hospital, having undergone an operation for appendicitis.

Baur & Steinkamp have a house of exceptional poinsettias. This firm recently received an order from the British West Indies and, although it will take twelve days for the delivery to be made, this firm is confident that it can be accomplished through care.

Temperley's have a nice lot of potted cherries, Chatelaine begonias and obconica primroses for the holiday trade.

John Hartje has a new pink seedling carnation that is in fine form. He expects to put this on the market in 1924.

Henry Berning, of St. Louis, visited in the city last week.

The A. Wiegand's Sons Co. has an attractive window of artificial novelties, painted grasses, etc. These latter were tinted by the firm's new artists. Albin Schreiber, with this firm, has some elegant poinsettias and cyclamens for the Christmas trade.

John Heidenreich has good stevia and poinsettias.

Charles Randall has attractive late chrysanthemums, some of which are his own seedlings.

Elmer D. Smith displayed Vivian Martin, an attractive, small white chrysanthemum, with a tufted center, also Golden Lida Thomas and December Beauty, at the Indiana State Florists' Association meeting, December 6.

E. E. T.

Oakfield, N. Y.—J. J. and I. L. Bates, of the Bates Flower Shop, have signed a contract with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Chicago, for the erection of a greenhouse 32½x59 feet, in which carnations will be grown. This firm has added another large delivery car to its equipment. Mr. Bates reports that business was exceptionally good last week.

The Market.

Business continues to be satisfactory, with plenty of flowers to go around. Last week was the big week for mums, but these are in smaller supply now. There are large quantities of pompons to be cut yet. Roses are excellent and in good supply, as are also carnations. The weather is fine. In November all records for amount of rainfall were broken; over nine inches fell. The Ohio river at this place is above the flood point.

Various Notes.

Theodore Kuebler reports good business. He has cut about the largest mums, this fall, ever grown here. He is preparing for a good Christmas trade.

Mrs. J. C. Elsperrmann continues to be busy with funeral work. She has a good line of plants for Christmas, including Cleveland cherries, begonias, ferns, etc.

A visit to the Blackman Floral Co. greenhouses found everything in fine shape. The large stock of Christmas plants is in elegant condition. This firm will, also, have a good cut of roses and carnations.

The Lockyear Floral Co. has been shipping mums of fine quality to points south. This firm is preparing for a lively Christmas.

O. S. Smith reports a steady increase in his business. He is stocking up in anticipation of a good Christmas trade.

Royston & Fenton have a fine lot of pansies, grown outside, ready for Christmas for the wholesale trade. E. L. F.

CINCINNATI GROWERS MEET.

The monthly meeting of the Cincinnati district of the National Flower Growers' Association was held Wednesday night, December 7. The weather for the last three or four weeks has been unfavorable, so far as the florists are concerned, in the way of growing, but this did not prevent them from attending the meeting and there was a good attendance.

Considerable time was consumed on the subject of a constitution and by-laws that will most suit the needs of the Cincinnati district, but, in addition, various subjects of vital importance to the grower were discussed; namely, a remedy for the poor condition of the cyclamen crop in this section, fertilization, etc. It was also decided that in the future our monthly meetings will be held at the establishments of the various members, and Chairman R. Witterstaetter was honored by having the members select his place at which to hold their next meeting, Wednesday, January 4, at 2 p. m.

room each table carried one large candle, surrounded by silvered leaves and bright-colored flowers. The lighting throughout was furnished by a large number of candles. Among the listed hostesses was Mrs. Walter A. Moore. Owing to a recent death in her family, she was not present.

Kenney's Home of Flowers enjoyed another week of brisk business in funeral work, recent orders running heavily to large pieces. This shop is showing some fine Columbia roses.

A. B. Matthiesen reports a big crop of carnations coming on, with poor weather the only deterring factor at the present time.

B. E. Hammond reports active interest in the new wholesale house among retailers in nearby cities and some difficulty has been experienced in finding enough stock in some lines to fill orders. The large storeroom on Post street is perfectly arranged for a wholesale establishment, having a frontage of about forty feet and a depth of 100 feet, with opportunity for expansion.

Holiday shipments for the Seattle Fern & Moss Co. are being booked at a rate which insures a large gain over the 1920 totals.

Rosaia Bros. report a heavier cut of Ophelia roses at the greenhouse, with average amounts of Hadley, Butterfly and Columbia coming in as well. The greenhouses came through last week's floods in the valley with no damage to speak of, and all holiday stocks will be ready on schedule. There has been a good general run of decorations of late and advance holiday business is also up to expectations.

Henry Morgan has added the storeroom at 1418 Third avenue to his present quarters and is now installed in one of the most attractive small shops to be seen locally. The new quarters include a salesroom, about 12x20 feet, with an upstairs storeroom, 8x30 feet, and a basement workroom, 40x60 feet. Mahogany woodwork is found in the shop and the walls have been finished in ivory throughout. This location also carries about forty feet of glass wall display cases along one side of the entrance to the building. Special tables and fixtures are noted.

Several large funeral pieces were made up at Melby's Flower Shop last week, the largest being a huge standing wreath of pink roses and Paper Whites, on a base of large white mums.

E. A. Wallmark, of the City Flower Shop, Everett, Wash., was a recent trade visitor.

A. HENDERSON & CO., 166 N. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Mrs. Gooch, wife of the California shipper of flowers, has been calling on the northwestern trade of late.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop handled two large decorations during the last week. The Coliseum theater was arranged for Marshal Foch's reception with palms, ferns, greens and hampers and baskets of seasonable flowers. For the annual Elks' memorial Sunday, greens were used on the stage of the Metropolitan theater to produce a rustic effect and white mums and mounted elks' heads were added. In addition, more than 1,000 boutonnieres of ivy leaves were prepared.

The City Flower Shop has handled a number of store decorations of late and is also busy with shipping orders on holiday greens. This was one of the first shops to show potted poinsettias this season.

The Pinehurst Floral Shop handled the first potted tulips seen on the local market this season. At a recent bazaar held at the Hotel Washington this shop had the floral booth and featured Christmas novelty baskets, potted peppers and cyclamens and corsages and boutonnieres in university colors.

The Orpheum Floral Co. has been making a special display of Christmas baskets of dried and artificial flowers, which have sold well. Large quantities of medium-sized mums have also been moved.

The Woodland Park Floral Co. is sending in some fine Whitmanii ferns at the present time and will have a large crop of poinsettias ready for holiday delivery and shipment.

C. H. Benson is bringing in some fine late mums at this time, large sizes being especially noticeable. H. M.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING, ETC.

Here's the story of a reckless retailer who got his stock for nothing, sold it at the regular prices and was put out of business by a sniff of red pepper. This is how it was:

Several people of San Francisco who had purchased flowers to put on graves in Greenwood cemetery had complained that the flowers disappeared shortly after they were placed there. Then said Constable A. D. Landini, "I will place a bouquet, but therein shall be red pepper." He did. The flowers disappeared shortly.

Some time later Mr. Landini, walking past a flower stand, saw a good-looking bouquet. "Where do you buy these lovely flowers?" asked he of the peddler-proprietor, nearby. The fellow named a prominent florist, but by that time the constable had taken a sniff of the flowers. One was enough; the red pepper again. The street dealer was arrested.

T. G. OWEN & SON, Wholesale and Retail Florists, Columbus, Miss., write—

"We have used your Gets-There Soap for several years with excellent results. We do not hesitate to recommend this product and think it a mighty good idea for every grower to keep a good supply on hand."

A trial can of Gets-There Insecticide Soap will cost you but $1.00, prepaid. Try it and ask your supply house for it.

AMARYLLIS VITTATA HYBRIDS.

Finest strain in this country.

I have secured all stock from the estate of the late Mr. Condron, of Dickinson, Tex. Grown from a strain of Hybrids, Equestris, Johnsonii and Vittata blended to the top notch of perfection in sixteen years' labor. I will sell at the old price for this season only, giving those who have not received their orders a chance to re-order from me.

Will continue to grow this strain at its old standard and better, and will contract for quantity. I have 700 dried bulbs, 2 to 2½-in., $25.00 per 100 and more of this and larger size in ground.

10,000 1921 Condron strain seedlings, $50.00 per 1000; 2,000 1920 crop at $80.00 per 1000.

Will be obliged to have cash this season to settle estate; next season regular terms. ½ down, balance c. o. d., 10 days net to old customers.

If I can serve you, wire or write.

20% REDUCTION.

We are in receipt of advice from Mr. Ferd. Fischer authorizing us to make a reduction of 20 per cent from the subjoined list on his well-known celebrated strain of Cyclamen seeds. Mr. Fischer is desirous of having you plant some seed at once, as seed planted at this date will develop fine stock for your 1922 Christmas trade.

NOTE: Many seeds have come over to this country, supposed to be German-grown, that in reality were grown in other countries. Many of the diseases now complained about among the florists are due to lack of good strain.

Robert Craig Co., of Norwood, Penn., has for your inspection, 50,000 plants in 5, 6, 7, 8 and 10-inch pots, all well established, true in color and healthy, all grown from Mr. Fischer's seed supplied by us.

When securing seed for immediate planting, we ask that you keep our seed separate from other strains and you can then determine for yourself the quality, and the vigorous growth that Mr. Fischer's strain makes.

This 20 per cent reduction is an inducement for you to plant some now. Send us your order today. It is important and it will pay you to make this experiment.

PERRY GARDENS, RAVENNA, O.

LILYWHITE.

The long desired pure white Gladiolus of vigorous, healthy growth; great multiplying power; straight spikes opening six to eight blooms at a time; an ideal forcer, early as Halley and the best commercial pure white to date.

Awarded first prize by New York, Massachusetts and St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, Horticultural Societies and American Gladiolus Society.

This variety will be grown eventually by the million and practical florists will get stock at once. Will sell a limited number of bulblets at $4.00 per 1000.

Send for our descriptive list of cut-flower varieties suitable for retail florists; also testimonials from leading growers.

SEEDSHYBRIDIZED DAHLIA SEED.

This seed is raised from the most up-to-date Dahlias in existence. No place in the world have Dahlias been brought up to such perfection as they have been around San Francisco. This mixture contains all colors and types of Peony, Cactus and Decorative varieties. Our rainless California summers make it possible to get seed even from the very double varieties, a result extremely difficult in States where it is rainy during the time when the seed should set.

The seed we sent out in previous years was highly praised by all who raised Dahlias from it, but this seed is far superior to what we have sent out in previous years. The seedlings will commence to flower two months after sowing and almost a month earlier than plants raised from bulbs.

Price per 100 seed.....$1.00
Price per 100 seed, Fancy Selected..... 3.00

Walden, N. Y., Feb. 14, 1921.

Richard Diener Co., Kentfield, Cal.
Gentlemen: The Dahlia Seed received from you last year turned out fine. Could not think Dahlias could be grown from seed in such short time. Had some very fine blooms. One yellow Peony flowered that was extra fine, some 8 inches and a clear canary-yellow. Everyone who saw it was amazed at the size grown from seed. Had a clear flesh-pink; beautiful under lamp light. Respectfully,
Wm. McBrier.

FOLEY

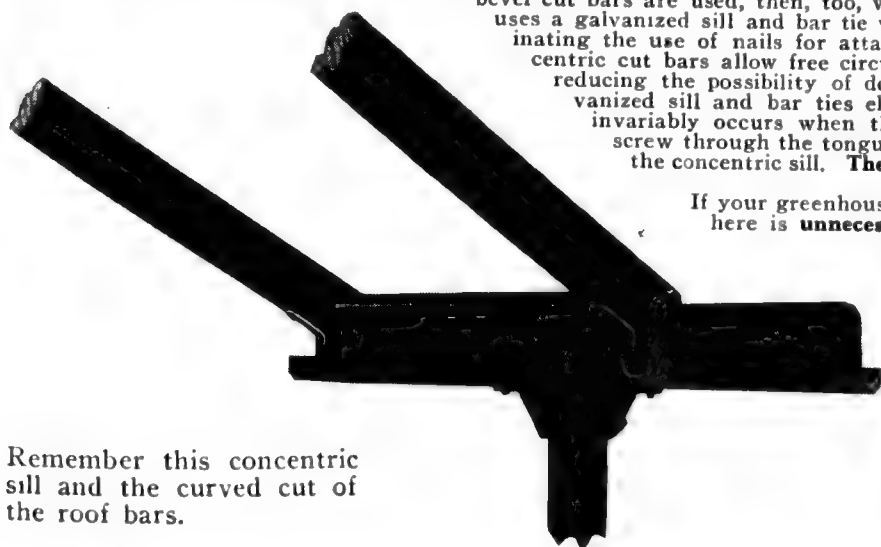

Do YOU know this ridge?

It is used in the Foley pipe frame houses and there isn't another like it on the market. Size up the glass rabbit. It is square cut, isn't it? Well, right there is the difference and the reason. This square cut leaves room for a putty bed under the glass. The glass rabbit in other ridges does not, because in other ridges it is bevel cut.

Notice the way the roof bars are attached to the ridge? The galvanized ridge and bar tie is screwed to the under sides of the ridge and roof bars. And then on top of the bar, a screw is driven through the tongue of the bar into the ridge. And, burn this into your memory, all screw holes in the bars are bored at the factory.

You will find this only in a Foley house—concentric cut bars and sill. This is nothing new—we have been making them this way for twenty years. This permits condensation from the drip grooves in the roof bars to fall free of the sill into the drip conductor, thereby preventing decay so commonly found where the old style bevel sill and bevel cut bars are used, then, too, where wooden gutters are used, Foley uses a galvanized sill and bar tie with galvanized screws, thereby eliminating the use of nails for attaching roof bars to gutter sills. Concentric cut bars allow free circulation of air around the end of bars, reducing the possibility of decay to a minimum. The use of galvanized sill and bar ties eliminates splitting of the bars, which invariably occurs when they are nailed to the sills. A long screw through the tongue of the roof bar, securely fastens it to the concentric sill. These screw holes are bored at the factory.

Remember this concentric sill and the curved cut of the roof bars.

If your greenhouse is designed right, a heavy bar clasp here is unnecessary and only adds to the weight of the house and helps to hold moisture by covering the sides of the bar near the end and covering too much surface on the gutter sill. Covering this surface makes it impossible to paint at the points most subject to moisture—which spells Decay.

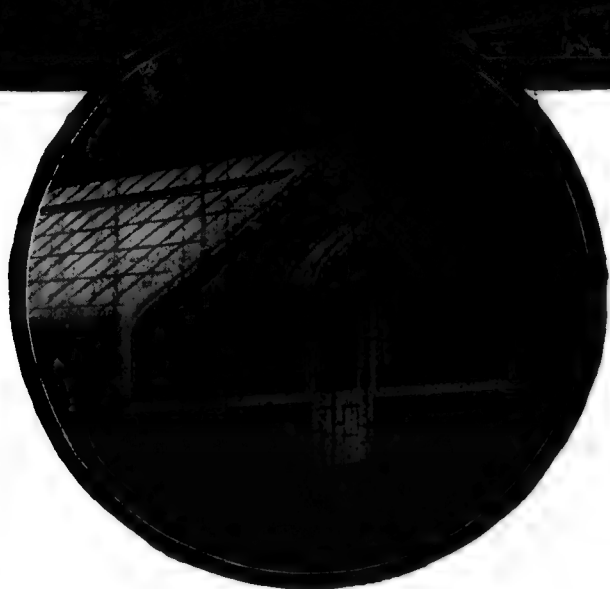

Let's go over this together in any Foley greenhouse.

When can YOU go?
Please let us know.

THE FOLEY GREENHOUSE MFG. CO.

3248 West Thirty-first Street, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

This is the old hort curved eave that we used to build, and which other builders still build.

The above interior and this exterior show you just how high our standard curved eave is.

Get On To This Curve

So little a thing as a few inches difference in a curve, is the difference between winning a ball game and losing it. That same difference on the curve of our private house eaves, makes a surprising difference in the height of the eave.

Whether the eave is high or low, doesn't make a bit of difference if you were sure that the side benches would always be used for low-growing things like lettuce or violets.

But you want to grow roses and tallish plants if you like, without nipping the tops off to keep them from hitting the glass. Yes, you are right; we are the only greenhouse builders who build their regular standard house with the high curved eave. When they do it, the houses cost more.

Our house costs no more and still you get more for what it costs.

Besides—we have a reputation for pleasant dealing.

We do the little things without any quibbling.

We go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

Would a conservatory salesroom of this kind increase your Christmas business?

We rather think it would. At any rate all those for whom we have built, say their sales have increased greatly.

You cannot exaggerate the advertising value of a conservatory; it speaks for itself.

And don't forget Moninger conservatories speak for themselves also. The quality is of the best and the service all you could ask.

May we have the pleasure of estimating?

Why Every House You Build Makes Every House You Have Cost Less

Some things that seem so, are not the so they seem.

For example: You buy a big seven passenger car that gives you 14 miles to the gallon when you are in it alone.

By all that is seemingly reasonable, every time one more person gets in, it ought to take 2 miles off the gallon.

In truth you can fill every seat and still use but surprisingly little more gas.

Why is it?

Because, regardless of how many you carry, you always have the same weight of the car to carry.

The largest amount of your gas is used in carrying along the car itself.

What that costs, is a fixed cost that you can't get away from.

In business terms it's the overhead. When you ride alone, then you have to carry all the running cost of the car, so the car can carry you.

Every person you add, divides that cost proportionately, each time reducing your cost per individual.

Exactly the same thing happens up to a certain point with greenhouses.

If you have only one house, it has to carry the entire cost of your workroom, chimney, boiler and all such extra costs.

But every house you build afterwards, shares proportionately in that cost, so reducing the cost of each.

All of which is one of the big reasons why the more you build, the less your houses cost you, and the more you can make out of them.

To still further reduce your costs and add more to your profits, we have made a very substantial reduction in the prices of our houses.

In fact we have a mighty attractive money saving proposition to offer you.

Saved—$24 a Month!

THE LIPMAN Full-Automatic Refrigerating Machine does all it was represented to do — in fact, is better than I expected," writes Mr. H. G. Pauli, Florist of Davenport, Ia. "Ice used to cost us $1 a day to keep box at 50 degrees. Now, with the LIPMAN, our monthly expenditure only totals about $5 for electricity and $1 for water, and while we keep our box between 44 and 50 degrees we could freeze it up if desired."

Saved — $24 a month, $288 a year! And yet this is only one instance of how LIPMAN Full-Automatic Refrigerating Machines are adding to the profits of florists wherever used. Electric rates and ice costs vary everywhere, but Lipman refrigeration has never failed to effect a saving.

Your problem, stated on a postcard, will receive the immediate attention of our representative nearest you. No obligation.

PAYING THE RENT FOR ADVERTISING

Florists contemplating the erection of new stores constantly seek the ideas carried out by others in the construction and location of establishments recently opened. Here is a discussion of one powerful factor, whose influence is seen in many flower shops, particularly among those of recent date.

NO OTHER trade or industry has a product which advertises itself so well as does ours. Regardless of our slogan and without any attempt at witticism, it may be said that flowers speak for themselves. Recognizing this, those florists who are the keenest advertisers lose no opportunity to let their blooms and plants sell themselves. It was realized long ago that a flower show that drew the populace in large numbers was the most beneficial influence the florists of a community could create in their own behalf. And for the same reason, a flower show consists only of flowers; no auxiliary sights or attractions are needed. No salesmen need to be present to point out the beauty, the fragrance, the size or shape, the lasting quality, or anything else about flowers, after the fashion of salesmen at an automobile show. In advertisements, too, little is said about the various qualities of flowers, though sometimes suggestion is given as to their uses. Just mention of flowers, and perhaps their prices, form the message of most florists' advertisements. So it is, too, that florists' window displays—a powerful means of advertisement—are composed principally, if not altogether, of flowers. Think of the department store windows, or the music store or jewelry store windows, in which the setting gives the real drawing power, while the goods to be sold are inconspicuous in comparison. Not so, florists' windows. A good decorator, though he may try something else by way of variety, needs no better materials for his display, fifty-two weeks out of the year, than the flowers and plants on sale.

Effect on Flower Stores.

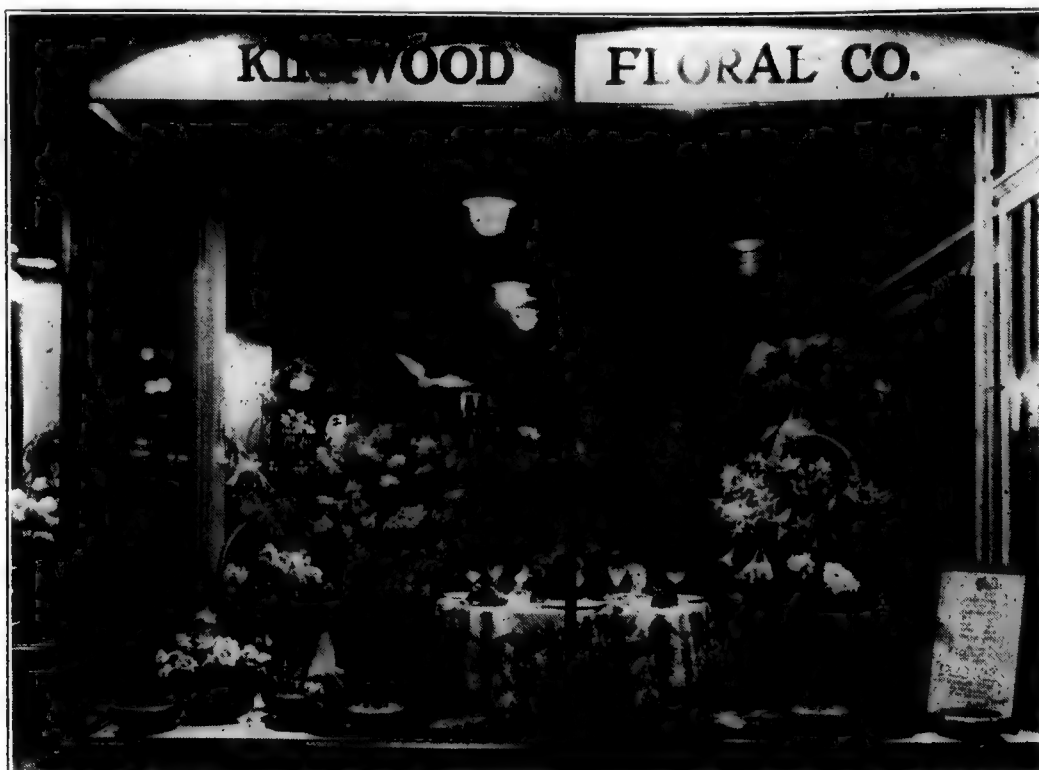

Recognition of the foregoing facts has had its effect on retail flower stores. In the effort to show the public his wares, the florist has sought more conspicuous window space. The increase—despite civic campaigns against them—of the use of signboards for advertising purposes and the greater rentals demanded for favorable locations for them have taught those who had not perceived the fact before, that brief messages contained in fleeting visual impressions are decidedly powerful in making sales. And on consideration of such matters, one must conclude that no sign-board, no matter how large or favorably located, would be so effective in conveying the advertising message of the florist as his blooms themselves. In brief, the display window space at a florist's disposal is as valuable, at least, as a signboard. If he will look at it in that light—in case he has not before—he will be inclined to give it more regard than he has in the past. How high the value of a display window runs depends upon the character of the advertising message put therein, as on a signboard. The florist who has hitherto thought of his window space as a place to store palms and ferns, or a counter from which to sell, will realize, if he notes how great value some other members of the trade put upon this space, that he has been wasting something exceedingly valuable.

The advertising value of the window display space has come home so forcibly to some florists that they regard rent and advertising as complementary accounts. If they have a small rent budget in comparison with leading merchants in their town, they believe they must have a correspondingly greater advertising budget. Or vice versa, they feel they can rightfully draw upon the advertising appropriation for part of the rent.

Lots of Flowers Are Needed to Fill All These Windows, but Then, They Sell Lots of Flowers.

For usually rent is high because the opportunity of getting transients' attention is greater. A store on the main street sells more flowers than one on a side street because of the mere fact that its location brings its wares to the attention of a greater number of persons. Therefore, as a rule, the tendency of florists is to select locations that are prominent, for the advertising value they possess, and look with disfavor on inconspicuous store sites.

Since it follows that size aids prominence—pursuing the signboard idea—as well as location, the shape of the store has been affected by the desire of the florist to let his own wares act as sales agents. Deep, narrow stores are not so many as they used to be. They are not thought desirable, unless they are on a corner, where, really, depth is not depth, but added width, so far as window space is concerned. Wide stores, with lesser depth allotted the sales or show room, are becoming more numerous. The rent is higher, but the display space for flowers is much greater. The passing pedestrian or automobilist cannot fail to see that a florist is there. How many times have you passed an inconspicuous store, or restaurant entrance, and had to retrace your steps, because you were thinking of something else and the front was not noticeable enough to draw your attention? The florist in an inconspicuous place may save on the rent, but he must advertise strongly to make people come look for him.

New Des Moines Store.

New stores opened recently by florists have indicated that the number of them is increasing who recognize the complementary relations of rent and advertising items in the retail florist's budget. The illustrations on this and the preceding page show one of these stores. This was opened December 1 by the Kirkwood Floral Co., at Eighth and Locust streets, Des Moines, Ia., and called forth comment from many prominent business men in that district. The store fronts twenty-two feet on Locust and sixty-six feet on Eighth. It is as a "house of glass," for in every foot of frontage on both sides there is glass, which affords the passers-by—and there are many of them—an opportunity to see flowers, enjoy them, and feel a desire for them.

The abundance of flowers kept in stock is also worthy of comment, and as one passes there is made a strong impression, best described as that of an extensive flower garden. The store itself is not elaborate and in no way distracts from the natural inherent beauty of flowers. The fixtures are finished in ivory. The room is decorated with stippled walls with Tiffany edging. The white and blue tile flooring is striking. The somewhat unusual icebox, fifteen feet long and five feet high, the contents of which are in full view of the pedestrians, gives every opportunity for display. Above all things, the store is practical. The balcony, which covers one-half the area of the salesroom, holds the office and storerooms for packing materials. As well as being highly useful, the balcony softens the outlines of the store because it avoids the effect of a high ceiling. The store is made further attractive by novel fixtures and an extensive line of baskets, including some handsome new patterns manufactured by the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. Much is said at this time about creating flower-buyers. It would be difficult to find any medium more powerful than a store of this kind to instill in the general public the desire for flowers.

The lay-out of this store is not a mere accident, as will be seen by reviewing the history of the Kirkwood Floral Co. In September, 1916, Ray Holt, with a partner, opened the Kirkwood Floral Co., in the lobby of the Kirkwood hotel. The space there was slightly larger than the main icebox of the present store. Soon afterwards the business was large enough to warrant a store opposite the Kirkwood hotel, on a corner. During its existence at this place Mr. Holt bought out his partner and has since been greatly assisted by his wife. This corner store was always kept attractive and created many flower-buyers. In this way Mr. Holt realized the advisability of a corner location and he kept his eyes open until the store shown here, which is the corner of the Des Moines Club building, came to his notice and was available. December 1 the new location was occupied and congratulations were received from a host of friends. The Kirkwood Floral Co. owns its own greenhouses, where it grows principally pot plants and miscellaneous cut flowers.

Marion, Ind.—Edward Siebrecht has placed an order with Buchbinder Bros., Chicago, for a large refrigerator, to be finished in light gray.

Hugo, Okla.—Mrs. John K. Meffert is starting in the florists' business here. For some years she was in business as the Rogers Greenhouses, at Rogers, Ark. She has had an excellent fall season here, her chrysanthemums having a splendid sale at good prices.

NEW CENSUS FIGURES OUT.

Greenhouse Establishments.

With total sales in 1919 of nearly $100,000,000, the nursery and greenhouse business in the United States is to be listed among the important industries of the country, according to figures made public this week by the census bureau, embodying the results of the census of 1919.

The canvass of the industry developed that there were 17,199 greenhouse establishments in the United States January 1, 1920, having a total of 162,368,593 square feet under glass, and 4,049 nursery farms or establishments with 51,453 acres of land actually in use.

The total sales of greenhouse products during 1919 aggregated $77,380,230. Eighty per cent of this, or $61,892,352, was from the sale of flowers and flowering plants, and $15,487,878, the remaining twenty per cent, from the sale of vegetables and vegetable plants. This figured out, according to the census bureau, as an average of $4,499 in sales for each establishment reporting, or 48 cents for each square foot under glass. The total under glass included not only the area in greenhouses or hothouses, but the area under glass in coldframes, as well.

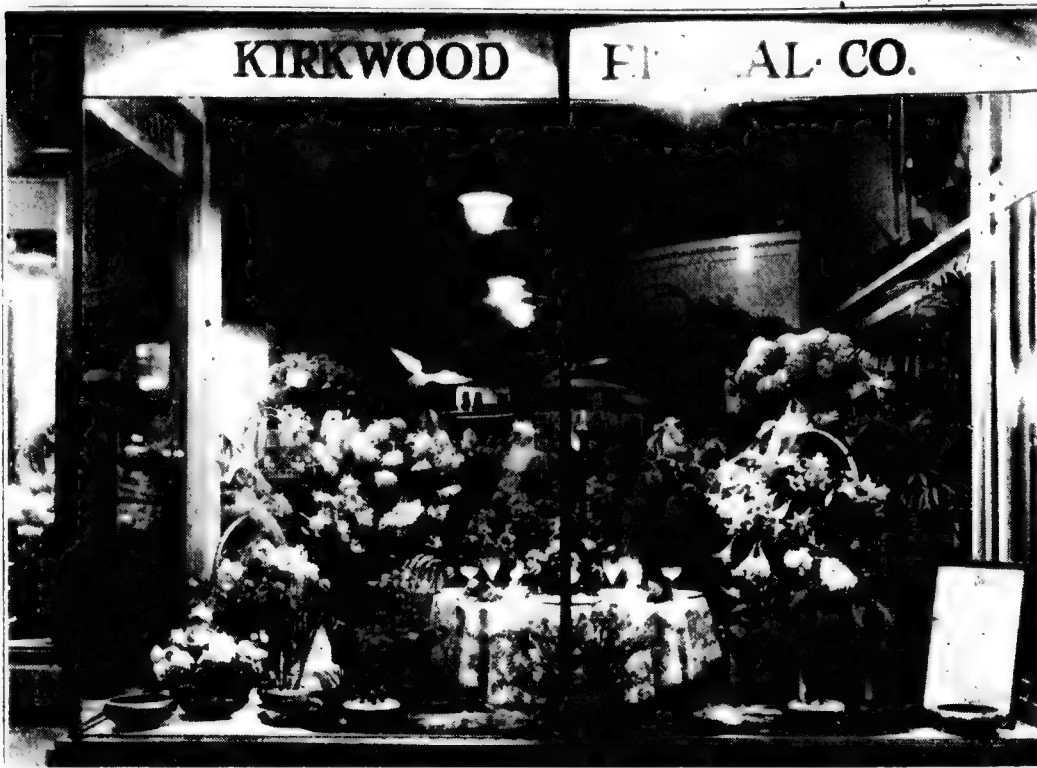

The receipts from the sale of nursery products totaled $20,434,389 during the year, an average of $5,047 for each farm or establishment reporting, or $397 per acre. The average land in use by each establishment was 12.7 acres.

The three middle Atlantic states led with the number of greenhouses reporting, but the five east north central states led both in the footage under glass and the total of sales. The greatest total of sales from any state was $9,978,606 reported by Illinois. Five other states, however, had sales exceeding $5,000,000, as follows: New York, $8,689,325; Pennsylvania, $8,227,124; Ohio, $7,052,560; Massachusetts, $5,536,532, and New Jersey, $5,064,686. These six states reported 57.6 per cent of the total receipts from the sale of greenhouse products.

The report also shows that 53.7 per cent of the total area under glass when the census was taken, January 1, 1920, was reported in the following five states: Illinois, 19,626,091 square feet;

For usually rent is high because the opportunity of getting transients' attention is greater. A store on the main street sells more flowers than one on a side street because of the mere fact that its location brings its wares to the attention of a greater number of persons. Therefore, as a rule, the tendency of florists is to select locations that are prominent, for the advertising value they possess, and look with disfavor on inconspicuous store sites.

Since it follows that size aids prominence—pursuing the signboard idea as well as location, the shape of the store has been affected by the desire of the florist to let his own wares act as sales agents. Deep, narrow stores are not so many as they used to be. They are not thought desirable, unless they are on a corner, where, really, depth is not depth, but added width, so far as window space is concerned. Wide stores, with lesser depth allotted the sales or show room, are becoming more numerous. The rent is higher, but the display space for flowers is much greater. The passing pedestrian or automobilist cannot fail to see that a florist is there. How many times have you passed an inconspicuous store, or restaurant entrance, and had to retrace your steps, because you were thinking of something else and the front was not noticeable enough to draw your attention? The florist in an inconspicuous place may save on the rent; but he must advertise strongly to make people come look for him.

New Des Moines Store.

New stores opened recently by florists have indicated that the number of them is increasing who recognize the complementary relations of rent and advertising items in the retail florist's budget. The illustrations on this and the preceding page show one of these stores. This was opened December 1 by the Kirkwood Floral Co., at Eighth and Locust streets, Des Moines, Ia., and called forth comment from many prominent business men in that district. The store fronts twenty-two feet on Locust and sixty-six feet on Eighth. It is as a "house of glass," for in every foot of frontage on both sides there is glass, which affords the passers-by and there are many of them—an opportunity to see flowers, enjoy them, and feel a desire for them.

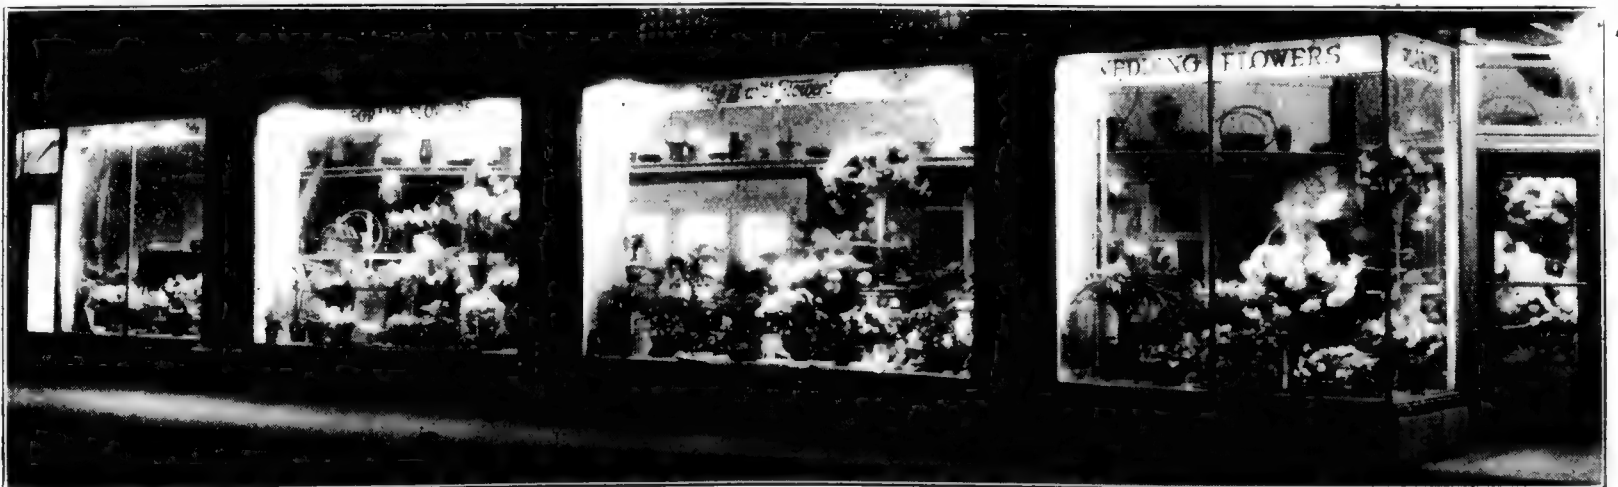

The abundance of flowers kept in stock is also worthy of comment, and as one passes there is made a strong impression, best described as that of an extensive flower garden. The store itself is not elaborate and in no way distracts from the natural inherent beauty of flowers. The fixtures are finished in ivory. The room is decorated with stippled walls with Tiffany edging. The white and blue tile flooring is striking. The somewhat unusual icebox, fifteen feet long and five feet high, the contents of which are in full view of the pedestrians, gives every opportunity for display. Above all things, the store is practical. The balcony, which covers one-half the area of the salesroom, holds the office and storerooms for packing materials. As well as being highly useful, the balcony softens the outlines of the store because it avoids the effect of a high ceiling. The store is made further attractive by novel fixtures and an extensive line of baskets, including some handsome new patterns manufactured by the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. Much is said at this time about creating flower-buyers. It would be difficult to find any medium more powerful than a store of this kind to instill in the general public the desire for flowers.

The lay-out of this store is not a mere accident, as will be seen by reviewing the history of the Kirkwood Floral Co. In September, 1916, Ray Holt, with a partner, opened the Kirkwood Floral Co., in the lobby of the Kirkwood hotel. The space there was slightly larger than the main icebox of the present store. Soon afterwards the business was large enough to warrant a store opposite the Kirkwood hotel, on a corner. During its existence at this place Mr. Holt bought out his partner and has since been greatly assisted by his wife. This corner store was always kept attractive and created many flower-buyers. In this way Mr. Holt realized the advisability of a corner location and he kept his eyes open until the store shown here, which is the corner of the Des Moines Club building, came to his notice and was available. December 1 the new location was occupied and congratulations were received from a host of friends. The Kirkwood Floral Co. owns its own greenhouses, where it grows principally pot plants and miscellaneous cut flowers.

Marion, Ind.—Edward Siebrecht has placed an order with Buchbinder Bros., Chicago, for a large refrigerator, to be finished in light gray.

Hugo, Okla.—Mrs. John K. Meffert is starting in the florists' business here. For some years she was in business as the Rogers Greenhouses, at Rogers, Ark. She has had an excellent fall season here, her chrysanthemums having a splendid sale at good prices.

If One Computed the Value of Signboard Space in this Location, These Windows Would Show Their Worth.

Ohio, 19,397,183 square feet; New York, 18,289,628 square feet; Pennsylvania, 16,923,355 square feet, and Massachusetts, 12,953,023 square feet. No other state reported as much as 10,000,000 square feet under glass.

New York state led with the number of establishments, having 2,508, while Pennsylvania followed with 2,228. Ohio and Illinois were third and fourth with 1,667 and 1,104 establishments, respectively.

Nurseries.

The east north central states led with the number of nursery establishments reported, but the middle Atlantic states led with the acreage in use and the volume of sales. The total receipts derived from the sale of nursery products exceeded $1,000,000 in six states, as follows: California, $2,929,458; New York, $2,310,253; Ohio, $1,286,947; New Jersey, $1,048,919; Missouri, $1,045,697, and Pennsylvania, $1,039,439. These states reported 47.3 per cent of the total receipts from the sale of nursery products in the United States.

The acreage used for nursery purposes was greatest in New York, which reported 5,288 acres. California was second with 4,080 acres; New Jersey, third with 3,337 acres; Texas, fourth with 3,032, and Maryland, fifth with 3,015 acres.

The greatest number of farms or establishments was reported by California, which had 540, while New York was second, with 359.

On page 19 is a table prepared by the census bureau showing the number of establishments, sales and other information gathered by the enumerators.

EVERY LITTLE HELPS

Repealed January 1.

Because repeal of the war tax on transportation service becomes effective January 1, 1922, questions will arise, in many instances, concerning liability for a tax on service partly performed on or after that date.

The commissioner of internal revenue has anticipated these questions by promulgating Treasury decisions 3255 and 3256, the former dealing mainly with freight and express charges, while the latter covers taxes on passenger transportation, Pullman car accommodations, etc.

The revenue act of 1918 imposed a three per cent tax on charges paid for transporting freight within the United States, and a tax of 1 cent for each 20 cents or fraction thereof, paid for transporting express shipments. The same section provides a tax of eight per cent on passenger and Pullman fares, etc., but the act of 1921 provides for a refund on tickets or mileage books purchased and only partly used before January 1, 1922.

Treasury Decision.

Covering freight and express transportation, Treasury decision 3255 rules that the tax shall be collected on shipments made before January 1, but not arriving at destination before then, where the freight charges are prepaid, but not where the freight charges are collect.

The decision further says:

"Transportation companies have been authorized, as set forth in article 115, regulations 49, revised, to adjust tax in adjusting overcharges, taking credit on any subsequent return for tax so adjusted. In order to terminate this authority uniformly and at a time that will make it practicable for the credits to be taken on returns made by the carriers, it is directed that in adjusting overcharges and in redeeming unused and partially used tickets and mileage books, no adjustments be made of tax after December 31, 1921. It is suggested that transportation companies, as soon as practicable, advise all claimants who have claims pending or who file claims after December 13, 1921, that claim for refund of tax should be filed on Treasury department form 46, with the commissioner of internal revenue within four years from time tax was paid, claim being barred by statute of limitations if received after such time. In the event the transportation companies retain the freight receipts, express receipts, redeemed tickets, or mileage books as part of their files on a claim, it will facilitate handling claims filed with the commissioner for refund of the tax if the transportation companies will, when adjusting the transportation charge, furnish to the claimant a statement or certificate containing the following information, retaining a copy thereof in their files:

- (a) Number assigned claim by transportation company.
- (b) Amount of charges refunded on the claim.
- (c) Amount of tax actually collected on the refunded amount.
- (d) Date (or dates) on which tax was collected.

"In order that right to refund may be established it will be necessary for claimant to either furnish the original receipts, showing payment of tax, or to furnish the above statement or certificate in lieu thereof." S.

HERE IS A SAVING.

The public will save approximately $1,500,000 a month as a result of the elimination of the war tax on express shipments, according to George C. Taylor, president of the American Railway Express Co.

The revenue act of 1921 eliminates the war tax of 1 cent on every 20 cents and fractions thereof in transportation charges on all express shipments. This tax during the year of 1920 amounted to $17,502,918. The average transportation charge for each express shipment was approximately $1.50 and the average war tax for each shipment was 8 cents.

The elimination of the tax, therefore, will virtually amount to a decrease in rates of a little over five per cent. Mr. Taylor believes that this should have a tendency to stimulate business and thereby accelerate the rapidly improving conditions throughout the entire country.

"The American Railway Express Co. handles approximately 1,000,000 shipments a day or nearly 400,000,000 shipments a year," Mr. Taylor goes on to say. "The elimination of the tax will relieve the American Railway Express Co. of an immense amount of labor which has been involved in calculating, entering on way bills and collection of tax, not to mention the expense of checking and accounting entailed.

"The Treasury department has requested express carriers to advise all claimants who have claims pending for overcharges or who file such claims after December 31, 1921, that claim for refund of tax should be filed on Treasury department form No. 46, with the commissioner of internal revenue, within four years from the time tax was paid, claim being barred by statute of limitations if received after such time."

Mr. Taylor points out that, as the revenue act becomes effective January 1, 1922, the tax on all shipments forwarded "prepaid" on or before December 31 will be collected. On shipments forwarded "collect" and arriving on or after January 1, the tax will not be assessed.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Des Moines, Ia.—The affairs of the Rosery, operated by Alfred G. Lozier, have been wound up and the creditors who presented claims have received a settlement of 25 cents on the dollar.

Greenville, S. C.—A meeting of creditors of Harold E. Rogers' flower shop was called for December 20 by E. M. Blythe, referee in bankruptcy, to consider the final accounting of the trustee and the winding up of the firm's affairs.

Cleveland, O.—George Bate, receiver for the Smith & Feters Co., has sent a second dividend to creditors of the company, amounting to twenty per cent of the claims presented. The first dividend was thirty per cent.

Mechanicsville, O.—D. J. Burnham, receiver for the Wing Seed Co., has outlined in a communication to the concern's creditors a plan for the relinquishment of the receivership, following the method proposed at the meeting at Urbana November 7. Under this procedure unsecured creditors would receive what he calls prior preference preferred stock for the amount of their claims, which would bear six per cent interest and be paid off before any dividend is declared on present common or preferred stock. The creditors would form a committee, to act as a board of directors, and hire a sales manager and treasurer to act in place of the present receiver. Mr. Burnham hoped by this plan to restore the business as a going concern and facilitate sales by removal of the stigma of the receivership, which he declares a heavy handicap.

LATE ACCEPTANCE.

When an offer to sell goods at a quoted price is made subject to acceptance by return mail, one day's delay in accepting will make it possible for the seller to refuse performance, held the Indiana Appellate court in a recent case, reported in 128 Northeastern Reporter, 699. S.

FRISCO STORE ENLARGED.

There is one experience more encouraging than opening a new store and that is enlarging the old one. The first instance is a start to success; the second is a manifestation of success already achieved. Such a manifestation has come to Brown & Kennedy, of San Francisco, who recently doubled the capacity of their store, at 3091 Sixteenth street. This enlargement makes the store, the proprietors say, the largest in the Mission district of the western metropolis.

There are now thirty-five feet of frontage and a depth of seventy-five feet. And there are two large show windows, about eight feet deep, with the entrance of the store in the middle. The store is papered throughout with waterproof paper.

The store as it now appears is shown in the illustration on this page. Autumn coloring and putty-like shades feature the new decoration, the walls being done in autumn leaf designs. The color effects are likewise carried out in the capacious writing desk, the four sections of which, centrally located, are handily placed for customers' use. Behind the latticework reaching to the ceiling in the rear of the shop are the workrooms. This latticework is putty-colored and serves as an excellent background for the display of art floral baskets, of which the firm has a large supply.

The salesroom is equipped with all the conveniences of an up-to-date flower store, with indirect lighting throughout. Among other improvements there are four telephones located at different stations, which save a great deal of time. In the words of Charles W. Brown, "We are of the opinion that we now have one of the most up-to-the-minute stores in the city and are equipped to handle a large volume of business. This is the result of eleven years' business in the same location, where we have served customers from all sections of the city and where we now expect to make many new friends, both locally and by wire."

The firm is composed of Charles W. Brown and William E. Kennedy. They are members of the F. T. D., believe strongly in the florists' telegraph delivery service and promote their business in this line by advertising it widely. They are active workers for the San Francisco Coöperative Market, the flower shows and many other activities that have to do with bettering the trade locally.

MAKING A GRAVE BLANKET.

Will you tell us how to make a grave blanket, mentioning the size, material to use, etc.? One of our customers ordered one in Chicago last Christmas and wants us to make it this year. Also, will you advise as to what a Chicago florist, moderately priced, would charge? E. H. P.—Ind.

Grave blankets or covers may be made in several ways and of various kinds of foliage. Flowers, except artificial or prepared ones, should not be used, as the cover is made to hide the bare earth; so it must last for some time. Any kind of foliage that will keep fresh-looking for a considerable time may be used. Prepared foliage of the oak and beech is excellent, as is also the fresh foliage of boxwood, lycopodium, arbor-vitæ and other forms of conifers. A combination of the natural and prepared foliages is often desirable.

Whatever foliage or combination of foliages is used must be worked upon some kind of background that will hold the stems in place and will also allow the cover to be fastened down firmly to the soil. Such a background may be rigid or flexible. In the former case, a rigid framework made of wire, somewhat as in the case of designs, may be used, but should not be mossed, as the foliage is easily fastened to the wire. A flexible background is easier to work up and is also much cheaper. Whatever is selected must be sufficiently strong to hold the foliage in position and to allow handling; it must not rot too quickly. A piece of ordinary wire cloth, such as as is used in window screens, answers admirably, as it may be secured in various widths and of any length desired.

For convenience, the preparation of a cover of brown oak leaves, prepared, and arbor-vitæ sprays will be discussed. The materials required will consist of a piece of wire cloth of the required size; pieces of 22 or 24 wire, five to six inches long, bent into the form of hairpins, and sufficient foliage to cover the frame properly.

To be prepared most easily, the cloth should be stretched on a framework so as to be raised about six to ten inches above the table top. If no framework is at hand, the wire may be stretched between two boxes or even between two tables.

The first step in the covering is to place an edging about the cloth, with the tips of the foliage pointing outward. To do this, small clusters of oak and arbor-vitæ sprays are placed along the edge and held in place by passing one of the wire hairpins over the stems, through the cloth, and twisting it firmly on the under side. The ends of the wire may be bent flat to the cloth or pushed upward. The center of the cover is then filled in the same manner, except that the clusters should be worked from the ends toward the center. Enough foliage should be used so that the cover is fairly thick, in order to withstand outdoor conditions. The cover may then be finished off by placing a cluster of sprays of ruscus or flowers in the center and fastening it down in the same manner.

It may readily be seen that the above arrangement may be easily modified and different effects secured by using various combinations of material. The method of procedure would, however, be the same.

When the cover is delivered, there should be sent with it a sufficient number of wire hooks, eight to ten inches long, to fasten it down and prevent the wind from rolling it up.

The selling price of such a cover may be easily determined by estimating the cost of the materials entering into its construction, and the cost of the labor and overhead, and adding to this a reasonable profit.

ORDERING BY TELEPHONE.

Florists, today, are making the appeal for retail business by telephone stronger than ever before; they realize that the number of their daily orders can be increased innumerable by educating the public into the use of this method of buying. A campaign of this sort, however, must contain an element of reassurance; people are prone to entertain the erroneous conviction that business men assume the attitude of, "Oh! well, I'll never see him again," and it is this sort of feeling on the part of the public which the florist must overcome if he expects to be successful in his enterprise. Hence the strong emphasis on service in such advertising. The time element is also a great factor; people who can afford to buy flowers will do so much more often if they can be assured of getting quality and service by merely stepping to the telephone.

Telephone orders, of course, necessitate the opening of a charge account, which may entail a little extra trouble on the part of the florist, but in view of the fact that about ninety-nine per cent of the people are honest, the loss in the way of bad debts is comparatively small when the amount of increased business is considered. A charge account lends facility; it can be paid once a month by check and the customer who has one probably buys more flowers than he would otherwise.

On this page are reproduced two advertisements in the Chicago Tribune of December 16, used by two of Chicago's leading florists to promote their telephone order business. In both of these advertisements the appeal for a trial order is prominent; in one of them, too, the convenience of opening a charge account is emphasized. In the other, the readiness of a floral artist to offer Christmas gift suggestions is noted and the psychology of a telephone number which is easily remembered is exemplified.

YULETIDE PUBLICITY.

The value of publicity in the news columns, even over that in the advertising columns, is recognized by all who have put thought on the subject. But the former is harder to get than the latter. The former can only be obtained by copy that is of news interest; the latter can always be had if one will pay for the space. Yet much publicity can be obtained in his local newspapers by the florist if he can sense the kind of copy the editors "fall for." Charles Henry Fox, of Philadelphia, has that ability and he has sent to each of the newspapers in his city a story about flowers for Christmas. It appeared in the North American, Sunday, December 18. It was not in an inconspicuous position, but at the top of a column on page 3, with large headlines, and occupied nearly half a column. The story supplied by Mr. Fox, as it appeared in the North American, read:

FLOWERS PLENTIFUL FOR THIS YULETIDE.
Novelties Make Holidays Gay Than Ever Before.

DISPLAYS UNIQUE.

With roses and other flowers more plentiful than ever before, and prices lower than they were in 1914, the current Yuletide will be gayer than it has been for many years.

Flowers are plentiful just now, because of the recent mild weather, according to statements made yesterday by florists in the central section of the city. Men and women in all walks of life are buying flowers; flowers in boxes, bouquets and baskets for gifts and flowers for decorating the home, they added.

The floral output this year is not limited to the conventional holly and evergreen of former seasons. There are innumerable novelties that are as delightful and gay as the season itself. And these are finding a ready demand, because they are not as perishable as holly and other Christmas greens.

To replace the holly wreath, whose berries drop off quickly, there are small baskets containing colored cones, poppy hearts in innumerable colors, sprigs of heather and colored ruscus. The handle of the basket, which may be hung on a door knob, in the window or on the wall, is tied with a large ribbon bow. Then there are flower "centerpieces" for table decoration. The flowers are arranged on a wooden plaque and red and green fiber decorates the edge. There is a candleholder in the center and a long, tapering, bright red candle set in this grove gives the desired effect. The red fiber wreath with large cluster of poinsettias, two-tone ruscus, dracenas and peppers is another substitute for the old-fashioned holly wreath.

Oxidized vases, jardinières and painted baskets containing heather, blue lace flowers, Christmas orchids and orange trees are being purchased by many for gift purposes, it is said.

CHIPS AND THE OLD BLOCK.

On page 23 is an excellent picture of a well known family of florists. Here sits Albert F. Amling, surrounded by his five sons.

Albert F. Amling is well known in the trade as head of the corporation which bears his name. For many years Mr. Amling has been one of the largest producers of roses for the Chicago market. He has worked so long and successfully at it that now he devotes a considerable share of his time to the affairs of the Maywood State bank, of which he is vice-president, active management of the greenhouses being in the hands of his son, Otto, who sits at the left in the picture. Otto Amling is secretary of the organization of growers in the Chicago market and recently has served a term as treasurer of the Chicago Florists' Club.

At the right in the picture sits Ernst C. Amling. This energetic young man, when just emerging from boyhood, started a business of his own near his father's range in Maywood. He made

WORMS ATTACKING DAHLIAS.

Grubworms are giving me a great deal of trouble in my dahlia fields. Will lime or any kind of fertilizer drive them away? If not, can you tell me how I can get rid of them? B. D. F.—Ind.

I presume cutworms have eaten your dahlias the last season. Lime scattered around will not check them. I advise its free use, however, after plowing and before harrowing your land next season. In well sweetened ground they are never so abundant and destructive as when the soil is more acid. I would suggest using a poisoned mash on your dahlia land next season: Fresh bran, fifty pounds; Paris green, one pound; add sulphur or molasses to sweeten and enough water to moisten it, stir and mix thoroughly. Sometimes the juices of three or four oranges are added to give the mixture flavor, but of course this is unnecessary. Drop little bits of this bait about places where cutworms trouble your plants. Do not allow poultry, ducks, geese or turkeys to go where the poison is laid. You can use a half pound of white arsenic in lieu of one pound of Paris green and, if your plot is small, reduce the proportion of poison in the mixture to conform to your needs. C. W.

TROUBLE WITH CYCLAMENS.

Will you kindly examine the cyclamen plant mailed you under separate cover? This plant seems to have a fungous disease and we should like to find a remedy for it. We have 600 of these plants and keep them in a temperature of from 52 to 55 degrees at night, with good ventilation on fair days, but the trouble seems to be on the increase. The leaves turn yellow or brown and then wilt completely. Any assistance you may give us will be appreciated. B. G.—Mich.

The plant was received on a severe day, and was frozen solid. It was not possible to tell from the specimen what your trouble is, but probably the cyclamen mite has got your plants. This is a hard pest to fight. Some growers have overcome it either by spraying with a strong soap and nicotine spray or dipping the plants. It is essential to start on its first appearance and I would strongly advise that another season you give the plants a dipping even though you see no signs of trouble, prevention being better than cure. I should suggest one or two dippings in August, about a week apart. C. W.

POINSETTIAS FOR SHIPPING.

What is the best way to pack and ship cut poinsettias? R. F. K.—Fla.

Dipping the stems in hot water is a satisfactory way to prevent the loss of sap when cutting poinsettias. Draw some boiling water from your boiler, filling the bucket about half full. As you cut the poinsettias, immerse the end of the stem in this hot water to a depth of about four inches. Hold them in this hot water until bleeding stops, which will require about five minutes, then put them in a vase of cool water. One or two men should do the scalding while a third cuts the poinsettias, if any quantity is to be cut. Do not store in a cold room; about the same temperature as that in which they were grown is best. They will wilt in a cold temperature. A. F. J. B.

WORMS ATTACKING DAHLIAS.

Grubworms are giving me a great deal of trouble in my dahlia fields. Will lime or any kind of fertilizer drive them away? If not, can you tell me how I can get rid of them? B. D. F.—Ind.

I presume cutworms have eaten your dahlias the last season. Lime scattered around will not check them. I advise its free use, however, after plowing and before harrowing your land next season. In well sweetened ground they are never so abundant and destructive as when the soil is more acid. I would suggest using a poisoned mash on your dahlia land next season: Fresh bran, fifty pounds; Paris green, one pound; add sulphur or molasses to sweeten and enough water to moisten it, stir and mix thoroughly. Sometimes the juices of three or four oranges are added to give the mixture flavor, but of course this is unnecessary. Drop little bits of this bait about places where cutworms trouble your plants. Do not allow poultry, ducks, geese or turkeys to go where the poison is laid. You can use a half pound of white arsenic in lieu of one pound of Paris green and, if your plot is small, reduce the proportion of poison in the mixture to conform to your needs. C. W.

TROUBLE WITH CYCLAMENS.

Will you kindly examine the cyclamen plant mailed you under separate cover? This plant seems to have a fungous disease and we should like to find a remedy for it. We have 600 of these plants and keep them in a temperature of from 52 to 55 degrees at night, with good ventilation on fair days, but the trouble seems to be on the increase. The leaves turn yellow or brown and then wilt completely. Any assistance you may give us will be appreciated. B. G.—Mich.

The plant was received on a severe day, and was frozen solid. It was not possible to tell from the specimen what your trouble is, but probably the cyclamen mite has got your plants. This is a hard pest to fight. Some growers have overcome it either by spraying with a strong soap and nicotine spray or dipping the plants. It is essential to start on its first appearance and I would strongly advise that another season you give the plants a dipping even though you see no signs of trouble, prevention being better than cure. I should suggest one or two dippings in August, about a week apart. C. W.

POINSETTIAS FOR SHIPPING.

What is the best way to pack and ship out poinsettias? R. F. K.—Fla.

Dipping the stems in hot water is a satisfactory way to prevent the loss of sap when cutting poinsettias. Draw some boiling water from your boiler, filling the bucket about half full. As you cut the poinsettias, immerse the end of the stem in this hot water to a depth of about four inches. Hold them in this hot water until bleeding stops, which will require about five minutes, then put them in a vase of cool water. One or two men should do the scalding while a third cuts the poinsettias, if any quantity is to be cut. Do not store in a cold room; about the same temperature as that in which they were grown is best. They will wilt in a cold temperature. A. F. J. B.

TARIFF HEARING

WANT PROTECTION ON FOLIAGE.

Higher Duty Asked.

Protection for prepared foliages from the competition of foreign producers, which the firm says it cannot meet, has been asked of the Senate finance committee by the Ove Gnatt Co., of Laporte, Ind. These foliages were not taken care of in the Underwood (present) tariff law, for the first of these prepared foliages were manufactured by Ove Gnatt in 1913, the year the law was enacted. Under a Treasury decision, however, they were construed to come within paragraph 438 of the tariff act of 1909 and paragraph 347 of the present law.

Under this decision of the Treasury department prepared foliages were subjected to an ad valorem duty of sixty per cent. The Fordney bill proposes a rate of forty-five per cent ad valorem on natural leaves, plants, shrubs, herbs, trees and parts thereof, chemically treated, colored, dyed or painted. This, however, the Ove Gnatt Co. states, is too low.

The finance committee is considering the Fordney tariff bill. These commodities came up in connection with the sundries schedule and the case of this concern was presented by Representative Andrew J. Hickey, of Indiana. Fred Henoch, of this concern, had intended to appear in person, but was prevented from doing so by a death in his family.

Arguments to Finance Committee.

"We believe an ad valorem duty of seventy per cent, instead of forty-five per cent as provided by the House, is highly essential and necessary, if the industry is to survive," the finance committee was told.

"There are many items of prepared foliages made in this country which will be detrimentally affected by foreign competition, unless ample protection is afforded in the pending tariff legislation. Prior to 1913, these goods were all imported from Germany, Italy, France and the Scandinavian countries. In that year Ove Gnatt started the development of the industry in the United States and a slow but steady development ensued. With the advent of the war, which practically established a prohibition against the importations, the entire home consumption of the products was made in America, until today in excess of 2,000 people are employed in the manufacture of these items. Our wage scale, in American value, is from five to ten times greater than that paid in these foreign countries.

"Since the closing of the war many of these goods of foreign manufacture have appeared on the American market at prices which are absolutely ruinous to the home manufacturer. In many cases they are far less than the American cost of production without regard to profit or expense of carrying on trade.

Large Importations.

"There are about 400,000 pounds of oak leaves used annually in the United States, all of which were prepared here during the period of the war. Since the war these goods have been brought over from Germany and Italy in large quantities at a price about fifty per cent less than they can be produced and sold for here at a living profit. The same situation applies to beech leaves, of which about 150,000 pounds are used annually.

"About 3,000,000 ceyas leaves, which grow only on the island of Formosa, Japan, are used in the United States annually. Before the war the greater part of these were sent from Kobe, Japan, to Germany, where they were prepared and distributed throughout the

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

MAKING SERVICE SPECIAL.

I have read a number of articles in the trade papers in reference to the proposed elimination of special delivery on parcel post packages. Most of these writers protest against the removal of it without going into the matter far enough to determine what is really a benefit to them and what is not. They do not seem to realize that so many packages can be sent special delivery that practically the entire mail becomes "special," which, of necessity, eliminates anything special about it. In reality, it all becomes ordinary mail. As long as the special delivery fee is only 10 cents, this practice is going to continue. The postoffice authorities state, and any of us who observe the parcel post service will agree, that it is getting to be the custom to stick a special delivery stamp on all packages sent out, because any slight benefit it may receive is worth a dime. Now, what we all want is real special delivery service, and I would say that if we were charged 25 cents for the special delivery privilege on parcel post packages, it would only be used by people who actually did want that kind of service, thus reducing the amount of this kind of delivery to a point where this service could actually be given. I am sure everyone would be willing to spend 25 cents for a real service, so why not petition the Postoffice department to increase the rates rather than fuss around about removing something that, as a matter of fact, does not exist?

E. J. McCallum.

WERE YOU ONE OF THEM?

We wish you would put in The Review something about the unfairness of asking firms to make heavy shipments of bulbs by parcel post and not sending any postage. We received one order at wholesale prices for 880 No. 1 gladiolus bulbs. The florist paid for the bulbs and would not give us his express office. He wrote to send the bulbs by parcel post.

world. They are again appearing on our market from abroad at prices fifty per cent less than our cost of manufacture.

"About 500,000 pounds of lycopodium, or ground pine, are annually consumed in the United States. Ruscus is imported from Italy, France and Switzerland, both in the natural and bleached, to the amount of 400,000 pounds, which, when prepared and finished, weighs about 500,000 to 600,000 pounds. The German goods are again being offered in this market at from fifty to seventy-five per cent less than they can be sold for at the cost to manufacture here.

"Magnolias grow in abundance in Florida, Georgia and Alabama, and also in profusion in Italy, and some of the prepared leaves are beginning to come in from that country. American consumption of magnolia leaves approximates 1,000,000 per annum."

A. E. G.

Of course, we can make C. O. D. shipments, but then we have a lot of money tied up in the busy season. We received in one week last spring fifty parcel post orders and only two of those sending them had brains enough to send postage.

OYSTER SHELLS FOR FORCING.

The article, "Shells for Bulbs in Home," in The Review for November 10, in a way solves the problem of where we shall get pebbles to use in bowls of bulbs for home forcing.

My experience in this line may be of use also, as I have several dozen bowls of Paper Whites and Chinese lilies, in the forcing of which I used oyster shells. The roots grew at a rapid rate and those in one bowl, in particular, seemed to push the shells out, with the roots still clinging to them. This happened while they were still in the dark and had made no top growth. Oyster shells are plentiful in the south and east, and no shell possesses more lime nourishment for the bulbs.

IN A SMALL TOWN.

I am sending a copy of an advertisement which I ran over the signature of the Polo Greenhouse recently. It is, you will notice, an adaptation of the advertisement of United Candy quoted in the advertisement of George M. Stumpp in The Review of December 8. I changed the text there so as to apply it to flowers, making it read:

FLOWERS SPEAK ALL LANGUAGES.

They dry the tears of little children and wreath the faces of old age in smiles.

They are the unspoken message from the lover to his sweetheart; the token of continuing affection from husband to wife.

They bring joy to the home; comfort and good cheer to the absent.

Flowers mean happiness.

Polo, Ill., is a town of only 2,200 people, but by keeping at it all the time, I manage to make good. It is my belief we should aim to keep the idea of flowers before the people in the small town papers; it will help the little fellows and the whole trade as well. The big fellows are doing their part, and more, in the large city papers. I run some advertisement like the above every week. The local newspaper has a circulation of 3,000 in three counties.

HAVE YOU SENT IN YOURS?

At times I see our slogan used in the papers like this:

There is even the possibility war may reach a stage where you can say it with flowers.—New York Globe.

And it has made me feel good to think that we get good advertising for nothing. Certainly, it should bring in a few new pledges for our national publicity campaign.

MITTING IS STILL WANTED.

Your letter dated November 22 and also pages of The Review telling of the arrest of E. D. Roo Mitting are at hand and I wish to thank you warmly for the services given and the successful result you have obtained in locating this man.

I have also received a letter from the Nelson Nursery Co., with copies of telegrams to them from the sheriff at Fort Morgan, Colo., according to which Mitting admitted having obtained $450 from a "Honolulu party."

Through your letter I understand that the Nelson Nursery Co. did not respond quickly to the telegrams from the sheriff and that Mr. Mitting has been released on account of the delay in answering, which necessitated the holding of the criminal. If this is the case, I am sorry that Charles Nelson did not answer right away. Had he only answered immediately, perhaps through wireless, as requested by the sheriff, I might have been able to get hold of Mitting there in jail. But I have turned this matter over to my attorney and, as you requested in your letter, he is writing to the Post-office department in Washington, D. C., alleging that Mitting defrauded me through mails.

And at the same time I shall be even more obliged if you can help me by publishing again this matter in The Review, asking readers and police authorities for the arrest of Mitting and to hold this defrauder until they get in touch with me here in Honolulu for further information about my transaction.

I am also writing a letter to the sheriff at Fort Morgan, Colo., requesting him to write you in case he should locate Mitting. Any service in this matter will be deeply appreciated.

The Market.

Prices, in some cases, were a little better this week than they were last week. The mums are gone and the growers are thankful, for with the warm, bright days, the rose crop has been plentiful and now stock is beginning to show signs of a chance for a market. The carnation crop is late, in nearly every case, and few growers will cut for Christmas, but with such a crop of roses in sight, few retailers are worrying or are anxious to handle carnations when they can get roses for the same price. The average wholesaler is charging $8 per hundred this week and after Tuesday they will be charging $12 to $15 per

S. A. F. NEWS

SECRETARY'S OFFICE: 43 WEST EIGHTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK

Encouraging Returns.

The publicity committee feels much encouraged through the returns coming in to the secretary's office from the appeal recently sent out to the trade for further support in the work of promoting publicity for flowers. It is quite evident that a number of these new subscribers would have been subscribers long ago, could they have made up their minds as to the amount which they might consider an equitable one based on the aggregate business accomplished. In the letters sent out was a scale of subscriptions, based on gross incomes from $5,000 to $500,000, all as nearly as possible equivalent to one-tenth of one per cent, a percentage so small as hardly to be felt. Any florist who has not received a copy of this scale should write to the secretary for one.

A few requests have been received for information as to whether subscriptions pledged can be paid in instalments. The committee has time and again announced that subscriptions paid in this way are entirely satisfactory and are heartily welcomed. A great many florists have their establishments far removed from centers where alliances of florists' interests are working for our project and the personal support of such florists is most cordially invited. The publicity which the committee is arranging for must not be confused with local publicity—it is national entirely. That is why magazines are used solely. Magazines in their circulation know no bounds and have the same ratios in the smallest communities as they have in the largest. No home in which there is any refinement at all is without its magazine and, perhaps, the home has several. The committee's list of magazines embraces the most popular selections and is limited only by the amount of money available for contracts. That is why our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is so universal. It is in evidence everywhere and florists would be prejudicing their own interests did they fail to keep up their inimitable slogan. That other industries look upon the phrase with jealous eyes and seek to pervert it should be sufficient proof of its trade value. Their attempts to appropriate the sense of it only increases its great value to our own industry. Flowers express language—candy, jewelry and manufactured goods, never! That is our protection in the use of the best slogan ever conceived.

LABELING POTTED PLANTS.

Will you please state which method is most generally in use for labeling potted or set plants? Is the plant placed at the left or right of the label?

J. B.—O.

There are differences of opinion in regard to this matter; the majority seem to prefer the plant to the right of the label.

C. W.

PINCHING CALENDULA BUDS.

Can you tell me whether or not the first buds on calendula plants should be pinched out to make the stems better later on?

T. J. S.—N. Y.

Pinching out the center bud on your calendulas will cause the side shoots to come along more rapidly; these stems will then be longer than those of the center buds.

OBITUARY

Martin Reukauf.

Martin Reukauf was taken ill when in Detroit, December 12, and, returning to his home in Philadelphia, died two days later, Wednesday, December 14. He was 56 years of age.

Forty-two years ago, in 1879, the house of M. M. Bayersdorfer & Co. had three employees, Harry Bayersdorfer, the present head of the house, the basket maker who is still with the firm of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and a boy of 14. That boy was Martin Reukauf. He remained with the house of Bayersdorfer for forty-two years, with but one brief interruption.

Martin Reukauf advanced steadily as the business grew. He was the leading salesman of the house, who visited all the principal cities of the country, as far as the Pacific slope. He had a large circle of business friends, who looked forward with pleasure to his visits. Mr. Reukauf was of a cheery disposition, full of fun, possessed of a vein of dry humor that was greatly enjoyed by his associates, with whom he was extremely popular. They all feel his loss keenly.

The funeral of Martin Reukauf was held at his residence, 3012 North Broad street, Philadelphia, Sunday afternoon, December 18. There were many relatives and friends present and the members of the house of Bayersdorfer came to offer their last tribute of respect. Many beautiful floral offerings were sent to Martin Reukauf by his friends all over the country. From north, south, east and west they came, even from far California. He will be sadly missed. Phil.

Frederick Cave.

Frederick Cave, a well known and highly esteemed professional gardener, died at his home, at Canton, Mass., December 19, of cancer, after a long and painful illness, which was borne with remarkable fortitude. The deceased was born at Homiston Heath, near London, England, thirty-seven years ago. He had a good training there on private estates, including Holker Hall, the residence of the duke of Devonshire. He went to Kew gardens in 1909 and stayed there for two years, later coming to America.

In the United States he worked successively on estates at Framingham, Mass., and Brattleboro, Vt., and on the Lyman estate, at Canton, Mass. He was an active member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston and at the last club picnic took part in several athletic events. He had made many exhibits before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and was esteemed by a wide circle of friends.

He was married in 1914 and, besides his wife, leaves two children. He was a member of the Kew Guild and also of the A. F. & A. M. W. N. C.

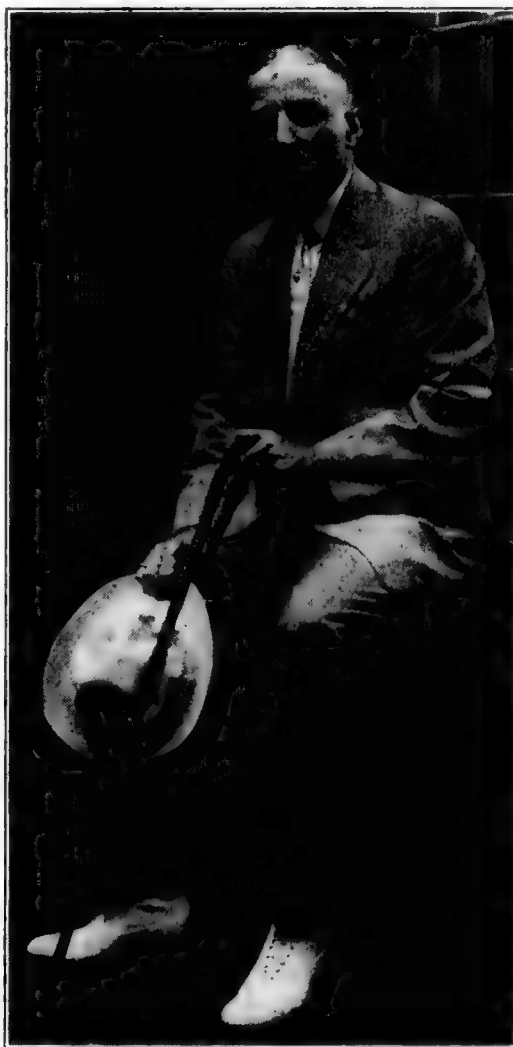

Mrs. M. Florence Dicks.

Mrs. Mary Florence Dicks, 73 years of age, died at the family home, 227 Spruce street, Leavenworth, Kan., December 4. She had been ill only five days and death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Dicks was prominent in church and social circles at Leavenworth. She was the widow of the late George Dicks, at one time one of the city's leading business men. She was born in Ireland January, 1848. When a child she came to the United States with her parents and settled at St. Louis. She was married to Mr. Dicks at St. Louis and the couple moved to Leavenworth more than forty years ago. Mr. Dicks died twenty-seven years ago.

The deceased was a member of the cathedral parish and always took an active part in its upbuilding and in work for the poor. The death of a son, Edward T. Dicks, last June was a severe shock to the mother and she had not been in the best of health since, although her last illness came upon her suddenly. Mrs. Dicks is survived by one daughter,

Martin Reukauf.

Miss Catherine Dicks, proprietor of the Custom Flower Shop; two sons, George Dicks, of the Dicks Cigar Co.; John Dicks, and two grandchildren. Funeral services were held in the cathedral the morning of December 7. Burial was in Mount Calvary cemetery. J. E. K.

NATIONAL GROWERS' MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the National Flower Growers' Association will be held at Hartford, Conn., in the Bond Annex hotel, Thursday, January 26, at 1 p. m.

All members and growers interested are invited to attend this meeting. Important changes in the by-laws will come up for consideration, along with other important subjects for discussion that will be of interest to the grower.

The American Carnation Society holds its annual meeting and exhibition at the same time and place. There will also be an exhibition of roses. To both of these exhibitions all commercial growers are invited to contribute, by staging some stock. J. F. Ammann, Sec'y.

NEW YORK TO KANSAS CITY.

At a meeting of the New York Florists' Club, held December 15, Paul Rigo, chairman of the committee on transportation to the Kansas City convention of the S. A. F., August 15 to 17, 1922, suggested two itineraries, one prescribing Kansas City as the limit and the other suggesting Yellowstone park. Upon motion of A. L. Miller, the first-mentioned itinerary was accepted. The route of this itinerary is as follows:

Terre Haute, Ind.—The J. W. Davis Co., now engaged in developing its plant department, has had an excellent holiday business. All the Christmas plants are sold and it has been necessary to telegraph many would-be customers that the order was received after stock had cleaned up. Preparations for an Easter crop of lilies, roses, etc., now are in order.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THIS is to remind you to send a copy of your Christmas advertisement to The Review.

IF there is any florist who does not read The Review we hope to reach him early in 1922.

EASTER in 1922 falls on April 16. That's only fifteen short weeks from the first of the year.

IT is the opinion of many in the trade that generally lower retail prices would induce the public to buy more flowers.

PROPOSED changes in freight rates on nursery and florists' stock are noted in the Nursery Trade Department this week.

EARLY orders of cut flowers and sales of blooming plants presage an excellent holiday business. Many of the growers of pot plants are completely sold out.

JUST a hop to Easter, then a skip to Mothers' day and a little jump to Memorial day and we are in the midst of a big spring business. How time flies when we are busy!

HIGH PRESSURE KNOBLE, known among his friends as "H. P.," landed at Castle Garden on Christmas day, 1884. It isn't everybody who can keep the pressure going higher and higher for thirty-seven years.

THE trade reviews covering the last week in the general mercantile field fail to reveal any pronounced change in conditions save the betterment naturally to be expected at the holiday season. This applies more particularly to retail business. The wholesale phase continues quiet, without striking feature. Dun's reports 573 failures, against 587 in the preceding week and 260 in the corresponding week last year.

HERE we are again, at the shortest day of the year. But, really, it does not seem so short as that day, a week ago, when we issued the Christmas Number, the largest Christmas edition ever called for by the trade, largest both in number of pages and number of copies printed. Had all been operated simultaneously, seventeen presses would have been required to print the Christmas Number. Or had one press only been available, it would have required about 255 hours of continuous operation, or thirty-two working days. Nearly seven and a half tons of paper were consumed.

GET ready for spring. If there is any surplus of stock it will be low-grade stuff, or that not ready in time.

SUNSHINE is perhaps the best anemone-flowered chrysanthemum so far developed, but it makes a lot of difference who grows it. Fine and salable as it is when disbudded and well grown, stock with which nature is permitted to take its course has nothing special to commend it.

PREPARATIONS at Hartford, Conn., indicate that the exhibition and meeting of the American Carnation Society to be held there January 25 to 27 will be worth a long trip. The New Englanders, not having had an important trade gathering in their midst for several years, are making up for that lack.

Do not let copies of The Review lie about in your store so that customers may peruse them or carry them away. Offers advertised in these columns are intended for the trade only, and you will save yourself and others annoyance by keeping them from the notice of persons for whom they are not intended.

WHEN the Tiger Store, at Monticello, Ind., printed in its newspaper advertisements, "Say It with Furniture—Flowers Fade," C. I. Switzer, proprietor of the Monticello Floral Co., sent the manager of the store a box of chrysanthemums, with this card, "Some Slogan: 'Say It with Flowers.' Yours for Service, C. I. Switzer." The perverted slogan has not appeared in the newspaper since.

CHRISTMAS greetings are sent out by W. H. Englehart, president of the Idlewild Greenhouses, Memphis, Tenn., in the form of a small white calendar, 5x6½ inches, simply adorned with a Yuletide scene. No advertisement of the concern appears on its face; a card hanging on the same bow, at the back, bears an engraved holiday verse and the signature. The firm's customers will save such a calendar to hang in the home.

THREE blooms have graced the Editor's desk of late, which drew unusual attention. They were of a two-colored sport of Ophelia, from the Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, Ill. While the petals mainly are yellow, the edges are a delicate pink, that deepens as the flower ages. As a corsage rose, it would, by reason of its coloring, be a real acquisition, provided it satisfied the grower in other respects. W. J. Keimel, who has several interesting sports at Elmhurst, watches this one with particular care.

FLORISTS' supply houses have had a good Christmas season, but quite different in some respects from those of recent years. Large advance orders were much less numerous, but late mail orders have come in by thousands, some buyers ordering by mail or long-distance telephone three or four times during December. That the same tendency exists in other lines of business is shown by the following note circulated by Fairchild's news service in the textile trades: "The spring season in women's apparel is not gathering the momentum in the wholesale trade that it has in other years at this time. The outstanding influence appears to be that buyers are following the recently adopted policy of not buying too far in advance of resale."

SLOGAN NOT TRADE-MARK.

Almost simultaneously with reading the open letter in The Review of December 8 headed, "Is This an Infringement?" I saw a quarter-page advertisement in a Muncie, Ind., paper in which a music house used the headline, "Say It with Music." Personally, I think we florists who have put so much money in our slogan ought to have the monopoly of its use, and, if possible, an effort ought to be made to see if we cannot. L. G. Barbier.

It has been stated by the secretary of the Society of American Florists many times that it is not possible to trade-mark a slogan such as ours, under the federal law. Nor was it thought advisable to do so, for in that event its circulation would have been much more restricted than it now is.

By the mental process of recollection, such parodies of our slogan as have been seen frequently of late serve to advertise the original, "Say It with Flowers." When the public sees "Say It with Music" or "Say It with Furniture" it recalls the original phrase. Thus is our slogan reinforced and the more widely advertised. There is no compliment so high as that of parody and no flattery so sincere as imitation.

CARNATION MEN AT HARTFORD.

The schedule of premiums for the thirty-first annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held at Hartford, Conn., January 25 to 27, has just been sent out by Secretary Baur. All entries must be in the secretary's hands not later than January 15. All competitive exhibits must be up by 1 p. m. January 25, except those for certificates of merit.

Headquarters will be at the Bond Annex, across the street from the Foot Guard Armory, where the exhibition is to be staged. Local florists are planning displays of various flowers, and the cut flower section of the American Rose Society will gather some rose exhibits.

Since this is the first visit of the society to Hartford, the New England carnation growers, whose number is considerable and whose reputation is high, plan to make this an extraordinarily good exhibition. The Hartford florists and the society's officers are also working for a particularly noteworthy showing.

The opening business session will be held Thursday morning, January 26, at 9 o'clock. At this time reports of officers and committees will be presented. Nominations for new officers and the next meeting place will be made. Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., will address the meeting on "The Carnation Industry—Past, Present, Future." The discussion on carrying carnation plants through the second year, begun at Washington last year, will be continued. A second session, for election of officers and any other business, will be held.

The banquet will be held Wednesday evening, instead of Thursday, as has been the custom in the past.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

H. L. O., Mo.—Chrysanthemum Victory.

W. G., Ill.—The white pompon is Peace; the pink, Western Beauty.

J. P., Mo.—The pompon blooms were so badly dried up that it was impossible to identify the variety.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market last week was poorly supplied with stock and there was really an insufficiency for the light demand usually apparent during the pre-Christmas season. The green goods men have seemed to enjoy a monopoly of business and vast quantities of green material arrived and departed. Prospects for holiday business furnish the principal topic for discussion in both markets, but prognostications vary as to whether it will be good or bad. The plantsmen, so far, appear to be satisfied with their sales, although admitting that they have not fared so well as they did last year at this time. Chrysanthemums continue to arrive, but the quality betokens the end of the crop. A good many pompons come in and they sell fairly well at prices running from 35 cents to $1.25 per bunch, the latter for the best flowers of the button variety, Christmas Gold.

Roses are in fairly good supply, with an excess of special grades in the hybrid tea varieties, which move slowly, grades No. 1 and extras meeting the best demand. Premier is arriving in exhibition form, showing what may be expected for the holidays. American Beauty is in good supply, but prices up to December 19 were unchanged.

Carnations are on the short side of the market, with every prospect of a light Christmas crop. The range of prices for December 17 for ordinaries was $10 to $12 per hundred, while sales were made December 19 at $12 to $15, with good clearances.

The orchid supply has not increased to any extent, and prices of cattleyas have advanced materially; they are now bringing $50 to $100 for Percivaliana, and as much as $200 for the best Trianae. Spray orchids move fairly well and there is a moderate demand for cypripediums.

The supply of white lilies is larger, but prices are unchanged. Lily of the valley was up and down during the week, but was strong December 19 at $3 to $8, with a light demand for the best grade. Rubrum lilies are in fair supply at $8 to $15 per hundred.

Violets are fairly plentiful, the best bringing $1 per hundred. Sweet peas are in only moderate supply, with a top price of $4 per hundred sprays.

In miscellaneous stock there is a wide selection. Paper White narcissi bring 60 cents per bunch, and the quality is good. A few tulips are coming in, and meet a small demand at $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen. Bouvardia is plentiful, but moves slowly. Cornflowers, mignonette, pansies, stevia, lilac and calendulas form the bulk of other offerings.

Various Notes.

J. K. Allen, of the Eighteenth street flower market, was receiving poinsettias last week with heads measuring eighteen inches across and unusually long stems, the largest seen in New York for a long time.

Roman J. Irwin, president-elect of the New York Florists' Club, is busy forming his committee slates for the coming year.

Joseph S. Fenrich, the Eighteenth street market wholesaler, is receiving a splendid holiday crop of roses from the Duckham-Pierson range, at Madison, N. J. The variety Premier is even finer than the cut of last Christmas. He is also receiving good shipments of the new rose, Mme. Butterfly, which is becoming a popular variety among retailers.

The bowlers in the trade are awaiting the announcement of the appointment of the New York Florists' Club's committee which will have power to select a team to enter the proposed bowling league. This league is expected to furnish the chief event in the bowling tournament, to be a feature of the S. A. F. convention in Kansas City next August. J. H. P.

Fleischman has leased the small store on the Forty-sixth street side of the new Straus building, adjoining the corner store recently rented to the Postal Telegraph Co. The lease is for a term of years, and the aggregate rental is approximately $75,000. Fleischman will occupy his new store about February 1, and will close his store at 500 Fifth avenue May 1. He has four stores in New York at present.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Club Meeting.

At a lively meeting held at the Hotel Bond December 12, twenty-six members of the Hartford Florists' Club enjoyed the venison dinner which Wallace Pierson so generously prepared.

It was the annual meeting and the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, W. W. Thomson; vice-president, J. R. Andrews; treasurer, J. A. Brodrib; secretary, George Marchant. Joseph McManus was elected as a new member of the executive committee.

It was with deep regret that all of the members present heard of the sad accident at the range of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, where one of the oldest employees on the place was injured by a large truck and died. A second catastrophe at this place was the killing of eighty-nine fine, sleek cattle, which failed to pass the tuberculosis test of the state. The sympathy of the trade is with Wallace Pierson and everyone at the dinner was disappointed at not being able to have him say a few words.

W. D. Howard, president of the American Carnation Society, was the guest of the evening and spoke highly of the good work which the florists of Hartford were doing for the coming show and convention, to be held in Hartford. Joseph Coombs, chairman of the finance committee, said that it would take approximately $2,000 for advertising and other expenses in connection with the coming flower show, apportioned on a scale equal to the size of the business of each florist and grower in the city. John Coombs is to be assessed $350; A. N. Pierson, Inc., $600; Spear & McManus, $250, and so on down to the smallest contributor, who would be assessed $5. Everyone was pleased with the assessment and thought that the advertising feature of the show would well repay them for the initial outlay. Great coöperation between all the growers and retailers is noted here.

Complimentary tickets for the coming show, transcribed by George F. Lane, chairman of the publicity committee, were ready for the members of the club so that they could be used with advantage in giving one to each customer who purchased cut flowers and plants during the Christmas holidays and could also be mailed out in the monthly statements.

Four members were admitted to the club, bringing the total membership to sixty.

Various Notes.

All of the florists here are busy preparing for the holiday rush and many have been working until midnight preparing wreaths and novelties. Four experts at George F. Lane's have been busy making up everlastings, arranging large, medium and small-sized baskets and bowls, which find a ready sale.

The full crew at John Coombs' is busy making wreaths and arranging other novelties, for which this firm has large orders. A miniature merry-go-round in full operation attracts the attention of the crowds who pass the store on Main street.

George F. Lane and other florists furnished several pieces for the funeral of George Solby, president of the Connecticut State Fair Association, who died recently.

John McDermitt, of Windsor, is supplying the local trade with laurel roping and other greens for the holidays. Paper Whites and other bulbs are beginning to flower at his place, for which he finds a good demand. C. B. M.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Growers were low in their spirits last week; the weather at the critical time was enough to explain either murder or suicide. For three days in succession no greenhouse near Chicago caught so much as a glimpse of the sun and then Old Man Winter jumped on the glass with both feet—snow and a 30-mile gale of all-night duration. But the next day nature and the growers smiled again; it was cold and clear, ideal weather for bringing on the Christmas crop and putting color and crispness into the flowers. It often is Chicago's portion to have dull, dark weather just before Christmas, but we are hoping for the best. Such conditions as those at the end of last week would be disastrous; such weather as that at the start of this week, if continued, will be worth thousands in dollars and unreckonable sums in satisfaction.

Business last week showed the usual pre-holiday conditions. There was not much stirring, activity being principally in anticipation of the holiday, but even with the light demand prices began to advance. While the weather was not favorable to the production of flowers, there were evidences that growers were accumulating stock against the holiday demand. No amount of preaching, admonition or experience will stop this practice. Of course everybody knows that a little stock must be held back if Christmas orders are to be filled, but to ship no carnations for a week after December 12, as one or two growers are reported to have done, is sheer folly. The carnation supply last week was so short that good prices were obtainable and flowers a week old will not be sent out on orders by any wholesaler in his right mind. Consequently the grower who pickles his stock might just about as well throw it away. It is evident that rose growers, too, have held back a considerable part of recent cuts.

There are various reports as to the prospects for Christmas. Some houses are declining further orders, and have been doing so for several days. Others say they are booked up on carnations, or on short roses, while still able to accept orders for medium and long roses and for most items of miscellaneous stock.

At this date it is impossible to form even a conjecture as to how Christmas will turn out. Apparently there is assurance of a large volume of business.

The number of orders seems to be at least as great as a year ago and many of the orders are larger than they were then, though most of them are lighter on the more expensive grades of stock. With this assurance of a big demand, the outcome still is uncertain, because no one can correctly foretell the supply.

The weather was bad. Then it was good. The difference between bad weather and good weather this week might mean 25,000 to 50,000 roses more or less in each one of half a dozen of the larger wholesale houses.

Most of the wholesale houses will be open Saturday night, some of them nearly all night. They will be open Sunday, December 25, some until noon and some all day. They all will be open Monday, December 26, at least until noon. The men in the market mean to go the limit in the effort to give good service to those who buy cut flowers here.

Growers' Meeting.

The approach of the holidays was evident in the small attendance at the meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago at the Hotel Randolph December 15. The small gathering, however, made possible a thorough discussion of some topics of much interest to members of the organization.

Following the same course of thought that was presented at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club one week before, the members present expressed the belief that a spring flower show would be welcome and successful in Chicago in 1922. Opinion was unanimous on this point. The method of inaugurating such an event was less definite. The notable success on the north side in November led to suggestions of the use of the same location in the spring, with a show at the Broadway Armory of flowers exclusively. So strong seemed the desire for such a means of bringing flowers to the public at a time when it is felt it will be of much value, just before Easter, that it was voted unanimously to authorize the flower show committee to confer with others interested and, if necessary, call a special meeting of the organization to lay plans for the show.

A meeting, it was voted, will be had of the executive committee and the wholesalers with a view to increasing the growers' contribution to local publicity to one per cent of their receipts. The sentiment is strong among members of this organization that a larger fund is needed, and the results from the campaign so far have been so beneficial that it is believed a doubling of the growers' contribution will be a wise move.

The request of the Chicago Florists' Club that a joint meeting of the two organizations be held in February, for the purpose of inspecting novelties staged at that time, was acceded to.

One new member was added, the Angel Guardian Florist, 2001 Devon avenue.

Various Notes.

Ruscus cleaned up in good shape this Christmas; there are only small quantities here and there and the price has stiffened as the season progressed. On the other hand, frieze in both red and green is in large supply. A month ago buyers were telegraphing around the country in the endeavor to locate frieze, but recent late shipments from Japan have not only eased the market, but congested it, most of the demand having passed.

Death came to Hedvig Louise Fredrickson Soderberg December 15, at the home of her son-in-law, Frank M. Johnson, 2120 Estes avenue, Rogers Park. Interment was at Rosehill Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Soderberg was 67 years of age. Two children survive, Mrs. Ellen Johnson, wife of the general manager of the A. L. Randall Co., and Edward Soderberg, who has charge of the Johnson-Randall manufacturing interests at Traverse City, Mich.

The 10-year-old daughter of Harry Goldstein, a director in the A. B. C., was taken away last week, the funeral being held privately from Sarah Morris hospital December 13. The child's mother, Lorraine Beilman Goldstein, is the sister of Mrs. A. Miller.

The A. B. C. put a million valley pips in cold storage last week.

Frank Weber, formerly of St. Louis, is opening a new flower store at 664 North State street.

T. E. Waters says that the last Christmas order went out from the Poehlmann supply department December 17, leaving a week open for rush calls. It has been a good season, according to Mr. Waters, but one involving an unusual amount of work because, instead of placing one large order well in advance,

Time in its flight pauses for no man; NOW is the time to act.

C. L. Sherer visited Detroit, Cleveland, Akron and Cincinnati at the end of last week. He says Cincinnati is doing an active business and that the florists in the other places visited feel that general business in their communities has turned the corner and will pick up steadily from now on.

No rose grower has hoped more urgently for sunshine than George J. Ball. A splendid Christmas crop of calendulas at Glen Ellyn has been awaiting a day when the sun appears, to bring them into full bloom. They rest half-open during the cloudy weather. Six 100-foot beds, each containing 1,500 plants, are devoted to the Ball strain so much in demand on this market.

H. E. Humiston, who travels in the interest of the fertilizer department of A. Henderson & Co., returned December 19 from the southeast, to spend the holidays at home.

Unless growers receive an adequate return on their money, they will be inclined to invest their earnings in securities at present high rates of interest rather than devote them to enlarging their glass area, is the opinion of Otto Amling. Such a tendency on growers' part indicates, in his estimation, a further danger in recent low wholesale prices.

Fred Lautenschlager has not been at his desk at Kroeschell Bros. Co. since the flower show at the Auditorium hotel. After the Florists' Club meeting, December 8, which he rose from a sickbed to attend, he suffered a relapse. Further lancing by his physician has relieved him somewhat, but he is still confined to bed.

The Tribune's "Inquiring Reporter" wanted to know what the Broadway florist thought of a street car subway and got this answer: "A subway system with terminals in the loop would only increase congestion, and never solve Chicago's transportation problem. Expansion outside the loop alone will increase business as a whole, as well as helping the loop." Typical of the views of florists whose interests are in the outlying business districts, don't you think?

was born in Bavaria in 1854 and came to Chicago in 1873.

One of the week's visitors was Gilbert MacLean, Madison, Wis. Beginning by forcing vegetables, the MacLean greenhouses are being converted to cut flowers and other florists' crops. It is found that flowers pay better than vegetables, principally because of the competition of Californian and southern stock.

George Pieser, formerly with Johnson & Chronis, who is now located in St. Louis, has been here this week.

One of the week's visitors in the market was George Scott, for many years with E. F. Winterson. He is now located at Grand Junction, Mich.

Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, was a visitor in the market December 20. For many years J. Breitmeyer's Sons have been large buyers here. Their Christmas purchases are important, especially as they use principally the longest and finest grades of flowers. Mr. Breitmeyer said all Detroit florists are confident of a good, if not a record business.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was fairly good about all last week. A great many growers have a large home retail trade for Christmas and are not now sending much in, but there has been sufficient for the demand. Roses have not been doing so well and have shown a softening tendency, especially in short and medium stems. The majority of sales have varied from $6 to $16 per hundred, with some fancies higher, reds, of course, bringing the highest prices. Carnations have advanced to $10 to $12 per hundred, and December 19, $12 per hundred seemed to be a general average for colored flowers. There is a heavy crop of white in sight and white, probably, will not realize much over $8 per hundred for the holidays. Reds, crimsons and Laddie are bringing the best prices.

Violets are rather a slow trade, with the most of them at $1.50 per hundred; prices may run $1 more, later in the week, but will not reach last year's figures. Some growers report light picks in sight; others, unusually heavy. Chrysanthemums are still here, such as they are, but the present week should clean them up. Some fine single stems and pompons are still seen. Sweet peas are not of good quality. The best make $2.50 to $3 per hundred. Myosotis is not yet abundant; there was a good call December 17 for this flower for "Forget-Me-Not day" for charitable contributions. Callas are in better supply and selling well. Lilies are a little more abundant. Paper Whites, at $3 to $4 per hundred, are in heavy oversupply and stevia never seemed so abundant. There are some calendulas, as yet rather short-stemmed, yellow marguerites, snapdragons, mignonette and Soleil d'Or narcissi. Gardenias are scarce and selling at $12 per dozen. Of cattleyas few are seen and prices have advanced to $24 per dozen. Cypridiums are in good supply. Bouvardia is getting scarce. Valley is in abundant supply, with only a moderate demand. Cut poinsettias are offered at $2 to $6 per dozen; at the higher price the bracts are unusually large. Some cut Euphorbia jacquiniæflora is also on sale.

Plant trade is now active, much more so than cut flower business. Prices average lower all around than a year ago, as was to be expected. Cyclamens remain easily the favorites and are selling heavily, salmon pink being the best seller. Poinsettias are offered in fine condition, with ample foliage. Retailers are always a little afraid of these, fearing a cold wave, which severely cripples their sale. Begonias are good and moving quite well. Oranges are well fruited and few unripe fruits are seen. Ardisias and solanums are fine and in big demand. Pans of euphorbia are nice and some good cinerarias, primulas, ericas, camellias and late chrysanthemums are also offered.

There is a tremendous demand for holiday greens of all kinds and the retail buyers who come in often can pick up many of these. There seems to be a marked scarcity in the local crop of ilex, alder and other berries, also of spruce cones, and many shipments are coming from Michigan and other points. Holly, as a rule, is not well berried, and is much inferior to a year ago. Laurel wreathing is in heavy demand. Wreaths containing evergreen cones and berries are popular and in heavier call than ever for store decoration.

Various Notes.

At the Waban Conservatories, Natick, once the most noted rose-growing establishment in the east, Mr. Anderson, of Woburn, who took over the place some time ago, has every house planted with promising-looking crops. Several are devoted to single violets and these are blue with flowers. Sweet peas occupy considerable space; two large houses are filled with carnations and others contain roses, calendulas, etc. Considering that there are some 250,000 feet of glass here and that the present owners have not had it long, they have made surprising progress.

M. L. Davey, of the Davey Tree Expert Co., Kent, O., has been here for some time and, after looking over the devastated area of Massachusetts, stated that it is the greatest disaster to trees he had ever witnessed. His firm now has a big force of men in this territory, in common with concerns from New York, Connecticut and elsewhere.

B. Harris, of Union square, Somerville, was elected a member of the board of aldermen of Somerville by a handsome majority at an election there last week.

Frank H. Traendly and Eugene Dailledouze, of New York, were callers last week and visited Thomas Roland and other well known growers near Boston; they visited also in New Hampshire.

December, up to date, has been an unusually favorable month for flower production. We have had thirteen clear days out of nineteen. The temperature December 17 rose to 56 degrees and, on the following day, to 60 degrees. December 15, the mercury fell below zero in some suburban sections.

received in town for the holidays. Welch Bros. Co. is selling a large quantity of it.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club's January meeting will come one week later than usual, owing to the hall being rented on the regular date. Officers will be installed and it will be ladies' night. Carnation night is postponed until February 28, while the annual banquet will come two days later, March 2.

Neal Boyle, of Malden, Mass., has an extra fine lot of roses this season, Columbia, Double White Killarney and Ophelia are his leaders. He will again devote one large house to giganteum lilies, which are always well done here.

Leading cyclamen growers, like Thomas Roland, Frank Edgar, Wollrath & Son, R. & J. Farquhar Co. and F. E. Palmer, are already well sold out of stock. A good number of cyclamens have been shipped to New York and Philadelphia and many have gone to Connecticut cities. Prices rule easier than a year ago.

Paul E. Richwagen, the well known Needham florist, is dangerously ill with pneumonia. Mr. Richwagen's condition December 16 and 17 was such that the services of a specialist were needed. He is somewhat better at the time of writing.

The Market.

The holiday season is coming on and business is expected to be fair, but not so good as in former years of plenty. The retailers are complaining of the high prices quoted on most cut flowers, and it is predicted that flowers will be cheap on the wholesale market just before Christmas, as most florists are ordering lightly and are saying that they would rather lose some sales than be caught with an oversupply at the present prices quoted.

Carnations will not be handled in any profusion, except by those who grow their own and have plenty.

Cyclamen plants and poinsettias are plentiful and will create a big demand, as they will sell at a price that should move them in a hurry. Plants of all

A fine Thanksgiving business was reported by all the florists and in future years some coöperative advertising will help a great deal on this date. Flowers in the future should have a place of prominence on this day. A run on cemetery wreaths was reported on this day, which is something unusual.

The windows here are taking on a bright holiday appearance, with the near approach of Christmas, and the people are getting their different supplies early.

The Market.

The Christmas business promises well; not a wholesaler in this market has the least fear that he will not clean up well. Advance orders have been heavy and placed early, but stock will be plentiful. The rose crop is just right and of splendid quality, but carnations will be scarce and, consequently, high. Plants of all kinds for the season are of the best and there will be enough of them. The wholesale situation is bright, as the admonition to shop early has been taken literally and overworked. Never has so much flower shopping been done as there has been this year. The looking around began early in November. What each florist offers in the way of merchandise and novelties is known, together with the price, to a great number of persons, for they have made the rounds. Buying has been postponed until the last week and probably will be until the last of the week. Flowers are the last thing to be bought. The real spirit of buying does not show itself until Christmas eve and those who have flowers in mind as a gift reserve enough money to spend for something good in this line. The most optimistic florists believe that they will have good trade.

E. A. Humfeld's plants never looked better, he says. He has a good crop of roses.

The Florists' Club featured lower prices in its advertising in the local newspapers December 18. Display advertising for the associated florists was run several days the week before Christmas. Advertising by the individual florists was heavy.

Joseph Austin has been shipping stock quite heavily. He has not had to go outside of his own greenhouses for anything this year. His carnations will be a little late, but he has a large number in bud.

W. J. Barnes has made up a great many cemetery wreaths and has already sold more than fifty. He believes this is a line in which florists can work up a good business, and that it would be much better for them to try to find new lines in their own field than to try to get one another's business.

O'Connell's Flower Shop had two funerals last week; for one of them there were twenty-three large pieces ordered. This delayed Christmas work somewhat, so Mr. O'Connell has found it necessary to work at night in order to catch up.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. is selling more florists' supplies than it ever sold in any previous season. Two growers are shipping white, pink and yellow mums to this firm, and the average price for which the flowers are selling is better than it was at Thanksgiving. The firm is well supplied with choice stock for the holidays.

Miss Catherine Dicks, of Leavenworth, Kan., was in the city December 15.

Samuel Murray and Arthur Newell spent December 15 in St. Joseph. They were guests of Frank X. Stuppy.

James D. Ragan, Hickman Mills, Mo., has been sending in red and pink gladioli. These flowers are a distinct novelty for this time of year.

Longview Farm has one house, 250 feet long, full of Milady roses. There will be a cut of 1,000 a day at least half of this week. T. J. Noll will have 12,000 roses from Longview Farm and 10,000 from Eric Fransden.

Earl Lacey, of H. Kusik & Co., says that he finds business so far just as good as it was last year before holiday time. He expects to have plenty of roses, but not more than half enough carnations.

Samuel Murray's Melior begonias are better this year than ever. Prices are more reasonable, although the price of coal is higher than it was even in war time, with one exception. Mr. Murray paid $15 a ton for coal only once during the war. He has paid that for all his coal this winter and has burned $600 worth so far. He uses the best semi-anthracite coal, because it is cleaner and gives better results in every way.

Frank X. Stuppy and Thomas Best, of St. Joseph, Mo., were in the city December 14. Mr. Stuppy says he is firmly convinced that there must be a reduction in flower prices or the business will suffer. Mr. Stuppy recently returned from the south, where he found the retail market rather quiet on account of high prices. "Florists expect too much profit, because they have become accustomed to high prices," Mr. Stuppy said. "We must all take a reduction in prices or suffer the consequences in the long run."

Mrs. Roy Sansom is back in A. Newell's shop for a month to help through the rush.

signors. There will be a fine cut of roses in the greenhouses of the Stuppy Floral Co., some of which will be sent to this market. Glenn K. Parker, manager of the Stuppy Supply Co., believes that the biggest demand will be for medium-priced stock.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. will cut between 15,000 and 18,000 Richmond roses for Christmas.

The store of the William L. Rock Flower Co. is decorated outside with southern smilax and Christmas trees. The display window is a beautiful sight, with Christmas candles burning, baskets of blooming plants, glowing poinsettias and a variety of other plants and cut flowers.

William Fitzhugh has resigned his position with the Muehlebach Flower Shop and has gone to the Alpha Floral Co.

Mrs. C. A. Rennacker has closed out her display of Bergman & Koropp's artificially prepared flowers and grasses and has placed the goods in the high-class art shops of the city. Mr. and Mrs. Rennacker have the agency for these goods in Missouri and Kansas.

The regrettable demise of Mrs. Mary Florence Dicks, 73 years of age, which occurred December 4, is further reported on the obituary page of this issue of The Review. J. E. K.

Plymouth, Mich.—Two new greenhouses, 16x80 feet, are being erected at Sunshine Acres Greenhouses, which will be used for the production of flowering and vegetable plants for the spring trade. This addition will bring the Sunshine Acres range up to approximately 7,000 square feet of glass.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The week before is over, leaving the market in better shape than it found it. There were two important features, the cold, dark weather and the decline of the chrysanthemums. The supply was so reduced that the opening of the big week will not find much accumulation. As shipping commenced December 20, it is believed that business will keep the stock moving.

Carnations continue to lead in activity. They have advanced in price and are much sought, especially the bright colors. Short roses advance in price with carnations and share with them in activity. There are chrysanthemums and there probably will be chrysanthemums for a month to come, but, with the exception of varieties like the yellow pompon, Christmas Gold, they have ceased to be of importance. Stevia and Paper Whites are important. Snapdragons and sweet peas are interesting. Poinsettias seem to be avoided as cut flowers. Beauties and fancy roses, notably Premier, are increasing. Violets and valley are dull; so are all lilies. Fancy cypripediums are shortening, but there is plenty of insigne and a fine lot of gardenias and cattleyas. Greens of every description are abundant.

A Money-Maker.

About this time last season the Baltimore street merchants offered a little bunch made of red dahlias, artificial, and a spray of laurel, natural, for a quarter. They sold immense quantities of these little bunches, on which they doubled their money. This year they tried the same thing and failed entirely. However, in this city it was different. These bright little bunches of artificial dahlias and natural laurel were new here and they sold madly. The street men bought all the dahlias that the big supply houses in this city could make and color red. They bought all the dahlias that their Baltimore brethren had left over. They bought all that could be made in New York; still they had not nearly enough. They bought so much laurel to make up with the dahlias that whenever a street man went into a wholesale house he was at once asked whether he wanted laurel and he always said yes.

The florists' supply merchants are unanimous in their belief that the demand for artificial red dahlias is simply a fad now past and unlikely to return.

The Christmas Situation.

Every retailer knows the broad lines of the difficulty. Red is the Christmas color. People want red at Christmas and will pay to get it, but it is not needed much at ordinary times and so not much red is grown for cutting—a few roses, but hardly any carnations. The rest must be made with blooming plants that bear red flowers, red bracts and red berries and the greatest resource of all is the red novelty baskets, ribbons, paper novelties and what not.

Red cut flowers have not increased in proportion to the increase in the size of market. Here is the situation as regards the market, as it appears one week before Christmas:

Alfred Burton has been successful in flowering the most difficult rose to grow, American Beauty. He will have—barring accidents—about 3,000 long-stem-tinect horticultural success in flowering the new dahlia-flowered zinnias at St. Leonards. The term horticultural success is used in distinction to commercial success, because this new type of zinnias has not yet been perfected. There is a bed and a half of these new zinnias at St. Leonards, or between 400 and 500 linear feet of bench surface covered with a mass of show blooms of great size in a variety of colors. The term decorative, dahlia-flowered zinnias conveys a clear idea. They are the zinnia family, with the lightness strongly brought out, but they have the dahlia flowers in size and form. The colors are the colors of the zinnia, improved; here, probably, is the weakest point of these dahlia-flowered zinnias, commercially. For they came into competition with the entire chrysanthemum family and their colors were unequal to the test. In one color, at least, the zinnia far out-rivals the chrysanthemum; that is, in a glowing scarlet. This scarlet is so fine as to suggest the finest scarlet carnation intensified in color and large in size. Perhaps we may have other colors of equal merit in time.

An Aeroplane View.

It occurred to the bright minds who control the destinies of the Andorra Nurseries that the scope of their work could best be brought before the public by securing the bird's-eye view of the nurseries from on high. It is easy just to say 1,100 acres under cultivation—easy to say, easy to forget. It is quite a different matter to show in one photograph all of those 1,100 acres planted in trees and shrubs. How to do it? That was the question. Properly done, it mere speck thereon. On the second attempt the flyer sailed lower, but sailed, alas, across the rows; result, a Jersey jungle. Then the heads of the Andorra Nurseries and the flyer held a council of war. Dick was sent for. Dick is an employee of the Andorra Nurseries, who flew overseas during the great war. Dick was sent up with the flyer, peering anxiously over the side. He ordered the flight down the rows. At a height of 500 feet he cried, "Now!" So the flyer descended, the photographer replaced Dick and on the third try a wonderfully clear view of the entire nurseries was obtained by flying down the rows at a height of 500 feet above the earth.

seedling, American Legion, Adolph Poehlmann, uncertain about trying the rose and driven into a corner, said, "Here is the man to grow your roses." Mr. Poehlmann referred to Stephen Mortensen, of Southampton, who chanced to be standing near. It is an old axiom that many a true word is said in jest, and so it proved in this case. Mr. Mortensen bought 4,000 American Legion, planted them in two of his oldest houses, the pioneers of his place at Southampton, and today he has an exceptionally fine lot of American Legion growing there. It may be that they are the finest lot of American Legion seen in these parts so far; most likely they are; at all events, they are producing freely high-grade stock and the canes are breaking nicely from the cuts. As seen at Mr. Mortensen's place at Southampton, American Legion has a place in the cut flower market, the place formerly held by medium-grade American Beauties, of which there are never enough. American Legion is not so large as American Beauty and resembles it only in part, but when well grown, American Legion is a fine rose that has won praise from flower lovers and from critics.

Various Notes.

The Germantown Horticultural Society has elected the following officers for 1922: President, Edward C. Jellett; vice-presidents, Mrs. H. S. Prentiss-Nichols, Dr. T. Pearson Willetts, and Alexander McIlwee; secretary, George Redles; treasurer, Caspar Wistar Haines. Theodore Thompson, of Kennett, Pa., and Edward H. White, of Hammonton, N. J., were here December 17.

Joseph Goetter, of Lansdowne, has Laddie, Ward and Matchless carnations in fine shape. Mr. Goetter's fine vase of Richmond chrysanthemums, exhibited before the Florists' Club last month, was accidentally omitted.

While in this city E. G. Hill called on George E. Campbell, at Flourtown, and admired his fine 15-year-old Richmond, that are just right for Christmas.

James W. Heacock, Robert Jamieson and William Lausterer have been over nearby pastures.

The plant men believe that the higher express rate has reduced the out-of-town demand.

Charles Henry Fox has complimented the Joseph G. Neidinger Co. on its artistic thistle wreaths.

Martin Reukauf is greatly mourned by many friends. Further notice of his death is on the obituary page of this issue.

Phil.

NEWARK, N. J.

Early Christmas sales, though not so large as they have been in some years, have, nevertheless, been satisfactory, considering general business conditions. Supplies of Christmas plants are in stock and large numbers of them have been sold for Christmas day delivery.

Cut flowers will be delivered Friday and Saturday preceding Christmas. The quality of plants and flowers is good and prices are reasonable, although they are higher than they have been for the last few weeks. Poinsettias are high. Carnations are selling for $2 per dozen.

James J. Plunkett, Bradford place, reports early Christmas trade as good. He reports an unusually large number of weddings for this time of the year.

PLANTING CABBAGE.

Will you kindly advise me whether or not it will be safe to plant Copenhagen Market cabbage seed as early as January 15? Growers in this locality have had trouble in the past with early-sown Copenhagen plants going to seed in the field. We should like to transplant twice, and we are advised against this procedure. We are anxious to plant as early as possible, in order that these plants may be out of the way of the tomato plants.

C. R. R.—Mich.

I consider January 15 too early to start Copenhagen Market cabbage, as you are tolerably sure to have a good many plants bolt from such early sowing. I consider February 15 as early as it is advisable to sow this cabbage. The plants can be transplanted twice and will be of ample size in two months' time and I suppose April 15 is as early as you can plant out with safety in your latitude.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

OPINION of the attorney-general of California declaring inoperative the recently passed law requiring a $10 license and $1,000 bond for persons who wished to ship horticultural products into the state, will be found in the Nursery Trade Department of this issue.

Oregon City, Ore.—More than $12,000 damage was done December 8 by a fire at the greenhouses of J. T. Serres, of Clackamas Heights. A gasoline explosion in the garage about 10 o'clock started the conflagration, which destroyed the garage, 150 cords of wood, an automobile, a truck, and burned down four greenhouses. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

By Late Wire.

Owing to washouts on the railroads, the express company is taking shipments subject to delay. But the improvement in the weather has made wholesalers hopeful of getting everything through to their customers.

The Market.

The usual slackness before a holiday has been apparent this week. The wise retailer has spent the spare time in preparing for the Christmas rush which is coming, and the unwise is bemoaning conditions generally and prophesying disaster for the trade as a whole. Again the folly of growing poor and trashy stock has been shown. The weather has been so fine that gardens are still full of flowers; consequently poor stock is not in demand, but there never was a time when good stock sold so freely. Take the item of roses as an example; every morning the wholesale houses and market are cleaned up of good stock, while the poorer grades are hanging around all day waiting for a retailer with cheap funeral work to come around. Heather, when of good color and well flowered, is taken at once, while the poor stock has a forlorn appearance which does not improve day by day the longer it is kept. There never was a season when so much of this stock has been sold for the Christmas trade as the amount being sold this year. Poinsettias are plentiful and of good quality. Sweet peas are shortening up and growers are getting better prices than they did some time ago. Carnations are much more plentiful than they usually are at this time. Callas are selling freely, but the number in sight is not large. Valley and orchids are about equal to the demand. In pot plants the cyclamen easily leads, although there are some good azaleas, begonias and other basket stock, as well as good poinsettias in all sizes. Greens of all kinds are plentiful, but the demand seems insatiable and carload after carload is being used in decorative work.

Various Notes.

George F. Otto and his son, of San Diego, brought a party of friends up to the city last week in his automobile. Mr. Otto was buying stock for his Christmas business.

Daniel Stathatos, of the Broadway Florist, has no use for calamity howlers. When asked how business was likely to be at Christmas, he said that he did not know, but he was going ahead and buying a larger stock than usual, so as to be ready when the business came.

Roy F. Wilcox, of Montebello, has begun the construction of his new residence, near the nursery.

J. S. Armstrong, of Armstrong's Nurseries, has opened a retail flower store in connection with the sales yard on North Euclid avenue, Ontario, Cal., the opening taking place December 10. Great improvements have been made in the course of the alterations and it is now one of the most attractive places in California.

The Pasadena Horticultural Society recently visited the range of W.

Armstrong & Co., at Sawtelle. The members having automobiles gave the ones who had none a lift, and all were delighted with the visit.

Fred Howard and Roy F. Wilcox have returned from a trip to San Francisco, where they attended the meeting of the executive committee of the California Association of Nurserymen. Unfortunately, Mr. Howard contracted a severe cold and is still suffering from its effects.

Charming baskets are being sold at wholesale at the American Florists' Exchange by Wright's Flower Shop. They are made up in the well known style characteristic of this firm's work and are selling freely to the smaller retailers who have not the conveniences to make them up for themselves. Finely colored dracaenas, cyclamens and Begonia Melior are skillfully used with ferns, the latter being evidently an excellent keeper.

WE NEVER MISS

What Will You Get Out of Christmas?

We don't mean how many plants you are going to sell, how many F. T. D. orders you expect to deliver, or how much money you hope to make.

We often feel that we Florists are so busy making Christmas for other people that we miss the real spirit of the day. No other business does so much to make the world a brighter, better and happier place for folks to live in. We are entitled to some of the joy of the day ourselves.

Let's see how many people we can make happy this Christmas. A "Merry Christmas" comes pretty hard after working all the night before, but let's try to manage it somehow. Let's bring Peace and Good Will to our own stores and packing sheds. Patch up the disagreements and misunderstandings and mend the broken friendships. Forget to be the cautious business man for once and feed the tramp at the door. Help fill the milk bottles for the Belgian babies, buy some pencils from the lame man, drop a coin in the cup of the blind man. Send some plants to the old people in the County Farms, some blossoms to the little children in the city slums. Then you will have a real Christmas yourself.

We've enjoyed serving you this year. We have tried to do it well. We hope that you have had a prosperous year. We wish you all a MERRY CHRISTMAS.

THE BEST IN THE WEST

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The wholesale store of the E. C. Ameling Co., on Wall street, has been re-modeled and is brought up to date in every way. Mr. Ameling personally superintended every detail of the work. The idea at this store is to have every order, large or small, taken care of on the shortest notice and Mr. Ameling's large experience in Chicago is serving him in good stead in this respect. One of the salient features in the business of this firm is the shipping of goods to wholesalers in other centers in such quantities that the retailers in these cities can call on their local wholesalers for whatever they need in California stock, instead of shipping direct in small quantities. This sort of action certainly has all the earmarks of progress.

One of the meanest thefts possible was that by a party of miscreants supposed to be baseball players that broke into the lath house of the Precht & Weitella nursery, at Montebello, Cal., and pulled up about three dozen camellias in full bloom. The plants were pulled up by the roots and the women of the party hid the plants in the folds of their clothes. These plants were carried away in automobiles and the women defied Mr. Precht to touch them or the plants while the male members of the party made their get-away. Both Mr. Precht and the city marshal were roughly handled by the crowd of players and their friends.

"Strictly wholesale" is the slogan at the store of Walter Armacost & Co. and it is said that Mr. Armacost or someone else connected with the establishment will even go so far as to escort ladies west on Fourth street to a retail florist when these ladies insist on buying plants or flowers. Whether or not this is so, it is, nevertheless, a fact that no camouflaged retailing, "red violet" business or anything of the kind is allowed here and this accounts for the high repute in which the firm is held by retailers. Another large consignment of baskets arrived this week by express in order to keep the stock filled in every line and size. In the shipping department it has been almost impossible to keep up with orders, especially in high-class stock, and the store is a busy place from early morning on. Last week shipments of plumosus to the middle west have been extra heavy, possibly owing to the unfavorable weather conditions in Florida, which are usually mirrored here by a big demand for cut plumosus.

The Market.

Earlier in the season, growers made a special effort to produce good stock in preparation for the Christmas trade. The result is now seen in a large amount of excellent stock. Violets are in their prime, and are exceedingly plentiful. All of the most popular varieties of roses are now being cut, and the stock is good. Carnations are fairly plentiful. A few of the large chrysanthemums are still coming in, but they have not good shipping qualities. The medium-sized and the pompon mums are fairly plentiful and a good deal of this stock will be available through the holidays. The quality, while satisfactory, is not at its best. There is a large quantity of cut Scotch heather in the market and potted heather is also fairly plentiful. Poinsettias, both cut and potted, are now being shown in profusion. Greens are everywhere in evidence, as it is merely a question of bringing them in from the woods, which are green all winter. English holly and California red berries are being sold extensively, while straw-flowers, carefully dried, are plentiful.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The leading florists are well stocked with poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, ferns and various plants for basket work. There are also some good carnations for the Christmas trade.

The florists of Portland entered into the spirit of music week most wholeheartedly by making appropriate displays artistically grouped in their windows. In one window an attractive display of chrysanthemums surrounded a violin; in another a bust of Beethoven was surrounded by flowers and standing on one side was a harp, wrought in gay blooms; a third featured the Oregon rose song, attractively arranged among blooms, while a fourth decorated a phonograph in a pleasing and artistic manner.

The large basket of roses presented to Marshal Foch, on his recent visit to Portland, consisted of the finest blooms obtainable; every rose had been carefully selected and the blooms used were Russell, Mrs. J. C. Ainsworth and Ophelia. The basket was the gift of the Portland Rose Society and was presented to the marshal on behalf of the society by Miss Anne Dempsey and Miss Anna Slagel, two nurses who saw active service on the field of battle. Each nurse was attired in her overseas uniform and had donned her service medals. The ovation they received was second only to that given Marshal Foch when he entered the room.

Niklas & Son had an attractive window display of strawflower baskets.

Paper Whites are now plentiful with the florists, as the warm weather brought on the blooms rapidly.

The Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co. mailed out a price list the first of the month and this firm is now receiving some good returns from it. This firm remodeled its workroom last week and J. A. Wilson was the chief architect and supervisor of the work.

S. G. Lubliner had a window display of a fish pond, representing "no hunting or fishing allowed."

The Smith Flower Shop had several decorations last week. This firm furnished the decorations for the annual ball given by the Arlington Club December 8, and also the decorations for the One Hundred Committee, formed recently as a branch of the Chamber of fornia than there has been in any previous year.

Various Notes.

The H. L. Olsson Co. has a good showing of potted plants and ferns. This firm has been busy with cedar, firs, wreaths and festooning. Mr. Olsson reports that the new vacuum circulation apparatus, installed in the heating system to create an artificial circulation, is a success both from the standpoint of efficiency and economy.

Peters & Sons, of Hillyard, Wash., report the shipping trade good and are looking for a heavy Christmas trade.

E. S. Eugene, of Eugene's Flower Shop, reports the sale of artificial flower baskets to be good. The department store trade demand is greater for this class of stock than it is in the regular flower stores.

Mr. and Mrs. Skinner, of Hoyt Bros. Co., have opened a flower stand in the Culbertson department store. The opening date was December 10.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held December 6 and a good representation of the members was present at the election. H. Hill, of the City Floral Co., present chairman, will turn this office over to W. E. Peters, of Peters & Sons. C. Art addressed the members, his topic being advertising. He pointed out the necessity of continually advising the public to buy flowers. The committee on distributing flower vases to the hospitals reported and the billboard committee reported that the billboards were ready for distribution. A. A. Kelly gave a talk on the methods employed by the California florists in conducting their business and in general horticulture.

The delivery car of Hoyt Bros. Co. is ready for the big rush, having been recently overhauled and painted. H. H.

The Market.

There were no marked changes in the supply last week. Fear was expressed concerning the possible effect of the recent floods. A terrific rainfall, coupled with a warm spell which melted the snows in the mountains, menaced many of the greenhouses and fires were out for a time Monday, December 12, in a number of places. Some have thought this condition would affect the supply of Christmas flowers.

Business preliminary to the holidays has been excellent, novelty items enjoying the greatest call. Colored dried Rhinebeck, N. Y., long famous for its violets, is becoming equally so for its sweet peas. F. R. Gillman has a fine crop just right for the holidays. The Snyder and Coon establishments had a grand crop of violets for Thanksgiving. There will be a good demand for Christmas.

At Poughkeepsie, N. Y., the Saltford Flower Shop has a fine display of holiday goods, especially pottery. With this house the mammoth poinsettias take precedence. They are the pride of the veteran head of the establishment.

Conrad C. Gindra, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., commented upon the custom prevailing among many of the Vassar students of sending floral holiday gifts to the folks at home. Special effort is being made to encourage this innovation. A grand lot of cyclamens were noted at this establishment.

Valentin Burgevin's Sons, of Kingston, N. Y., have their downtown store filled with a fine assortment of Christmas stock. Combination baskets and pans of poinsettias and ferns are leaders and meet with a ready sale. Roses and carnations are in crop. "The outlook is most auspicious," commented George Burgevin.

The Rosendale Flower Shop, of Schenectady, N. Y., is in the lead for Christmas display. Proprietor Henry Eberhardt and wife were interviewed on their return from a trip to Manhattan to get the latest ideas and pick up novelties. "For the general run of stock our local growers are hard to beat," observed our worthy confreres.

At Cohoes, N. Y., A. D. Carpenter has the usual run of Christmas stock. Donald Cameron is the veteran grower and maintains a high standard, both in pot plants and cut flowers. Holiday prospects here are encouraging.

Sambrook Bros., of Troy, N. Y., are looking for a big Christmas trade. They have a fine stock of blooming plants, usually best sellers at this time.

J. G. Barrett, Troy, N. Y., has possibly the largest decorative business in the Trojan city; judging from the present condition, holiday trade is expected to be beyond normal.

Fred Henkes, Watervliet, N. Y., recently entertained the members of the Albany Florists' Club at a venison supper. It was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

At the same time opportunity was given to look over the Christmas stock, chiefly cyclamens and ferns.

A peep through the establishment of W. W. Hannell, Watervliet, N. Y., found cyclamens, ericas and poinsettias in fine shape for Christmas, and the pleasing report of large sales. "The weather is fine for shipping; in fact, general conditions at this time are excellent," observed our fellow craftsman. "On the whole, we have much to be thankful for."

Louis Menand, Troy, N. Y., has a fine display of Christmas novelties to suit all purses. The usual good sales are anticipated.

The Market.

Last week was a good one and business was brisk, especially in funeral work. The market was heavy on all seasonable stock, including a large cut of late chrysanthemums. However, the market did not clear on any one day. The wholesalers say that much depends upon the weather, as to the supply and the prices asked at Christmas time.

Last week there was plenty of fine stock to be had in roses. Premier, Russell and Columbia are much in demand, also Ophelia, Milady and White Killarney. Carnations are not any too plentiful and the supply is still doubtful for Christmas. Should the weather remain clear, the price will not be so high as predicted. Violets have an excellent demand and the holiday demand should be large.

In bulbous stock the supply of Romans, Paper Whites, valley and lilies has been equal to the demand. These will hardly go over the regular price for Christmas.

Sweet peas will be scarce and high in price. A good supply of cut poinsettias will be on hand, as these are plentiful this season.

There will be a good cut of mums in Chadwick and Bonnaffon.

Those items, with plenty of asparagus, smilax, adiantum, Mexican ivy and galax, should make up the market for Christmas.

Santa Claus, just like the rest of us kids did.
Once I swore to having heard him drop his pack and that I smelled the smoke from his pipe.

There were several visitors present.
Among them were J. F. Ammann, H. G.
Berning, W. A. Rowe, W. J. Pilcher and J. J. Beneke, who were invited to come before this meeting to speak on the fall flower show and publicity.

After all business had been trans-over the chair to J. F. Ammann, after apologizing for the small attendance.

Mr. Ammann then proceeded to give good pointers on advertising, especially Beneke also made a few remarks for the general interest of the trade.

It was moved that a committee be appointed from the members to work for the interest of the show. The appointments were as follows: Andrew Hoffmann, Sr., chairman; Miss Julia Armstrong, Mrs. F. Diemer, W. H. Kruse and Fred Hermann. The decoration committee consists of Paul Heil, chairman; Martin Seeger, F. X. Gorly, Oscar Ruff and Andrew Meyer, Jr. On the premium committee are F. H. Weber and Joseph Witek.

After a general discussion on matters of interest to growers, retailers and wholesalers, an interesting talk on the telegraph delivery came up. The next meeting of the association will take place in the same hall January 16, when the annual election of officers will take place.

The bowling league held a meeting December 16 at publicity headquarters to decide several important questions. The league will give a dance the latter part of January. Those who will arrange for the event are George Kuehner, Oscar Ruff, H. Schlechter, A. W. Gumz and Joseph Krager. The bowling matches of the night of December 14 were decided as follows: The Orchids defeated the Daisies. The Sweet Peas won from the Roses, and the Violets were victorious over the Carnations. The six high men were: A. Gumz, 577; J. J. Beneke, 576; C. A. Kuehn, 565; F. Hermann, 550; George Berner, 537, and O. Ruff, 524. The next bowling night will be December 28. J. J. B.

TORONTO, ONT.

The Market.

The dark weather is not conducive to Christmas business. However, advance orders are good and it looks as though there would not be sufficient flowers for the holiday season. There is a scarcity of red roses. Nearly all of the florists are handling holly and holly wreaths and many are handling Christmas trees.

Toronto Florists Meet.

The regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists was held in the club rooms December 12, with President S. A. McFadden in the chair. The chief order of business was arranging the program for the coming year. The executives feel that the social activity within the club should be brought to the front more than last year and that a program should be laid out for the year and printed.

S. A. Frost, chairman of the program committee, reported for his committee, laying out a full season's work. The report was accepted and was sent to the executive for revision before being printed.

The program for the meeting of January 9 is as follows: Address by the president of Toronto Retail Florists' Association; address on the "F. T. D.," by H. G. Dillemath; reading article from one of the exchanges by Mrs. Barber; "Why Few Violets Are Now Grown," a discussion introduced by Mrs. Percy Waters; "How to Make Flowers Last Longer," by S. A. Frost. Mr. Frost suggested that this essay might be printed in circular form and handed to customers.

The meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, December 28 to 30, was brought to the attention of the members. Among the speakers will be John Innes, director of the Horticultural Institute, at Surrey.

Various Notes.

S. A. Frost received three earloads of Christmas trees, two arriving and being disposed of during the week of December 12. December 19 a third earload arrived. The trees are from Mr. Frost's place at Zephyr, about forty miles north of Toronto.

Joseph Jennings, a well known florist, died December 15, in his sixty-fourth year. He was buried at Oakville.

record that November, 1921, has been the darkest month of November since 1881. For fifteen days there was no sunlight and there were less than forty-five hours of sunlight in the whole month. Readers can imagine the difficulties with which the growers have had to contend this year. Considering the dark weather, the stock is exceptionally good and is finding a ready sale. J. J. H.

SUCKLING & CHASE PROGRESS.

The Sunday Leader, of Halifax, Canada, for December 4 contains a full-page advertisement featuring Suckling & Chase, of Truro, N. S. Portraits of both John Suckling and Harry Chase are shown at the top of the page, under large captions, "Say It with Flowers." Besides, three views of the business are shown—a portion of the cyclamen stock, the entrance to the nurseries and a basket of Suckling & Chase roses. A box contains a special write-up on the cyclamen crop and another box gives prices from poinsettias to araucarias. And the last words of the advertisement signify that the firm is constantly "on the job." They are "Night 'phone, 201."

the page is a short history of the firm, which, in brief, is as follows:

"In 1880 John Suckling arrived at Truro and decided to stake his earthly all there. He was not possessed of much of the world's goods, but he was strong, physically and mentally, and was not afraid of work. And he possessed a technical knowledge of growing and caring for flowers.

"Mr. Suckling secured a plot of land fronting on Prince and Dominion streets. On it he erected a greenhouse, 14x20 feet, and stocked it with a few plants. Today the entire plot of land is occupied by the establishment. There are six houses, covered by 20,000 feet of glass. The close of each year sees changes, enlargement, extension, something new in the houses. As the business grew, the burden on Mr. Suckling grew greater and in 1895 he was joined by Harry Chase, a specialist in floriculture and a good fellow generally. Mr. Chase took charge of the growing department, leaving Mr. Suckling free to attend to the business end.

"The advent of Mr. Chase into the business was accompanied by a great growth, and in 1914 the company was merged into the joint stock company of

The Market.

The usual pre-Christmas slump was much in evidence on the market last week. Stock was moving slowly and the most business was in booking orders for the holidays. The supply was short. While there was sufficient for the demand, there was nothing like the normal supply. Few, if any, of the growers are timing their crops for Christmas this year. On the advice of the wholesalers, growers are just letting crops come naturally.

A prominent wholesaler says: "Aside from poinsettias, all lines are going to be short for Christmas. There will be just the normal crop of roses and carnations have by no means reached the usual supply. There is a fair supply of miscellaneous stock, except, perhaps, Paper Whites, and there are more of those than can possibly be used. Plants, both of raising funds for this purpose was left, made the report for the committee. In his report, Mr. Ekas stated that after much deliberation and investigation the committee was unanimous in the opinion that the percentage plan was the only just and equitable way to raise these funds. The only question the committee was having any trouble with was to devise a way that would prove satisfactory to all. It is the opinion of the committee that the best method is to have a separate organization for this purpose, with a secretary who is not engaged in the florists' business, whose duties it shall be to look after all collections, the disbursements to be handled by a board of directors, three from each branch of the business.

Charles Siegwart brought out the fact that to assess the grower and retailer one per cent each was not equitable. By this method, he said, the grower was being assessed on his net income, while the retailer would only pay on his gross purchases. Mr. Siegwart had some difficulty in making plain just what he was driving at, but, when he put it in this form, everyone understood what he meant: The grower sells his stock. This sale represents the cost of production or his entire overhead expenses. The retailer pays one per cent on his purchases in the wholesale house. He then adds to his purchase price 100 per cent to take care of his cost of distribution. This is just what the committee is endeavoring to do, to work out an equitable plan of assessment. Mr. Ekas said that the florists were signing up well and, as soon as Christmas is over, an organization will be perfected and the percentage plan put into operation. Tate.

MICHIGAN HAS LEMON CROP.

Michigan is not listed in the federal reports as a producer of citrus fruits, yet H. W. Allersma, owner of a number of greenhouses in and about Grand Rapids, believes the state now has a right to claim such a rating.

and Dunham street, Mr. Allersma now is picking his lemon crop—off one lone tree, planted six years ago. On the tree are five full-grown lemons ready for harvest, besides blooms fruiting for the next crop.

And, by the way, this tiny crop has secured plenty of free advertising in the local papers for Mr. Allersma, which proves that it is truly a valuable crop.

CLEVELANDERS ACTIVE.

The Cleveland Florists' Club has been showing much activity and energy of late. Under the new administration the club has set a goal of 100 new members for the year. Only four months have passed and the total new members so far are over sixty. Raymond Kester has been busy and has brought in about forty alone.

The club will hold a banquet at the Hollenden hotel about the middle of January. A dance is included in this affair. This banquet is to be made an annual affair. The idea of this banquet is to bring the members together and to promote good fellowship.

One of the important features of the last meeting was the action of the club in voting to give $100 for a special premium for the national flower show. It is to be known as the Cleveland Florists' Club special premium. It seems as though no other club has ever given a special premium, and this club has the distinction of being the first to do so.

The chairman of the national flower show committees reports everything going smoothly. The individual committees have been working hard, and everything has been done that can be done to date. Nearly all the floor space has been taken, and there is every assurance that the show will eclipse all others. Thanks to the hard work of the chairman of committees, Herman P. Knoble, everything has been taken care of.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Conditions here have improved considerably in the last week, business being somewhat brisk. Cut flowers have not sold so well, but Christmas supplies, etc., have been in great demand, a good quantity of these being shipped out of town. Of the cut flowers, carnations and roses have sold the best, although the longer roses are hard to dispose of. The only trouble with this market this year is that it is difficult, in fact almost impossible, to get the prices which have prevailed at this time other years; as soon as the price is raised the stock does not move and about the only way to dispose of some of it is to cut the price again. The market is flooded with Paper White narcissi and stevia. Roses and carnations are rather scarce, al-

The Market.

With the continued lack of sunshine, the production has not kept with the market demand. The demand for all cut flowers last week far exceeded the supply. The wholesale houses were compelled, in many instances, to divide their product among their customers. A fair quantity of carnations is being received in the market daily, but these are cleaned up before noon of every day.
The quality is exceptionally fine. Roses also are arriving in fairly good quantities, but are moving out rapidly. It is hard to estimate the Christmas crop, as a good deal depends upon weather conditions. A few bright, sunny days will help out considerably, but if the days continue to be dark and gloomy, there is sure to be a shortage, especially in roses. The growers report that the buds are at a standstill. Fair quantities of lilies, valley and pussy willows have been coming into the market, and are moving out nicely. Yellow daisies and sweet peas are some of the other flowers in the market and they move out readily. A report from the sweet pea growers is not entirely promising for the holiday season, especially in colors. Growers report that the supply will be mostly in white. The wholesale supply houses are practically cleaned up on artificial material. The demand for this class of goods has been exceptionally good, and far exceeded the expectation in some instances.

NEW YORK CLUBS TO MEET.

A meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs will be held in connection with the Farmers' week program of the department of floriculture, Thursday, February 16, at the New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. The day of the meeting has been advanced from Tuesday to Thursday, so as not to interfere with the St. Valentine's day business. According to this new arrangement, it will be possible for more florists to avail themselves of the opportunity of attending the meeting.

The department of floriculture will entertain the delegates at the luncheon, and they should notify the secretary as early as possible, so that he may complete his plans for this meeting. An interesting program has been provided each day of Farmers' week by the de-

While some of our city florists report a stagnation in business, others are busy with evening parties and several of them have been doing considerable decorating work for the fair debutantes' parties.

Randall's Flower Shop, 22 Pearl street, is busy with baskets, especially prepared baskets.

F. B. Madaus, Main street, is unusually busy.

Lange's "Cellar Unusual" attracts public attention by its novel magnetism.

Prices for the growers have stiffened somewhat during the last few days.

It is reported that stock will be scarce this Christmas in Worcester.

Worcester was the center of the blizzard which passed over this section of the country recently. The destruction to forests, parks and orchards is beyond all imagination. The writer has been MAKING AN AD PULL.

Without question, the 10,000 persons of Bellefontaine, O., were interested to see the full-page advertisement of Stel-zig's Flower Shop that appeared in the Daily Examiner December 15. For this page had an additional and eye-catching feature. Somewhere in it, as explained in another part of the newspaper, was a series of words, disarranged.To the person who corrected the dis-arrangement and whose name was first drawn, was to be given $5, all answers to be in, at the store, by Monday evening, December 19. On that night at 9
p. m. a disinterested person drew the card of the first one who had the solu-

DESTROYING GRUBS.

We are sending you by parcel post some grubs that attack our begonias and cyclamens at this time of the year. We find that the grub starts just above the ground in the begonia stems and works itself down into the roots and finally cuts them off, destroying the plants in a few days. Nicotine solu-

The grubs arrived safely and are the larvae of the May beetle, or June bug, whose eggs are deposited in fields and particularly in clods of cow manure. Sometimes the grubs do an immense amount of damage to lawns and grass lands. Under glass they have been known to cut roots from roses and chrysanthemums, until the plants were dead. and cyclamens attacked as yours were. Steam sterilization of the soil before use will destroy all grubs. Carbon bisulphide, a tablespoonful poured in holes ten or fifteen inches apart each way, holes being made with a stick and immediately closed, will suffocate the grubs. In the case of pot plants, smaller doses are needed. A teaspoonful suffices for a 6-inch pot. The carbon bisulphide generates a gas which destroys all soil pests. Keep naked lights away when applying carbon bisulphide, as it is of an explosive nature. C. W.

HANDLING FREESIA BULBS.

How should freesia bulbs be handled when they are through flowering, in order to use them another year?

T. J. S.—N. Y.

After the freesias are through blooming, run them somewhat drier and allow the foliage to ripen and dry up. Early in the summer you may dig the bulbs and, after allowing them to cure properly, they will be ready to be replanted. These bulbs will grow to a larger size each season and as they grow larger the growth will become stronger.

Please advise me what can be done with this land to rid it of these nematodes. I am also constructing a large tank, into which the Pot the cuttings in soil which has been sterilized, and shift them along as needed in the same kind of soil. Instead of planting them in the field, plant right into the benches, which are filled with sterilized soil; in this way you will keep free from these nematodes. It would be inadvisable to use the water which drains from the soil which is infested. Although it is not certain that infestation would result, you would better play on the safe side. A. F. J. B.

East Falls, Philadelphia, Pa.—C. Emmett is engaging in the trade at the corner of Scott lane.

Cadillac, Mich.—Percy Snell, who is a decided believer in advertising, is using two exceedingly good pieces of copy for Christmas. Both in lay-out and in message they are interesting.

SEATTLE NOTES.

grasses and reeds are popular, and the smaller shops have shown an interest in miniature Christmas trees and ornamental shrubs.

Roses have shown a variable quality; in some cases they are good and in others fail to stand up well. Ophelia is still the main offender. Good Columbia is also hard to locate at this time. Ward and Hadley are arriving in good condition. Carnations have shown but little general improvement in color, but are generally longer-stemmed.

Potted items are selling well, with poinsettias and cyclamens the leaders. Ferns are good. Primrose is rather a slow mover, and peppers have failed to attract the buyers.

Good mums are hard to find, since so many of the local growers forced their crop to ripen about Thanksgiving and have cleaned up in nice order. Maud Dean is the principal variety coming in at this time, although some deliveries of Turner are still noted.

Various Notes.

M. Shaw, of the Market Floral Co., Bellingham, Wash., called on the local trade and growers last week, lining up his Christmas supplies. He advises that early season business with him has been ahead of expectations.

A number of social decorations calling for the use of mums and roses have been handled by Rosaia Bros. The greenhouses are sending in some fine cyclamens and red poinsettias, the larger sizes of the latter being especially attractive. A novel window of Christmas novelties has been featured during the last week.

Brisk funeral work and improved general business is reported by Kenney's Home of Flowers. Stevia of fine quality has been shown by this shop, along with the best of the late Turner mums.

Further publicity for flowers is being secured in Seattle through the St. Regis cafe. This restaurant has issued a list of reasons why it deserves public patronage and one of these is "Fresh flowers on every table every day."

Fred Winters has opened a wholesale stall in the Westlake market for the holiday season, where he is distributing holly and greens for the shipping trade.

Good shipping and local support for the new wholesale house is reported by B. E. Hammond, who advises that his principal trouble is securing a full line of stock. He is carrying a large stock of daily shipments of California violet and asparagus. F. W. McBratney has been added to the staff of this establishment.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop has made arrangements with The Peacock, a Second avenue restaurant, for the use of one of its display windows and plans for some time to feature its novelties in this extra display space. Full credit is given on inserted cards to the decorator. This shop supplied the violet corsages for a special opening holiday sale of a local clothing store, hundreds of bunches being used on this job.

Theodore Hedgen, manager of the Davenport Flower Shop, of Spokane, Wash., and a high state official in Moose circles, was a visitor last week. He attended the dedication of the new temple. Among the local members of this order is Gino Desideri, of the Orpheum Floral Co.

Henry Morgan has enjoyed a nice opening week's business in his new Third avenue shop. He will make a special feature of potted offerings for the holidays.

Melby's Flower Shop produced an attractive wedding decoration last week, using Columbia roses mainly. The altar was draped in greens and Columbia roses as well.

Arthur Smith, of the Smith Floral Co., Tacoma, Wash., was a trade visitor last week, purchasing Christmas supplies.

McCoy's have been showing fine Ophelia roses, combining these with varicolored mums to produce a most attractive window display.

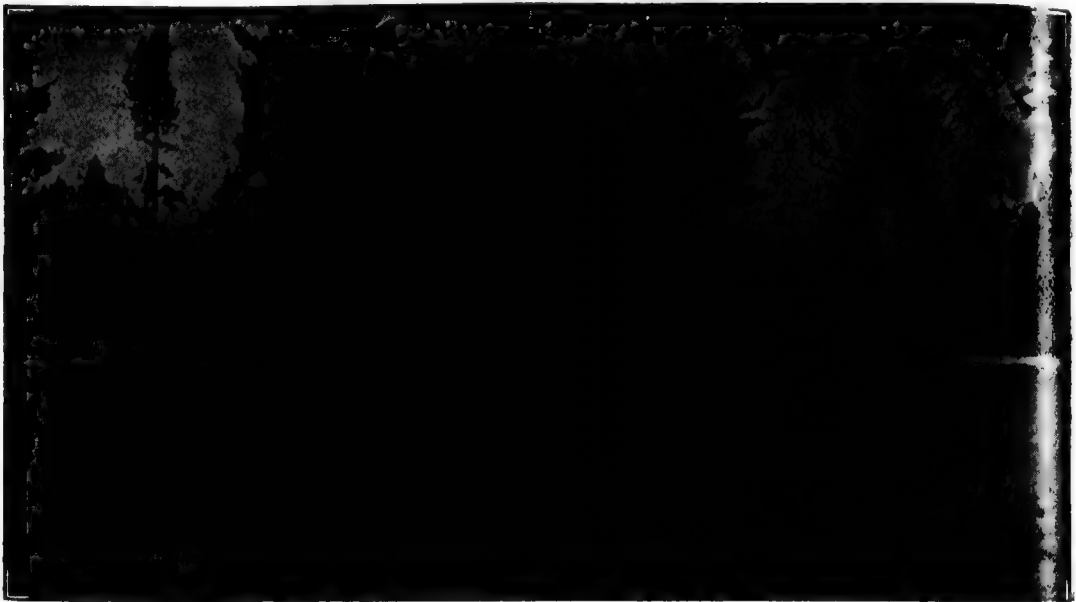

Acting on the principle of "taking one's own medicine," the Hollywood Gardens have developed a most attractive exterior dressing for the store. On the "marquee" are set small Christmas trees, embellished with holly and greens. Long strands of cedar roping outline both this and the tops of the display windows. A seasonable showing was a holiday box of English holly, tied with wide red ribbon and having a parcel post label on the cover, suggesting the idea of this item as a Christmas gift.

Sylvestro Muecci, of the City Flower Shop, introduced a Christmas novelty in small potted trees made in the shape of the "monkey" tree. These have five or six uniform branches fastened to the center stalk and have been brightened by ruscus and holly berries.

At the monthly meeting of the Seattle Florists' Association the members stood for a minute in silent tribute to the late Fred S. Stimson. Arrangements were made for the printing of the list of people who have been using the retailers to secure undue credit. Also it was arranged to start the dinner preceding future meetings at seven p. m., so that members coming from across the lake can start home earlier. Sam MacMonnies, of the Burdett Co., gave several Scotch songs. The question box received its first try-out, bringing up a number of interesting subjects. William Goldsbary, secretary-treasurer of the association, presented his resignation, because his position with the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, keeps him on the road so much of the time. A vote of thanks for his efforts was given by the organization. It was decided to separate these two offices in the future, Palermo F. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., being elected treasurer and H. B. Mills, secretary.

The Pinehurst Floral Shop has moved a large amount of prepared Christmas novelties and, from present indications, will move a quantity of medium-priced items.

J. O. Hankins, of the Seattle Pottery Co., advises that the demand on lily pots is later this year than ordinarily. Good-sized orders have been coming in during the last week, indicating that good-sized planting will again be the rule this season.

Mums have been the heavy sellers at the store of the Orpheum Floral Co. during the last week and the demand has covered both large and small varieties.

Felix Rosaia was host last week at a "florists' dinner," which was decidedly novel. "Chrysanthemum" soup, prepared after the Japanese fashion, was the first course and this was followed by "Chrysanthemum Surprise," large white Turners from which the heart had been removed and chicken risotto inserted. Among those present were Eugene N. Sandahl, A. Raymond Silva, a local newspaper editor; H. Albert George, Italian consul for Seattle; Andrew di Claria, the Review correspondent and the host.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The prospects for a good crop of cut flowers for Christmas went glimmering last week, when the sun refused to show its face. The supply will be short, indeed. The only item in great abundance is Paper Whites. All the florists have large numbers of advance orders.

Various Notes.

The Doswell Floral Co. says that the prospects for a heavy Christmas are good. Christmas hampers and bouquets are in great demand.

E. Wenninghoff is prepared to take care of a much larger amount of business in the line of cut flowers and plants.

The Flick Floral Co. had a busy time last week. Aaron Shives is ill at the St. Joseph hospital.

L. W. WHEELER, of Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Cal., celebrated his fifty-third birthday anniversary December 20. He was born on a farm near Jamestown, N. Y., in 1868.

THE German steamer Bayern, coming from Hamburg, arrived at New York December 10 with twenty-four cases of lily of the valley pips consigned to C. U. Liggit and forty-two cases for C. J. Speelman & Sons.

P. B. BADER, who has been at New York for a little over a year as a representative of Bader & Co., of Sassenheim, will pay a visit to Holland in the spring and when he comes back to America as the firm's permanent representative, will bring a bride.

H. BADER, head of Bader & Co., Sassenheim, Holland, with Mrs. Bader, will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary January 11. John H. Bader, the elder son, who has been in the United States since November, is sailing soon to be present at the silver wedding festivities.

THE National Canners' Association will hold its annual meeting at Louisville, Ky., during the week beginning January 16. More than 4,000 members are expected to attend and the Armory will, it is anticipated, house exhibits of more than $250,000 in value. The number of seedsmen who attend will probably be larger than last year.

ARTHUR L. DEAL, director of W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., Boston, England, has returned home from his annual visit to customers in the United States and Canada. Frank R. Walshaw, who assisted him on this trip, has also returned to England. This concern states that general business conditions point to shorter supplies and better prices during the next twelve months than has been the case generally in the seed trade during the last year.

At the annual meeting of the Tri-State Packers' Association, at Philadelphia December 15 and 16, members stated that the production of the canneries last season was approximately one-third normal and the outlook for 1922 pointed to a production two-thirds normal. Officers elected for the new year are: President, William Silver; vice-presidents, for New Jersey, Wallace Roberts; for Delaware, Clinton Reckords; for Maryland, Hall Wrightson; secretary-treasurer, C. M.

HOLLAND'S BULB INDUSTRY.

In the October issue of Holland's Import and Export Trader, appears an article, written in English, by Ernest H. Krelage, of Haarlem, on "Dutch Bulb Culture." In beautiful phrases the writer describes the glorious multi-colored pictures of the fields of flowers in the spring months, filling the air with fragrance. Interesting, indeed, is his story of the history of the bulb industry. The tulip mania, which raged in Holland from 1634 to 1637, is briefly referred to. Fabulous sums were paid for bulbs, and it is on record that a new carriage, two gray horses and complete harness changed hands for one bulb of Semper Augustus, and that twelve acres of land were cheerfully parted with for another. The article is freely illustrated with interesting diagrams and photographs.

By a series of diagrams E. H. Krelage shows the exports of bulbs before and during the war and after. The normal export in pre-war days was 25,000 tons, of which Great Britain received forty per cent, and the United States and Germany with Austria twenty per cent each. In 1915, the record export year during the war, over 26,000 tons were shipped. The United States and Great Britain each took 8,000 tons, or thirty per cent, Germany with Austria twenty per cent, Scandinavia fifteen per cent and France and other Roman countries two per cent. In 1918, the worst year for the bulb trade, the total export was 11,000 tons. Great Britain prohibited importation, and in consequence of the difficult shipping conditions the United States exports were small. Scandinavia took forty per cent of the total exports. In 1919 the export advanced to 14,000 tons, and in 1920 to 16,000 tons. The import restrictions ordered by the German government reduced trade with Germany to a minimum. The United States took thirty-six per cent, Great Britain twenty-seven per cent and Scandinavia twenty-five per cent of the total export. The yearly export in normal times developed to 25,000 tons, of a total value of $7,500,000. In 1920 the exports were between 15,000 and 16,000 tons, but, the writer states, the total value, owing to the unavoidably increased prices, was about the same as before.

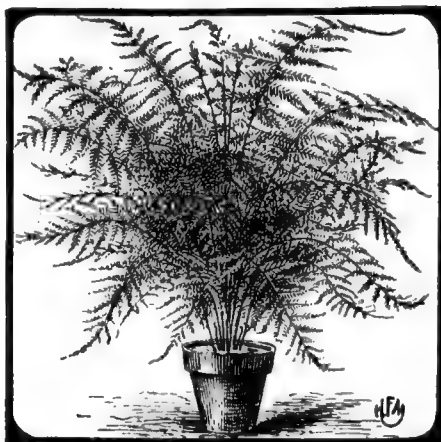

In 1860 the area devoted to bulbs was 750 acres, and it increased as follows: 1870, 1,000 acres; 1880, 1,500 acres; 1890, 2,500 acres; 1900, 6,250 acres; 1910, 10,000 acres. In 1914 it had increased to 13,750 acres. Owing to the war, it has again been reduced to about 10,000 acres.

ERRORS IN ADVERTISEMENTS.

How the Courts Regard Them.

A decision of importance to every advertiser, and particularly those who specify prices, grades or other facts attractive to prospective buyers, was handed down by the Georgia Court of Appeals lately, in the case of the Georgian Co. vs. Bloom, 108 Southeastern Reporter, 813. The substance of the decision is that an advertisement is not to sell forty-eight scarfs at a loss of $480, which amount she asked to have set off against the advertising bill. The Municipal court in Atlanta ruled that no valid counterclaim was presented, and the court of appeals holds that the ruling was correct. The higher court's opinion reads as follows:

Judge's Opinion.

"A general advertisement in a newspaper for the sale of an indefinite quantity of goods is a mere invitation to enter into a bargain, rather than an offer.

"A business advertisement published in newspapers and circulars sent out by mail or distributed by hand, stating that the advertiser has a certain quantity or quality of goods which he wants to dispose of at specified prices, is not an offer which becomes a contract as soon as any person, whose attention it arrests, signifies his acceptance of a portion or all of the goods advertised by notifying the other that he will take a certain quantity of the stock. Advertisements are mere invitations to all persons who may read them that the advertiser is ready to receive offers for the goods at the price stated.' 13 C. J. 289, Sec. 97.

"If goods are advertised for sale at a certain price . . . the construction is rather favored that such an advertisement is a mere invitation to enter into a bargain, rather than an offer.' 1 Williston on Contracts, Sec. 27.

"In the instant case the advertisement, which is the basis of the counterclaim, specified no definite quantity of the furs for sale, though there was a more or less indefinite description of the qualities of the goods. The first essential of a sale is that there must be 'an identification of the thing sold.' Civil Code (1910), Sec. 4106. To consummate a contract there must be 'a meeting of minds.' There was no merit in the counterclaim filed by the defendant in the Municipal court, and the judge of that court committed no error in striking it out and entering judgment for the plaintiff." S.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., Whitmarsh, Md.—Current issue of monthly wholesale list of plants, with prices that "cancel all previous quotations and are made on a strictly cash basis." For full descriptions of varieties, patrons are referred to the regular catalogue.

Tromp Bros., Lisse, Holland.—American edition of wholesale bulb catalogue; well printed, and bound in a strong, neat gray cover. Besides the stock of a strictly bulbous character, the book offers corms or roots of gladioli, irises, anemones, begonias, dahlias, spiraeas, peonies, montbretias and other genera.

J. E. Farnsworth, Lancaster, Mass.—An alphabetical list of gladioli; twelve pages, in pocket form, well printed on a heavy grade of enameled paper and bound in a tasteful brown cover.

C. I. Hunt, Nunda, N. Y.—Wholesale list of gladioli bulbs; "a select list of varieties; thirty-four of the choicest kinds," says Mr. Nunda. The prices are not quoted in the descriptive list, but on a separate sheet.

Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.—"Bulletin No. 1; First Call for Spring," a condensed and yet comprehensive list of roses, perennials and general nursery stock. "Grade counts and inventory," says the bulletin, "are not entirely completed, but are advanced far enough to give a fair idea of what can be supplied for immediate or spring shipment."

Richard Diener Co., Inc., Kentfield, Cal.—General catalogue for 1922; a most attractive, finely illustrated book of forty-eight pages, in a colored cover which shows one specimen of each of the company's two great specialties, gladioli and petunias. In regard to the gladioli, which occupy twenty pages, Mr. Diener states that all the varieties listed are his own productions. Among the stock offered, besides the two leaders, are amaryllises, pansies, dahlias, blackberry plants and miscellaneous seeds.

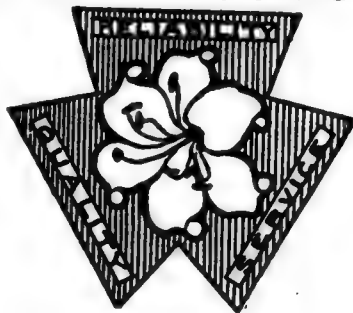

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Michell's Handy Order Book," offering flower and vegetable seeds, bulbs, plants and supplies;

Age and reputation are two factors worth consideration range of its contents. A full line of stock, both fruit-bearing and ornamental, is offered, though the emphasis throughout is placed on California products. "We have tried," says the company, "to get such information as will be beneficial to the planter and have enlarged upon the descriptions so as to make them clearer. We have also gone a step forward, we believe, in securing a cover for the book which is typically Californian."

J. C. Grossman, Wolcottville, Ind.—Condensed trade list of gladiolus bulbs, with prices per hundred or per thousand.

William Erb, Maspeth, N. Y.—A 4-page wholesale list of vegetable seeds, onion sets, gladiolus bulbs, pansy plants and seeds.

M. Veldhuyzen van Zanten & Sons, Lisse, Holland.—Wholesale catalogue of Dutch bulbs and roots, with a history of the founding and development of the business, illustrated with portraits of the members of the company, exterior and interior views of the buildings, pictures of field operations and other outdoor scenes; thirty-six pages and cover.

H. G. Hastings Co., Atlanta, Ga.—A well illustrated, systematically arranged 100-page catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants, shrubs and supplies. The stock offered is extensive, especially in the line of farm and forage crops. Tobacco and cotton seeds and other southern specialties are included. The book contains four full-page colored illustrations; all four pages of the cover also are handsomely lithographed.

Glen St. Mary Nurseries Co., Glen St. Mary, Fla.—"Southern Planting Facts," an especially accurate, well printed, handsomely illustrated book of seventy-six pages, in an artistic brown cover. Many of the illustrations are colored. Citrus fruits have first place in the book; then follow nuts and miscellaneous fruits, including figs, pomegranates, bananas and other tropical or subtropical genera; at the end are roses, shrubs, shade trees, palms and other ornamental stock.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Horticultural Society Elects.

The Newport Horticultural Society held its annual business meeting and election of officers Tuesday evening, December 13, in Music hall, at which there was a good attendance. The reports of the various officers and committees showed the society to be in a satisfactory condition, financially, socially and numerically. Charles W. Philpott conducted the meeting, as president, and a vote of thanks was extended him for his services during the last year.

It was voted that the society cooperate in every way possible with the garden clubs of America in connection with the proposed convention to be held at Newport in June, 1923. A committee, consisting of Andrew Dorward, William Gray, Andrew Meikle, Alexander MacLellan and Arthur W. Potter, was appointed to make preliminary arrangements for this convention.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Andrew L. Dorward; first vice-president, William Gray; second vice-president, James Hooper; recording secretary, William G. Taylor; financial secretary, William Gray; treasurer, Richard Gardner; sergeant-at-arms, William F. Smith.

At the conclusion of the business session Andrew Dorward told of his recent visit to flower exhibitions in Dundee and Edinburgh, Scotland, and announcement was made that the first lecture of the season will be delivered by Dr. William W. Gardner, of Washington, D. C.

Various Notes.

Superintendent of Parks Patrick Casey has so far recovered from injuries received in a fall several weeks ago that he is able to resume his duties.

Gibson Bros. have been making extensive renovations recently at their greenhouses on Malbone road.

Carl Jurgens reports a heavy call for valley during the last few weeks.

Oscar Schultz has been experiencing a heavy run on funeral work recently.

Kunderd's Gladioli

are now so well known and are in such great demand that you, as a grower or florist, cannot afford to be without them. No other strains are now so popular, nor can you secure so many beautiful blooms from any other. They always bring top prices in the markets.

Heretofore there has not been a sufficient supply to afford growers a share in their great sale.

for the first time to secure a select collection of about ninety choice varieties listed and described in my wholesale price list. All authorities are agreed that my new strains represent by far the greatest improvement in gladioli today.

You will miss many of your best customers if you let them go elsewhere for their cut flowers and bulbs.

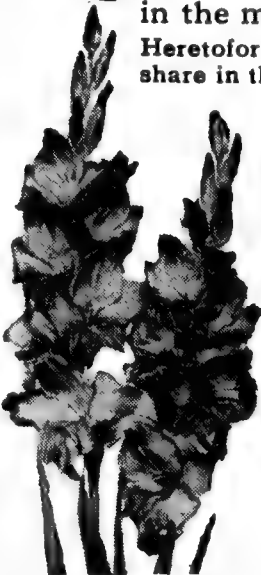

Send for my wholesale list above described, and also a copy of my new retail catalogue, both free.

SWEET PEA SEED

This year we had a record-breaking crop of some of the best market varieties, which we are offering to the commercial grower and market gardener only, far below regular prices, as we do not want to carry them over or sell them in bulk, giving our patrons a real bargain.

	Per Pound
CHRISTMAS PINK ORCHID, pink and white	$2.50
MRS. A. A. SKACH	2.50
MISS LOUISE GUDE, shell pink	2.50
MRS. JOS. MANDA	2.50
BRIDAL VEIL, white-seeded white	2.50
MRS. M. SPANOLIN, black-seeded white	2.50
MRS. CHAS. ZVOLANEK, best lavender	2.50
ZVOLANEK'S PALE BLUE	2.50
ZVOLANEK'S BLUE	2.50
ZVOLANEK'S RED, largest red in existence	2.50
ZVOLANEK'S ORANGE	2.50
YARAWA	2.50
ZVOLANEK'S BEAUTY, fiery dark rose	2.50

ZVOLANEK ROSE, the famous bright pink, at $10.00 per pound.

No order of less than ½ pound of each at these prices accepted.

All these varieties are not only winter-flowering, but they will produce more and better flowers out of doors than the old late Spencers, because they bloom 3 to 4 weeks earlier, before the hot weather sets in. Plant after the Chrysanthemum and get full crop for Easter. Plant in cool frames or outdoors just before the freezing begins and get full crop in May for Decoration Day. Plant out of doors in the spring and they will bloom early in June.

Windmill Talks on Bulbs

Jules Verne, the wonderful French novelist, wrote a marvelous mystery story, called "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Sea."

It is no more filled with mystery, however, than the way we grow our bulbs over in Holland, 15 to 20 feet below sea level.

Grow them in soil that was once the bottom of the sea.

All that tremendous labor of building dikes to crowd back and shut out the ocean, is but typical of the prodigious labor involved in growing bulbs the way Tegelaar grows them.

When you buy Tegelaar bulbs you get only bulbs grown the Tegelaar way.

When we have sold those grown the Tegelaar way, we are sold out. You can get no more Tegelaar honest Dutch bulbs until a new crop comes.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

B. L. MILLER is going into the nursery business at San Juan, Tex.

A. S. MOORE, of New Castle, Pa., has three acres of nursery stock, mostly shade trees.

THE new census figures for the nursery industry, made public this week, appear on a forward page of this issue.

C. A. MORGAN, of Jacksonville, Fla., who at present is in the retail cut flower business, plans to go into the nursery line.

LEON H. CURTIN, Houston, Tex., is a beginner in the nursery business. His post office address is 509 First National Bank building, Houston, Tex.

WORK will be commenced on a $50,000 packing shed next spring by the Rice Bros. Nursery Co., Geneva, N. Y. This shed will be located adjacent to the Naples branch of the Lehigh Valley railroad and north of the Geneva city hospital.

A STRIP of property consisting of ten acres, at the corner of Sheldon avenue and Broadway, Elmsford, N. Y., was purchased by Carl A. Peterson, who conducts a nursery near Benedict avenue and South Broadway. Mr. Peterson acquired this land from Henry G. Autenrieth and took title to it December 14. The expansion of his business made it necessary for Mr. Peterson to acquire this additional piece of property.

R. J. MATHER, of the Mather Nursery Co., Pasadena, Cal., has been in conference with Roderick Scott, manager of what is known as the Fuller lands, near Holtville, Cal., and representatives of the Cudahy Packing Co., of Omaha and Chicago, for the purpose of undertaking the stocking for development of the Fuller lands, which will involve the expenditure of from $250,000 to $300,000 in improvements. It is the intention of the company to plant the entire 3,000 acres of its holdings in grape vines and grapefruit, and to this end the Mather Nursery Co. has been contracted with to supply 1,000,000 grape vines of the best table varieties and a sufficient supply of young pomelo trees to furnish a sizable orchard on every twenty to forty acres of the big ranch.

NURSERY RATE CHANGES.

Hearings of the classification committee of the interstate commerce commission, for the consideration of petitions for changes in freight rules and ratings, will be held January 10 to 13 at Chicago; January 17 at New York and January 25 at Atlanta, Ga. The hearings will cover the official southern and western classifications.

There are several changes suggested by the carriers in regard to rates on nursery and florists' stock other than decorative greens. The rates, on the whole, have a tendency to be increased rather than lowered, according to the data set forth in docket 9 of the consolidated classification committee hearings.

Under the heading, "Dormant: Plants, shrubs, trees or vines," there is added this category, "roots in tubs or boxes, tops protected with crating," the rate on which is to be double first-class rate. Under the same head is suggested an alteration of the wording, from "In bundles completely wrapped, L. C. L.," to "In bales or bundles completely wrapped, L. C. L." Under the same heading, the rate on stock in crates, L. C. L., is raised from 1½ to 2, official.

Under the heading, "Not dormant: Plants or vines, N. O. I. B. N.," for the words, "Rooted in tubs or boxes without covers, tops protected," the words, "Roots in tubs or boxes, tops protected with crating," are substituted. The rates remain the same. Under shrubs, for the words, "Rooted in tubs or boxes without covers, tops protected, L. C. L.," are substituted the words, "Roots in tubs or boxes, tops protected with crating, L. C. L.,"; for the words, "In bundles, roots boxed or wrapped, L. C. L.," are substituted the words, "In bundles completely wrapped, L. C. L.," with a reduction in the official rating from 1½ to 1. The additions are, "In boxes with slatted covers or in crates, L. C. L., official, 1; southern, D1, western, 1," and "In barrels or boxes, L. C. L., official, 2; southern, 1; western, 1." Under trees, for the words, "Rooted in tubs or boxes without covers, tops protected, L. C. L.," are substituted the words, "Roots in tubs or boxes, tops protected with crating, L. C. L.,"; for the words, "In bundles, roots boxed or wrapped, L. C. L.," the words, "In bundles, roots wrapped, L. C. L.," are substituted, and a category is added, "In bundles completely wrapped, L. C. L.," the rates on which are proposed, official, 1; southern, D1; western, 1.

WESTERN ROSE CO., ALHAMBRA, CAL.

the recently passed law requiring all nurserymen without the state of California to pay a $10 license and give bond to the amount of $1,000 before shipping nursery stock into that state. In it he declared that the California horticultural authorities would make no attempt to force compliance. In other words, the law is to become a dead letter.

To inform nurserymen and florists throughout the country further in regard to the matter, Max J. Crow, secretary of the executive committee of the California Nurserymen, has forwarded to The Review a copy of the opinion of the attorney-general of California, upon which the horticultural authorities of the state base their action, or rather, non-action. It reads as follows:

Section 2319j of the Political Code provides that any nurseryman, jobber, etc., doing business without the state of California who desires to ship nursery stock, trees, etc., into this state for planting or propagation purposes from any other state shall first make application to the director of agriculture for a permit to so do, filing with the application a statement of the location of the nursery or place of business owned or operated by him and an official certificate of inspection of such premises, signed by the state inspector of the state in which said premises are located. It is further provided in the section that such permits shall be issued by the director of agriculture upon payment of a fee of $10 whenever, in his judgment, the same may be issued without endangering the horticultural interests of the state. The section contains a proviso that before such permit is finally issued the nurseryman, jobber, etc., making application shall file an official bond to the state of California in the sum of $1,000 conditioned upon the faithful performance of his obligations, and that any aggrieved party may sue on said bond. It is also provided in the section that the permit shall bear a special number and all shipments thereafter made by such nurseryman, jobber, etc., into this state must contain this number affixed to the package of nursery stock, trees, etc., shipped by him.

It will be noted that the section contains no penalty for a violation of its provisions, but the section is in chapter IVa, and section 2319k in the same chapter provides that any person violating any of the provisions of that chapter or willfully refusing to comply with any order lawfully made under and pursuant thereto shall be guilty of misdemeanor.

It is evident that serious questions of jurisdiction might arise, for the act of violation would be the shipping of the horticultural products into this state from without the state, and this would occur upon the entry of the shipment into this state. The one responsible therefor being outside of the state at the time the prohibited act is done, it is doubtful whether the jurisdiction could be acquired over such person, and unless jurisdiction can be acquired the penal provisions of section 2319k are inoperative as to the provisions of section 2319j.

It is also to be noted that one of the conditions to obtaining a permit is the filing of an official certificate of inspection of the premises outside the state by the state inspector of the state in which the premises are located. It is, of course, possible that there may be no state inspector in such state and in that event this condition could not, of course, be complied with.

It is also to be noted that while a bond in the sum of $1,000 is required, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the obligations of the obligor, no statement is made in the section as to what these obligations are, and although the section provides that any aggrieved party may sue on said bond, there is no statement in the section as to the manner or nature of the injury which might be suffered by a person claiming to be aggrieved.

It is permissible for a state by a proper law to provide for the inspection of articles brought within its borders from other states, but such provisions as a state may in that respect enact must not go further than are necessary to the proper operation of such inspection laws. They must be such as would tend to protect the state against the introduction into the state of products or things which would or might injure the state or the interests of the state. Under such laws the effort should be to prevent the introduction of matter or things either injurious to themselves or which by reason of their place of growth or production and exposure thereat to other injurious matter would or might tend to injure the interests of this state when introduced herein. Such laws should not be permitted to so operate as to prevent the introduction into this state of things not in themselves injurious or which have not been subjected to contamination either in the manner or place of production.

The section in question appears on its face to attempt the interposition of a condition upon importers of nursery stock and trees unattended by and unrelated to the condition of the nursery stock or trees actually imported. It will be noted that the section contains no provisions as to the manner of treatment by the horticultural officers of this state of such nursery stock and trees so

The San Francisco Coöperative Flower Market has a staff of men working day and night making wreaths, etc., for the holidays. The market is cleaned up every day at present, except in greens and strawflowers. The first shipment of English holly was gone in three days, so three tons were ordered from Victoria, B. C.

anthemums coming from their nurseries. Yukichi Noda, of the Growers' Floral Co., says that this firm has specialized in drying its strawflowers according to its own method.

Domoto Bros. are specializing in potted plants for the holiday season, especially in poinsettias.

The place of business of the United Flower & Supply Co. is a blaze of color with potted azaleas, cyclamens, begonias and heather. J. Okumura, acting manager, says that the company also has large crops of cut poinsettias.

The Venice Florists have moved to 468 Bush street, a larger and better location, where they are handling a satisfactory holiday business. The partners in this firm are Louis Maraschin and Celeste Costagauna.

The Misses Hannon store is duplicating its miniature redwood wreaths which, last Christmas, were sent east and abroad so extensively.

Joseph's is showing some bunches of baby roses, pansies, etc., that look so lifelike that people think they are the real thing. They are really hand-painted and scented bouquets of candy flowers, but only millionaires could afford to eat them. They are intended for decorative purposes.

Venetian baskets in bronze and yellow were the motif for a striking table decoration at the Palace hotel, designed by L. B. Harding, for Podesta & Baldocchi. Old-fashioned bouquets of marigolds, pansies and heather filled the porcelain baskets; bronze and yellow streamers and big baskets of red berries completed the scheme.

Angelo Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been made president of the Italian Hospital Association, which has just taken over the large and splendidly appointed Adler Sanitarium, on Van Ness avenue. The Italian colony of San Francisco runs this hospital.

Mrs. Darbee, of Darbee's, has been gauging the amount of business the florists will transact during the Yuletide season by watching the amount of holiday shopping now in progress in the large downtown stores. "People are beginning to spend their money for gifts in a manner which does not indicate that they are hard pressed for the necessities of life. A large number of the people who were out of work have secured temporary jobs at least for the holiday season, and things look promising for a good holiday trade," stated Mrs. Darbee. She added that many holiday orders are already being booked.

tables were decorated with lily of the valley and orchids, in addition to silvered shrubs. Another silver wedding, also of well-known people, had silvered decorations on fourteen tables and quantities of lily of the valley, orchids and other flowers; each table was decorated in different shades. Due to the shortage of orchids, gardenias and valley, these decorations practically used up the supply for several days, as Mr. Stein had ordered well in advance.

The Richmond Pottery, Inc., has just received a consignment of modern machinery which will enable it to manufacture larger pots than it has hitherto been able to turn out. H. Plath is chairman of the organization, pro tem. Permanent officers will be elected early in the year. Mr. Plath and Frank D. Pelicano are two of the prime movers in the new pottery enterprise. M. M.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There has been no rush for Christmas business, but the final days before the holiday will probably develop some activity. There is an unusually good supply of everything for the holidays, excepting orchids and poinsettias. These are scarce and high. Potted plants are in evidence in good quality and quantity and at reasonable figures. Last week carnations stiffened a few cents, but, otherwise, prices are about normal. Roses range from $6 to $25 per hundred; carnations, $8 to $12 per hundred; Paper Whites, $4 per hundred; calendulas, $2 to $4 per hundred; snapdragons, $8 to $12 per hundred; callas, $2 to $3 per dozen; lilies, $3 per dozen.

There has been a slight flurry in social circles the last week, but the demand was so split up that its influence on the general situation was but little felt. Fair weather has been favorable to public health and the funeral list has, consequently, been much below the usual call for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

William A. Bowers had the decorations at the Dreyfus on two or three special occasions last week.

Robert Koppelman, of Boston, was the guest of relatives in this city and vicinity last week.

Max Villers, representing Joseph E. Koppelman, made a trip through different sections of the state last week.

Eugene McCarron, of Hope street, reports an unusually heavy demand for potted stock for the holidays.

A. Jannitti, 22 Water street, Warren, R. I., is handling large supplies of trees and wreaths for Christmas.

F. V. Child, at Bushee corner, Swansea, recently added a small propagating house to his range.

Edward Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., made a trip through Connecticut last week looking for seasonable novelties.

Frederick Dietz, of French street, was in New York and vicinity last week on business.

Henry Patry will be with Smith the Florist, B. Popkin, Washington street, during the holidays.

Vincent J. Berarducci, of Atwell's avenue, has been unusually busy with funeral orders the last week.

Joseph Lawrence, Warren, R. I., has large orders for trees and Christmas greens from all parts of the state.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

REMOVING TAR FROM PIPES.

Some time ago I purchased a greenhouse from an estate and had it removed to my place. The first time I fired the boiler, the pipes began to smoke and gave off an odor like that of burning tar. As soon as the seeds which I had planted in this house came up, they were all killed, and so with a second batch which I planted. I then got the pipes as hot as possible, in an attempt to burn this paint off, but this did not work, so rather than have the third batch of seedlings killed, I used a stove for heating, with the result that my plants grew well.

Can you tell me the quickest and surest method of removing this paint from the pipes, so that it will not give me any trouble next spring? Would you advise heavy firing for a week or would you take the pipes out and burn the tar off in a fire? Any advice will be greatly appreciated!

F. J. K.—O.

Your trouble is undoubtedly due to the tar on the pipes, but while it may be possible to burn this tar off with the pipes still in position, there will be little saved in time, and from a safety standpoint it will be better to remove the tar by taking the pipes out and burning it off in a fire.

HEATING SIDE-HILL HOUSE.

I am enclosing a diagram of the greenhouse I am building and should like to know how many boilers and their sizes and how many flows and returns, together with the size of these, will be necessary to heat this house, using hot water in the system. Will it be necessary to have the pipes rise or drop upon leaving the boiler? The temperature goes as low as 20 degrees below zero, but the average is zero and I should like to have a temperature of approximately 50 or 60 degrees in the house.

A. D.—S. D.

The sketch shows a house, 31x100 feet, built on a side hill, with four feet of concrete and two and one-half feet of glass in the south wall. The roof slopes twenty-five feet to the south and eleven feet to the north. There is approximately 250 feet of exposed glass in each gable of the house. The sketch plainly shows two raised benches in the lower portion of the house, but while two on the other side are marked benches, they appear in the drawing to be solid beds. This would make no difference in the amount of radiation, but if they are solid beds it will be necessary to place two of the returns in one of the walks instead of under the bench.

It would be advisable to use five 2½-inch flow pipes, placing two of them on the side wall plates, and carry the others a foot or two below the sashbars over the three lower benches, or on purlin posts if they are located near the north edges of these benches. All flow pipes should run downhill, with a slope of one inch in fifteen or twenty feet. In addition to the flow pipes, twelve 2-inch returns will be required. Of these, two should be on each side wall, and three under each of the two lower benches. The remaining two returns should be placed under the third bench from the south, or in the walk if it is a solid bed. Although the arrangement will only call for about 1,800 square feet of radiation in addition to the flows and returns that do not actually serve for heating the greenhouse, if soft coal is to be used it will be advisable to select a boiler rated at about 3,000 square feet, which should have a grate with a surface of about nine square feet.

REARRANGING A LEAN-TO.

Will you make some suggestions for me in regard to a small greenhouse, 14x24 feet, adjoining my house on the south side, which I intend to remodel this winter? It is built with a high, steep roof, sloping east and west. I intend to take off the roof and have it stand to the south. I have a sketch of a hotbed with a roof of glass and paths sunken about three feet. There would have to be pipes for heating on the cement floor below the surface of the ground. Will you give me some information as to how such a bed should be built? Will not such an arrangement be well adapted for the growing of tomato plants, celery, bedding plants, geraniums and most plants that are grown in greenhouses? I have noticed that bedding plants generally do not grow nearly so well in the greenhouse as they do in the hotbeds. If you can send me any directions about building, I shall appreciate it. E. A. W.—Minn.

While a lean-to roof, as suggested, will be found satisfactory for growing vegetable and bedding plants, it would be preferable to use raised benches rather than solid beds and, if possible, have the roof high enough so that sunken walks will not be necessary. Build exactly as though it were one-half of a house 28x24 feet, making the walls four and one-half feet high, with two feet of glass under the plate, and with the ridge about twelve feet high. There should be three ventilators, five and one-half feet long, in the side wall and the same number at the ridge.

If there are no outside doors, run a bench, three and one-half feet wide, around the side and ends of the house, with a bench in the middle of the house, six and one-half feet wide. This will leave a space twenty-one inches wide for a walk along the back wall and one of the same width between the benches. Although somewhat difficult to water, a bench for flats may be arranged over the rear walk, about six and one-half feet from the floor.

The Market.

The weather during the week preceding Christmas has been highly changeable; some days were most wintry, then came rain and mild weather again. A terrific wind storm struck this section December 18 and a great deal of damage was done. Many large plate glass windows were broken and much inconvenience has been experienced. A great deal of the exterior decorating has been blown down and scattered through the streets. This storm, with snow flurries, has covered a period of over thirty hours. Business throughout the week was good in all the stores and many preparations have been made for the holidays, every store being resplendent with the vivid Christmas reds. Poinsettias appear to be plentiful, and cherries and peppers are in good supply. Quantities of holly and ferns, as well as a good showing of Boston ferns and palms, are seen at the wholesale houses. Cut flowers have moved fairly well during the last few days and the market is pretty well taken care of. Roses are the main offering now, although some good mums reach us. Carnations are being held back for a few days. A small shipment of sweet peas reaches this market occasionally, and sells well. Violets are reaching us in larger supply, but as yet there seems to be no life to the violet market. Good yellow pompons are seen and move well. Stevia is seen, but arrives only in small quantities. There has been a large demand for Christmas greens, especially the ground pine, but, for some reason or other, the laurel roping business has not been as large as previously.

Various Notes.

The Christmas display of poinsettias and other flowers of choice variety was seen at the Lamberton Conservatory December 18 by a large number of Rochesterians. Unfortunately, however, the bad weather prevented many from attending, but the exhibit will be continued throughout the next two weeks, and plants will be replaced as found necessary.

Among the visitors to the trade last week were H. L. Blind and Homer Frey, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh; Mrs. George M. Patrick, Auburn, N. Y.; Mrs. George Ely, Clyde, N. Y.; Mrs. F. W. Quance, Newark, N. Y.

Asbestfalt

(REG. U. S. PATENT OFF.)

An Elastic Cement That Expands and Contracts With the Weather

Make your greenhouse weather-tight with Asbestfalt, the elastic cement that never gets hard, cracks or peels in cold weather or runs in hot weather.

$1.25 per gallon. Why pay more?

You can't get anything better no matter how much more you pay. The ingredients are of the purest; weighs but 10 pounds to the gallon.

With the scarcity of coal and its high prices, the careful application of Asbestfalt will more than pay for itself by keeping your greenhouse air-tight.

To insure best results, apply Asbestfalt with our Liquid Putty Machine, price $2.00. With every barrel purchase of Asbestfalt, one machine free.

mas stockings were placed at each plate and the table was prettily decorated with seasonable goods.

The entire force of the George B. Hart wholesale establishment has been working nights in order to catch up with the orders, which have been particularly good. The season has been better than this firm had hoped for and stock has moved along in fine shape.

Hugo Teute is undoubtedly the first on the market with some particularly good hyacinths, in pink and white. These are moving well.

J. B. Keller Sons have a large quantity of gift bowls and baskets of Paper White narcissi, neatly trimmed with cones and berries, tied with Christmas red ribbon; these are seen in all sizes and meet the needs of the most conservative buyer.

Boxwood balls are seen in good quantities at Alberts' Flower Store; these are neatly decorated in several different styles and make an exquisite decoration and gift.

One entire window, devoted to straw-flowers worked up in various ways, is seen at the East Main street store of Salter Bros. The demand for these eclipses that of any previous season, according to members of this firm.

As a Christmas and holiday novelty, Hart & Vick have conceived an arrangement of a holly box with partitions, holding twelve named varieties of gladioli. A second box contains a glass bowl, with pebbles and narcissi, with an excellent reproduction of them in blossom inside the cover. They are selling remarkably well. H. J. T.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

Market conditions last week were about on a par with those of the week previous, with the exception that a considerable amount of business was noticed in Christmas supplies. With the going of mums, roses alone help to keep the market supplied with good stock. Carnations are holding their own, but, as is usually the case, there are too many white in proportion to colored.

Sweet peas are now arriving in larger shipments and, with a bit of sunshine, they will be just right for Christmas. There seems to be a shortage in red berries every year, but this year more than ever, and the price is beyond reach. They are of an inferior grade.

Lilies, both calla and Harrisii, find a good market and are now selling at $20 and $25 per hundred.

Primulas have shown themselves once more and are ever welcome flowers

After a two years' leave of absence, Roman hyacinths have made their appearance and move well, because of the limited supply.

Various Notes.

The trade regrets the illness of C. E. Critchell, who is in the Good Samaritan hospital, suffering with quinsy. The last report stated that Mr. Critchell was getting along well.

R. A. Kelly has had some exceptional window displays lately.

The William Murphy Co. has been receiving some good Premier roses from Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., and also some good Mme. Butterfly from Charles Murphy, of Price Hill. Mr. Murphy reports that the outlook for Christmas at his establishment is good.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has some large White Mistletoe mums arriving from Frank Volz, of Westwood.

H. W. Sheppard has had a record week in the sale of plants. The firm has increased its force considerably for the holidays, which means that the outlook is promising.

E. G. Gillett has received a large shipment of boxwood and he reports that sales are many.

The visitors last week were: George Mohn, of the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago; Henry Coffman, of McClure-Coffman, Huntington, W. Va.; S. M. Harbison, of Danville, Ky.; E. J. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, and Harry F. Smith, of Richmond, Ind.

L. H. Kyrk is receiving some good stevia from George Klotter, of Price Hill. G. H. K.

Will they be dead when you get back?

When you leave the fumigator burning in the greenhouse and shut the door after you—how sure are you that it will do its work?

That all depends on the fumigator.

Hall's Nicotine Fumigator is prepared under accurate and scientific processes that insure its effectiveness against plant-lice, thrips, and similar sucking insects.

It lights quickly, burns evenly and will not go out. No waste—every particle is consumed.

It is guaranteed to contain 12½% pure nicotine and it retains this strength indefinitely—the air-tight tins take care of that. It is most economical; in fact, it costs but 25 cents to fumigate the ordinary greenhouse (20 by 100 feet).

10-pound tins, $8.50; 2½-pound tins, $2.50; one-pound tins, $1.25.

OUR NORTHERN MICHIGAN GROWN
GLADIOLUS BULBS

Are far superior to bulbs grown farther south, especially for December planting and forcing.

We find that we still have a few thousand of each of the following varieties to spare, if taken at once.

These are all our own growing; fancy, bright plump bulbs; absolutely free from disease; true to name.

Prices are for 1000, 250 at thousand rates.

LILYWHITE.

The long desired pure white Gladiolus of vigorous, healthy growth; great multiplying power; straight spikes opening six to eight blooms at a time; an ideal forcer, early as Halley and the best commercial pure white to date.

Awarded first prize by New York, Massachusetts and St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, Horticultural Societies and American Gladiolus Society.

This variety will be grown eventually by the million and practical florists will get stock at once. Will sell a limited number of bulblets at $4.00 per 1000.

Send for our descriptive list of cut-flower varieties suitable for retail florists; also testimonials from leading growers.

HYBRIDIZED DAHLIA SEED.

This seed is raised from the most up-to-date
Dahlias in existence. No place in the world have Dahlias been brought up to such perfection as they have been around San Francisco. This mixture contains all colors and types of Peony, Cactus and Decorative varieties. Our raising California summers make it possible to get seed even from the very double varieties, a result extremely difficult in States where it is rainy during the time when the seed should set.

The seed we sent out in previous years was highly praised by all who raised Dahlias from it, but this seed is far superior to what we have sent out in previous years. The seedlings will commence to flower two months after sowing and almost a month earlier than plants raised from bulbs.

Richard Diener Co., Kentfield, Cal.

Gentlemen: The Dahlia Seed received from you last year turned out fine. Could not think Dahlias could be grown from seed in such short time. Had some very fine blooms. One yellow Peony flowered that was extra fine, some 8 inches and a clear canary-yellow. Everyone who saw it was amazed at the size grown from seed. Had a clear flesh-pink; beautiful under lamp light.
Respectfully, Wm. McBrien.

CINERARIAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

I should like to get a batch of cinerarias, both the dwarf and stellata varieties, in flower for October to Christmas. When is it best to sow these?

J. W. H.—Mich.

It is doubtful whether it would be either profitable or desirable to flower cinerarias as early as October. You can, however, have them for Christmas, if you sow the seeds not later than June 1 and grow them on in a cool, shaded and well ventilated greenhouse through the summer or, better still, in cold-frames. The large-flowered types naturally flower earlier than the small-flowered and taller-growing stellatas. It is doubtful if you can flower the latter even as early as Christmas. You can, however, get them in a good condition in January and February, when such pot plants are in good demand. C. W.

CATTLEYAS NOT FLOWERING.

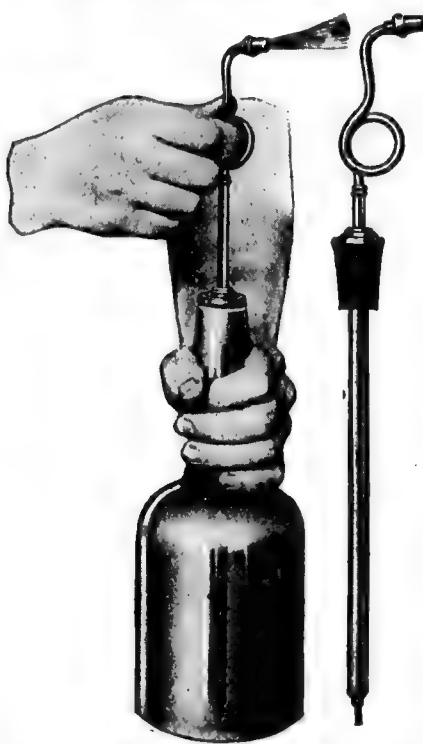

I am experiencing some trouble with cattleyas. The plants seem to be thrifty, but where the flower buds should come a leaf forms instead, which should develop into a bud, but grows blind. These plants are growing in 6-inch and 8-inch pans and are planted in cut-up sphagnum moss with a little peat and black fiber. They are sprayed every day if the weather is bright and are not kept too wet. The night temperature is from 60 to 65 degrees. Can you suggest a remedy for this condition.

W. R. B.—N. C.

Your night temperature is rather high for cattleyas; 58 to 60 degrees would be better. On cold nights it will be better to allow the temperature to fall to 50 to 55 degrees. Cattleyas want an abundant supply of fresh air and there are few days even in the most severe weather when some top ventilation can-

Lightning No. 65 Bottle Sprayer

FITS ANY ORDINARY QUART BOTTLE

Made Entirely of Brass with Brass Valves and no Parts to Wear Out. Nicely Nickel-Plated.

This sprayer consists of one seamless brass tube, working inside of an outer brass tube. The valves are of brass with no parts to wear or play out. It is made to fit any quart bottle, and is attached by simply setting it in the bottle, as you would a cork; the outer tube is provided with a cork, as shown in the illustration, which fits the opening of the bottle snugly, making the sprayer rigid.

Thousands used by florists for greenhouse spraying. Sells easily to your customers, for spraying house plants, flowers, etc. May also be used for general spraying purposes—disinfectants, etc. Throws a powerful, broad, fine mist spray. Easily operated.

not be given. As your plants throw blind sheaths, provided they make sizable bulbs, I am inclined to think that you are shading too heavily. These plants want little shade from December 1 until March 1. Shading will keep the foliage dark, but plants with more light will bloom far more freely. A removable shade where it can be used—lath shades or cloth—is far preferable to shading on the glass. Striped shading is good and allows a diffusion of sunlight with no possibility of burning. As to compost for cattleyas, I would suggest not using any sphagnum moss or peat, and sticking to dark-colored osmunda fiber as being the least destructible. Your spraying on clear days and watering as needed seems to be all right. It is always safer to underwater rather than the reverse, particularly in winter. C. W.

FOLEY

AND now the Christmas candles are alighting and the bright red holly berries are agleaming in the dark, glittering green of the leaves. There is cooking and baking, roasting and basting, laughter and merriment. And there is real joy in abundance, for at this season of the year our hearts are renewed within us, the years with their cares fall away, and we become again as little children in spirit, with a profusion of good will towards man in general and a wealth---a profundity---of rich, warm fellowship for our friends and our old friends in particular. And, realizing as we do that our own especial joys are made possible in a great measure by the fairness, co-operation and support of the florists' trade, we drink a health to you. And, too, before the clangor of the Christmas bells rings out and drowns our voices, we want to wish you, Mr. Florist, and all the loved ones gathered around your festive board, wherever that may be, a Merry, Merry Christmas.

Greenhouse Builders

Important Announcement That Vitally Interests You

If you knew right now that prices and freight would absolutely be no lower for some time to come—and more than likely higher—you would not hesitate a minute on placing your order at once for a greenhouse.

Suppose, therefore, that you order it now and we take the chances for you. We take the chances by absolutely guaranteeing to deduct from your bill any difference there may be between now and May first, resulting from any lowered costs on glass, pipe and figured freight rates.

On the other hand, if prices go up you are just as fully protected, as again we take all the chances.

The only string to this liberal guarantee is that your order must be placed between now and the first of February. Also that our price protection guarantee holds right up to May first.

When considering this most liberal offer, bear in mind that we have made some rather startling reduction in prices, which you also get the full benefit of.

Let's get together and talk business.

PROFIT IN PLUMOSUS GROWN UNDER GLASS

Northern florists, in general, have the impression that Asparagus plumosus cannot be grown profitably under glass. Hence, the bulk of the country's supply of the cut sprays is obtained from lath houses in Florida and California. This writer recommends plumosus as a greenhouse crop.

ASPARAGUS plumosus nanus, the most popular green now used by florists in decorating and designing, was originally found in South Africa. It is easy to imagine this beautiful, fern-like plant twining its fluffy vines among the branches of the trees which grow in that warm, humid climate. It seems that originally there was a dwarf form, which has since been lost track of, besides our present vining variety, which often sends its shoots to a height of twenty feet.

As a commercial green, it is undoubtedly more extensively used in the art of decorating and designing and in the arrangement of loose flowers than any other. Its fluffiness, combined with its deep, rich color, only enhances the beauty of the flowers with which it is associated.

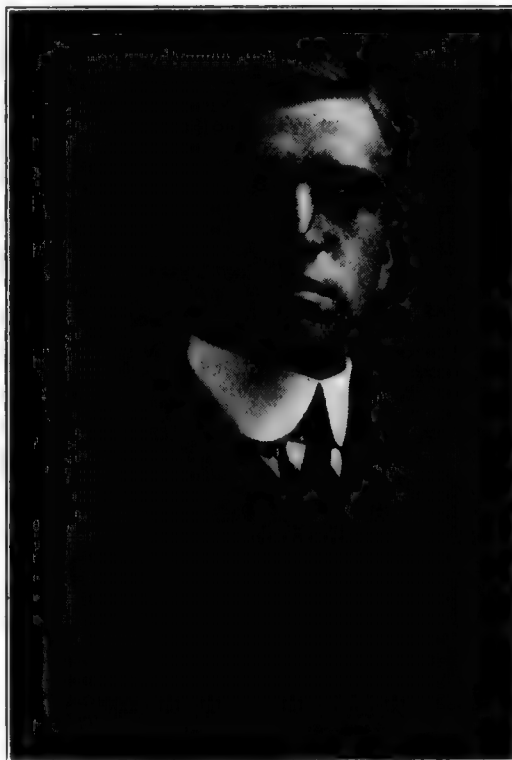

Why the Crop Is Profitable.

As grown in the lath houses of Florida and California, however, it lacks that fineness and good color which are so easily distinguishable in stock grown in a greenhouse, where temperature and moisture can be controlled at all times. Although it is sometimes grown in strings, the great demand is for cut sprays from eight to thirty-six inches long, for which a good market can be found at all times.

After about ten years of experimentation, during which our beds have grown in extent from 100 square feet to over one-third of an acre, we have proved that Asparagus plumosus can be both successfully and profitably grown under glass. Although the period between seed sowing and the cutting of mature sprays seems a long time, yet the productiveness of the beds, which, with proper care, will last in good production for from five to ten years, pays the grower for his patience. When roses, mums or carnations are ready to cut, they must be sold or lost. If the market is dull when a crop of Asparagus plumosus is ready, the grower may hold it for one, two or even three months, or until the market is better. That point should receive serious consideration, as we know that thousands of fine flowers are lost each year on account of overproduction during some seasons of the year.

The life of Asparagus plumosus is remarkably long even after it is cut. Flower shops often receive only one shipment each week, easily holding it in good shape for that length of time. It is, therefore, a good shipper, often traveling from three to five days in shipments to the northern florists by Florida and California growers.

Asparagus plumosus does not bloom until it is about 2 years old. The flowers, which are extremely small, appear on the oldest sprays in great numbers. They soon drop off and the small, green seed pods take their places. The pods grow to about the size of a large pea, containing either one or two seeds, which are black and hard. When ripe the pods are a bright red; they should then be picked and cared for until sowed. Seed should be picked from strong, healthy plants only; in that way the stock is strengthened and plants of the greatest possible productiveness result.

From Pots to Ground Beds.

Seed may be sown at any time, in boxes about three inches deep, and should be covered with light loam. In a well lighted house, with a temperature of about 60 degrees, a good percentage of the seed will germinate. After the seedlings are about three inches high and show a sturdy top, they should be potted in 2½-inch pots, in good, not too heavy loam. They should not be permitted to become dry, or their growth will be stunted. A light house and a temperature of 55 degrees will suit them. When well rooted they should be shifted into 4-inch pots, there to remain until bedded.

The beds should be on the ground, as ground beds are more economical than raised beds, are more easily cared for and produce far better results. The soil in the beds should be medium heavy and should contain about one-fourth well rotted manure. The depth of the soil will largely determine the life of the beds; the depth should not be less than eight inches and preferably twelve or fourteen inches. The great objection to raised beds is that the proper depth cannot be obtained without extra expense for material. It is also difficult to keep raised beds moist enough for the best growth of the sprays. Should there be danger of the plants getting wet feet, as would be probable if the greenhouse floor is of a heavy, sticky clay, the walks may be dug out to a depth of about six inches and filled with ashes.

Watering, Feeding and Wiring.

During the winter months the watering should be done on bright days, if possible, and beneath the foliage. In summer, should the foliage become infested with red spider, syringing will be necessary; this will also be of benefit to the color and quality of the sprays.

Beds five feet wide are used, accommodating six plants across the bed if they are planted twelve inches apart each way. That distance allows plenty of room for cultivation and top-dressing. Cultivation should take place several times before the growth prevents it. This not only keeps the soil loose on top, but, as in the case of other crops, increases the growth and conserves moisture. Unless the soil is especially solid, this cultivating should be done with the fingers, as the new shoots are tender and easily broken. A tool such as is often used for that purpose will do great damage unless used with care.

Fertilizing by top-dressing should begin during the second summer after the beds have been planted, and the applications should be liberal. Shredded cattle manure or pulverized sheep manure is most satisfactory, although rather expensive for this purpose. These manures contain no weed seeds and are free from dangerous insects and diseases. They are also easier to apply than barnyard manure, which is often half straw or litter. Liquid manure may be used, but top-dressing is preferred, as it feeds the plants slowly. The top-dressing is one of the most important items in the growth of asparagus; it not only fertilizes, but prevents weeds; the soil does not bake and the manure holds moisture. Therefore, waterings need not be so frequent in winter, when wet foliage overnight causes loss of sprays.

To prevent the sprays from falling into the walks and being tramped, wires should be strung along the sides of the beds, one about eight inches above the board and another about twenty-four inches higher. An efficient and economical way of wiring is as follows: Old 1-inch pipe which has been taken from water or steam systems, and which a florist usually has a stock of, is cut into pieces about four feet long, to serve as posts. Two holes—about three-sixteenths of an inch is large enough—are then drilled through the posts, one close to the upper end and the other two feet from it. The posts are then driven inside the bench side until the lower hole is eight inches above the board. The posts are spaced about twelve or fifteen feet apart. The wires are then drawn through the holes and fastened securely to posts at each end of the bed. If the posts are driven into the ground deep enough to be fairly solid, no cross wires or braces are needed. No longitudinal or cross wires are needed in the beds, as the foliage usually is so dense that it does not fall unless it is hit too hard in watering.

Pinching the Tops.

As the plants throw up long, rank shoots, the tops should be pinched when about three feet high. This prevents vining and encourages branching. Plumosus is by nature a climber and the grower should be exceedingly careful that his beds do not become one solid, tangled mass, for after the sprays branch it is nearly impossible to separate them.

Green aphids, red spider and sow bugs are the most common pests, and the only serious ones, that infest plumosus. Green aphids is easily held in check by spraying with a nicotine solution, or by burning nicotine papers or tobacco. Of the three methods, spraying is most successful. Red spider, which is rarely found during the winter, may be controlled by syringing with plain water. The sow bugs destroy the tender shoots, usually biting out the tops as they come through the soil. Should the bugs become numerous, great damage will follow and only incessant feeding with a good Paris green mixture—several formulas for which have appeared in these columns—will finally succeed in ridding the beds of this, the worst pest known to growers of Asparagus plumosus.

Beginning to Cut Sprays.

Plumosus will do its best in a light, high house, with a night temperature of 55 degrees, but may have a higher temperature than that and will produce more accordingly. Some growers dry their beds during the summer, but this has been found not entirely successful and not at all profitable.

Cutting should not begin until the second summer or early autumn, when the plants have become firmly established in the soil and have thrown up a good number of sprays. Then they will not be so much affected by cutting as they would be if the cutting had begun soon after planting. Care should be exercised at all times that the plants are not cut too hard, for excessive cutting always leaves its mark. Beds from which the sprays are cut as soon as they are developed, and on which this is made a regular practice, will never produce the desired quantity or quality, nor will the life of the beds be half so long. The grower will find that it pays to be in no hurry in cutting a new bed.

Although there are several other species of ornamental asparagus, A. plumosus is the best of them all and leads all other greens for florists' use.

HOUSE OF ASPARAGUS.

The illustration on this page shows a house of Asparagus plumosus nanus at the range of J. N. Spanabel & Sons, Columbiana, O. It contains nine beds, each 5x200 feet, which hold approximately 13,000 plants. The height of the plants may be determined by comparison with the head of the firm and father of the author of this article, whose figure appears in the center of the house.

NEWARK, N. J.

Considering the general state of business conditions, most of the Newark florists had a satisfactory Christmas trade. The range of prices was higher than it was thought some time ago that they might be and the high cost of flowers caused many persons to buy plants. The outlook is good for a brisk New Year's trade and one which will be as satisfactory as that of Christmas. The year, as a whole, has been rather slow with most of the florists and profits have been correspondingly small.

The Terminal Flower Shop had an excellent Christmas trade. R. B. M.

BLOOMING BIG BEGONIAS

WINTER-FLOWERING BEGONIAS.

Of the English Type.

In order to get a clearer understanding of the subject of winter-flowering begonias, it may be necessary to know a little of their history.

Begonia socotrana, from which the large-flowered, winter-blooming begonias have been evolved, was introduced in 1860 from the island of Socotra, in the Red sea, by Professor Isaac Bailey Balfour, of Edinburgh, Scotland. John Heal, of James Veitch & Sons, Chelsea, England, recognized the possibilities of this species for hybridizing and to him belongs the honor of raising the first hybrids of the winter-flowering begonia, which was the result of crossing B. socotrana with several large-flowered, tuberous-rooted varieties.

The first of these varieties to receive recognition from the Royal Horticultural Society of England was the John Heal, exhibited by James Veitch & Sons in 1885. Little was heard of them again until 1902, when James Veitch & Sons exhibited a group of these plants and about this time listed twelve varieties in their catalogue.

In later years the work of hybridization was taken up by Clibran's, Altrincham, England, who now have more than fifty varieties listed in their catalogue.

Propagation.

They can be readily propagated at any time during their flowering season by leaf or growth cuttings. In August or September a leaf will root in about two weeks, but this is not a desirable time, as the plants at this season are developing their flowering material, and the first growths from such cuttings are in form of lateral or flowering growths, after which the plant becomes dormant and will not start new growth until spring, whereas leaves rooted in November or December, when the plants are in full bloom, have spent all their flowering material and, although they are slower to propagate, their growth is continuous and they will have a good start for the next season. It is from such cuttings we get our finest plants.

For propagation we have small pans filled with clean, sharp sand, packed firmly. In these we place the desired number of cuttings, water well and then plunge the pans in the propagating bed. They are neither watered nor damped again until rooted. Avoid a close case or anything which will cause excessive moisture. A close house with a temperature of 60 degrees and a bottom heat of 65 to 70 degrees suits them best. Keep the sand in the bed damp among the pans. When they require watering, which is seldom, the pans are removed from the bed and placed in a shallow pan of water for a few minutes or until the sand shows moisture on the surface.

In about thirty days the rooted cuttings are ready for potting, which must not be neglected. Put them in thumb pots, using a sandy leaf soil for the first potting, keeping the crown near the surface.

Much admired in England, the type of begonias which are the subject of the remarks of James Marlborough and Peter Arnott on this and the following page have been little grown in this country. Some florists have them and a larger number of private growers. The two growers who present information here are perhaps unexcelled in the production of the plants, Mr. Marlborough having secured gold medals for them at the Boston shows and having shown plants of Emily Clibran four to five feet across, 1 year old from leaf cuttings, carrying hundreds of flowers. It is believed that this is the first full presentation of instructions for their culture that has been given to American florists.

Early Care.

This young stock will need little attention for some time. Like Gloire de

Lorraine, they are slow and will not make much growth until spring, but should be kept in comfortable quarters and overhead damping should be avoided as much as possible. As spring approaches and the young plants show signs of action, they are potted in larger pots, using a light, sandy mixture of loam and leaf-mold in equal parts; to this add one-fifth part of well rotted cow manure for the final potting. After the plants are well established in their flowering pots, a light feeding once a week with liquid manure will help them.

Shading should always be light, but the plants must have no direct sunshine. Do not syringe the plants or water them overhead, but keep the house moist. Fumigate once a week, using a somewhat stronger dose than for other plants, so as to prevent insect attacks, of which the mite is the worst. This latter can be detected by the rusty, corrugated appearance of the stem or leaf and is fatal if allowed to get a good start.

One of the Large-Flowered English Begonias, Emily Clibran.

A digest of the talk on "Winter-Flowering Begonias of the English Type," delivered by James Marlborough before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, Mass., December 20.

There Are 13,000 Plants of Asparagus Plumosus Nanus in this House, Contained in Nine Beds, Each 5x220 feet.

moisture. Therefore, waterings need not be so frequent in winter, when wet foliage overnight causes loss of sprays.

To prevent the sprays from falling into the walks and being tramped, wires should be strung along the sides of the beds, one about eight inches above the board and another about twenty-four inches higher. An efficient and economical way of wiring is as follows: Old 1-inch pipe which has been taken from water or steam systems, and which a florist usually has a stock of, is cut into pieces about four feet long, to serve as posts. Two holes—about three-sixteenths of an inch is large enough—are then drilled through the posts, one close to the upper end and the other two feet from it. The posts are then driven inside the bench side until the lower hole is eight inches above the board. The posts are spaced about twelve or fifteen feet apart. The wires are then drawn through the holes and fastened securely to posts at each end of the bed. If the posts are driven into the ground deep enough to be fairly solid, no cross wires or braces are needed. No longitudinal or cross wires are needed in the beds, as the foliage usually is so dense that it does not fall unless it is hit too hard in watering.

Pinching the Tops.

As the plants throw up long, rank shoots, the tops should be pinched when about three feet high. This prevents vining and encourages branching. Plumosus is by nature a climber and the grower should be exceedingly careful that his beds do not become one solid, tangled mass, for after the sprays branch it is nearly impossible to separate them.

Green aphid, red spider and sow bugs are the most common pests, and the only serious ones, that infest plumosus. Green aphid is easily held in check by spraying with a nicotine solution, or by burning nicotine papers or tobacco. Of the three methods, spraying is most successful. Red spider, which is rarely found during the winter, may be controlled by syringing with plain water. The sow bugs destroy the tender shoots, usually biting out the tops as they come through the soil. Should the bugs become numerous, great damage will follow and only incessant feeding with a good Paris green mixture—several formulas for which have appeared in these columns—will finally succeed in ridding the beds of this, the worst pest known to growers of Asparagus plumosus.

Beginning to Cut Sprays.

Plumosus will do its best in a light, high house, with a night temperature of 55 degrees, but may have a higher temperature than that and will produce more accordingly. Some growers dry their beds during the summer, but this has been found not entirely successful and not at all profitable.

Cutting should not begin until the second summer or early autumn, when the plants have become firmly established in the soil and have thrown up a good number of sprays. Then they will not be so much affected by cutting as they would be if the cutting had begun soon after planting. Care should be exercised at all times that the plants are not cut too hard, for excessive cutting always leaves its mark. Beds from which the sprays are cut as soon as they are developed, and on which this is made a regular practice, will never produce the desired quantity or quality, nor will the life of the beds be half so long. The grower will find that it pays to be in no hurry in cutting a new bed.

Although there are several other species of ornamental asparagus, A. plumosus is the best of them all and leads all other greens for florists' use.

HOUSE OF ASPARAGUS.

The illustration on this page shows a house of Asparagus plumosus nanus at the range of J. N. Spanabel & Sons, Columbiana, O. It contains nine beds, each 5x200 feet, which hold approximately 13,000 plants. The height of the plants may be determined by comparison with the head of the firm and father of the author of this article, whose figure appears in the center of the house.

NEWARK, N. J.

Considering the general state of business conditions, most of the Newark florists had a satisfactory Christmas trade. The range of prices was higher than it was thought some time ago that they might be and the high cost of flowers caused many persons to buy plants. The outlook is good for a brisk New Year's trade and one which will be as satisfactory as that of Christmas. The year, as a whole, has been rather slow with most of the florists and profits have been correspondingly small.

The Terminal Flower Shop had an excellent Christmas trade. R. B. M.

BLOOMING BIG BEGONIAS

WINTER-FLOWERING BEGONIAS.

Of the English Type.

In order to get a clearer understanding of the subject of winter-flowering begonias, it may be necessary to know a little of their history.

Begonia socotrana, from which the large-flowered, winter-blooming begonias have been evolved, was introduced in 1860 from the island of Socotra, in the Red sea, by Professor Isaac Bailey Balfour, of Edinburgh, Scotland. John Heal, of James Veitch & Sons, Chelsea, England, recognized the possibilities of this species for hybridizing and to him belongs the honor of raising the first hybrids of the winter-flowering begonia, which was the result of crossing B. socotrana with several large-flowered, tuberous-rooted varieties.

The first of these varieties to receive recognition from the Royal Horticultural Society of England was the John Heal, exhibited by James Veitch & Sons in 1885. Little was heard of them again until 1902, when James Veitch & Sons exhibited a group of these plants and about this time listed twelve varieties in their catalogue.

In later years the work of hybridization was taken up by Clibran's, Altrincham, England, who now have more than fifty varieties listed in their catalogue.

Propagation.

They can be readily propagated at any time during their flowering season by leaf or growth cuttings. In August or September a leaf will root in about two weeks, but this is not a desirable time, as the plants at this season are developing their flowering material, and the first growths from such cuttings are in form of lateral or flowering growths, after which the plant becomes dormant and will not start new growth until spring, whereas leaves rooted in November or December, when the plants are in full bloom, have spent all their flowering material and, although they are slower to propagate, their growth is continuous and they will have a good start for the next season. It is from such cuttings we get our finest plants.

For propagation we have small pans filled with clean, sharp sand, packed firmly. In these we place the desired number of cuttings, water well and then plunge the pans in the propagating bed. They are neither watered nor damped again until rooted. Avoid a close case or anything which will cause excessive moisture. A close house with a temperature of 60 degrees and a bottom heat of 65 to 70 degrees suits them best. Keep the sand in the bed damp among the pans. When they require watering, which is seldom, the pans are removed from the bed and placed in a shallow pan of water for a few minutes or until the sand shows moisture on the surface.

In about thirty days the rooted cuttings are ready for potting, which must not be neglected. Put them in thumb pots, using a sandy leaf soil for the first potting, keeping the crown near the surface.

Much admired in England, the type of begonias which are the subject of the remarks of James Marlborough and Peter Arnott on this and the following page have been little grown in this country. Some florists have them and a larger number of private growers. The two growers who present information here are perhaps unexcelled in the production of the plants, Mr. Marlborough having secured gold medals for them at the Boston shows and having shown plants of Emily Clibran four to five feet across, 1 year old from leaf cuttings, carrying hundreds of flowers. It is believed that this is the first full presentation of instructions for their culture that has been given to American florists.

Early Care.

This young stock will need little attention for some time. Like Gloire de

Lorraine, they are slow and will not make much growth until spring, but should be kept in comfortable quarters and overhead damping should be avoided as much as possible. As spring approaches and the young plants show signs of action, they are potted in larger pots, using a light, sandy mixture of loam and leaf-mold in equal parts; to this add one-fifth part of well rotted cow manure for the final potting. After the plants are well established in their flowering pots, a light feeding once a week with liquid manure will help them.

Shading should always be light, but the plants must have no direct sunshine. Do not syringe the plants or water them overhead, but keep the house moist. Fumigate once a week, using a somewhat stronger dose than for other plants, so as to prevent insect attacks, of which the mite is the worst. This latter can be detected by the rusty, corrugated appearance of the stem or leaf and is fatal if allowed to get a good start.

The most critical time in the cultivation of these plants is midsummer. They do not stand hot weather. Too high a temperature is shown by slow growth and a mottling of the leaves; in some varieties the upper surface of the leaves takes on an oily appearance. To avoid this, keep the house as cool as possible by putting on more shade, with top and bottom air both night and day.

Many varieties are of a compact habit and need no stopping during the flowering season, while others, like Mrs. Heal, Beauty of Hale and Mrs. T. H. Cook, will make better plants if stopped once when the growths are four to six inches long.

Best Varieties.

The flowers are sterile, which accounts for their long duration. With ordinary care, a plant will last in bloom from six to eight weeks and with the following varieties one may have plants in full bloom from October 1 until the middle of January.

Early varieties are: Ideala, Emily Clibran, Mrs. Heal, Sunrise, Eclipse, Empress, Dazzler and Her Majesty.

Midseason varieties are: Altrincham Pink, Optima, Fireflame, Exquisite, Orange King, Pink Perfection, Clibran's Pink and Britannia.

Late varieties are: Rosalind, Beauty of Hale, Clibran's Red, Miss Clibran, Mrs. Clibran, Display, Picotee, Lucy Clibran and Fascination.

Among these the most useful for cut flowers are: Exquisite, Orange King, Lucy Clibran and Beauty of Hale. Their fine trusses of large, loose flowers on long stems, make them suitable for table decorations.

Carrying Over Old Plants.

After flowering, plants to be carried over are placed where they will get some light and a temperature of 55 degrees; they should be kept moderately dry until about the middle of March, when most of the old stems will have fallen off and new growths will appear on the crown. As many of them have small tubers, care must be taken not to cut the old stems back too near the crown; better let them fall off.

As the new growth starts, take the plants away from the old soil and start them in flats or a sand bed in the same way that you would the summer-blooming tuberous-rooted begonias. When the new growths are about three inches in length they may be taken off as cuttings. After you are better acquainted with these begonias, you will place no more value on the old plants than on old plants of the Lorraine and your plants will be carried over in the same manner. There are some exceptions, as Optima and Fireflame do not readily form leaf cuttings and are better propagated by spring cuttings from the old tubers.

In conclusion, I would say there are few, if any, groups of plants that give greater satisfaction than the winter-flowering begonias of the large-flowered class, coming into bloom, as they do, at a season when variety in potted blooming plants is decidedly scarce.

IN THE ILLUSTRATION.

Some of the new winter-flowering begonias from England have been grown of late by J. B. Masson, wholesale grower, at Bethel, Kan. A pot of the variety Emily Clibran from his greenhouse is shown on the preceding page.

Mr. Masson's experience is told here in his own words: "I have grown about fifty plants. I have not sold any yet, but hope to put a limited number on the market next spring if I am successful with the propagation. I got my stock from Clibran's, Manchester, England, last April, after about six months' discussion over red tape with Uncle Sam, having to put up bond not to sell any of the original plants. All my plants have done exceptionally well, and most of them are equal to the one shown in the photograph, which is in a 6-inch pot."

"The varieties I am growing are Altrincham Pink, Beacon, Charming, Clibran's Crimson, Eclipse, Emily Clibran, Flambeau, Mrs. T. H. Cook,

BEST ENGLISH BEGONIAS.

Large-Flowered Winter Bloomers.

In offering a few suggestions on the culture of winter-flowering begonias from leaves and cuttings, I should like to say a word or two about some of the more distinct varieties and those which, in my estimation, are most easily grown.

Every begonia grower knows, or should know, Mrs. Heal, and no one who grows these begonias should be without a few plants of this variety. In the deep cerise pink shades, Mrs. Heal stands alone. I admit it will not combine well with some of the others, but, when arranged by itself in a setting of greenery, it is at once a sight of dazzling splendor. This variety can be grown easily from stem leaves put in sand about the first week in November.

Optima, too, with its warm glow of deep salmon color, should be included in every greenhouse collection. This begonia, like Mrs. Heal, propagates easily from stem leaves and, if old plants are kept over, they will throw an abundance of cuttings in April.

Exquisite, true to name, I consider the best variety of all, with gorgeous flowers of pink and white, measuring three to four inches in diameter. My experience with this variety is that it will not make a plant from a stem leaf. It makes a mass of roots and then decay sets in at the base of the stem. It will, however, come fairly well from a split leaf. With a good, sharp knife cut the stem clean away from the leaf; then cut the latter in two or three parts; insert these in sand to the depth of about one-half inch and make the soil moderately firm. Care must be taken not to bruise the leaf.

Moonbeam, another favorite, requires a little more shade than the others and comes readily from a stem leaf. I have not yet been able to make specimens of this begonia, but it is extremely free-flowering, and plants in even 6-inch pots, if massed together, present a fascination of rare beauty, with their soft, orange, coppery-colored flowers.

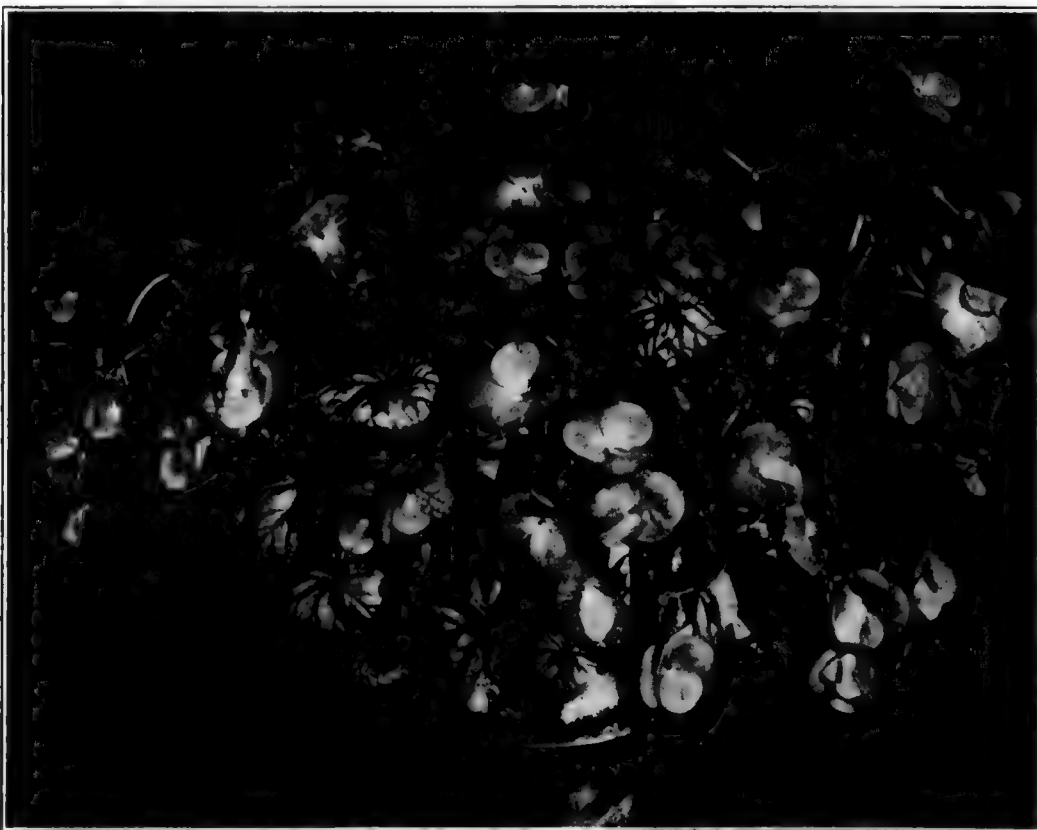

Miss Clibran, pale rose pink, with large, double, camellia-shaped flowers; Altrincham Pink, of old rose color, and Pink Perfection, shell pink, are all beautiful. When these are grouped with Acacia platyptera, blue and white browallias and ferns, a charming effect is produced.

Other varieties worthy of mention are: Fireflame, the finest of all red varieties. The flowers are flame-colored. This variety has been in flower with us for more than seven weeks. It may be propagated readily from stem leaves. Emily Clibran, double-flowered, pale salmon pink, makes a grand specimen plant and is one of the first to come into bloom. Rosalind, deep rose, will also make beautiful specimens in 8-inch or 9-inch pots. This is a late bloomer and makes a valuable addition to any collection. All the foregoing do well from split leaves.

Culture Is Simple.

nias is simple. Leaves put in sand about the first week in November should be ready for 2-inch pots about the beginning of January. They will root nicely in an open cutting bench and require a night temperature of 65 degrees. Shade them right along, either with newspapers or by shading the glass. After the leaves are put in, soak them well with water and, when the surface sand seems perfectly dry, another supply should be given. No overhead sprinkling is required.

In potting up the leaves, a compost of leaf soil, sand and just a little loam should be used. This done, take the plants back to the house whence they came and plunge the pots to their rims in sand or cocoanut fiber. This prevents drying out too quickly. In a few weeks they will begin to throw up growths from the base of the leaf, when they can be taken out of the plunge material and stood directly on the bench. After a few leaves have developed and the pots are well filled with roots, the plants can be transferred to 3-inch pots. The compost now can be made a little heavier by adding more loam, and so on with each successive potting, until they go into their flowering pots, when the compost should consist of two parts of good fibrous loam, one part leaf soil, some dried cow manure, some Clay's fertilizer and a liberal sprinkling of good, sharp sand. After the final potting is completed, which is usually about the end of July, the plants should be well developed and making rapid growth. It is most important that these plants be kept perfectly clean and they must never be allowed to suffer from mite, mildew, etc. Mite is the begonia's worst enemy. It can, however, be checked and prevented quite easily by using a mixture of soap spray and sulphur. A 3-inch pot of soap and a handful of sulphur to a pail of water will suffice. Dipping affected plants is far preferable to spraying. This should be done frequently. In the early stages of growth, dipping will not only keep the mite at bay, but will also ward off mildew.

Careful Watering Essential.

The large-flowered winter-blooming begonias will grow nicely along with Lorraine and Melior, under similar treatment. Careful watering is another essential to the well-being of the plants, and it is preferable to do it with the watering pot, rather than with the hose. Overhead spraying is harmful and should never be practiced.

Shading is necessary all through the spring and summer months, and either striped shading may be used on the glass or slat shades. The latter are preferable, as during spells of dull, cloudy weather, the plants can be readily exposed to full light, thus preventing weak, soft growths.

When the plants have filled their flowering pots with roots, the feeding should commence. Weak liquid manure water, alternated with Clay's fertilizer, a liberal teaspoonful of the latter to an 8-quart can, will prove beneficial at this stage.

When the plants are done flowering, the points ought to be trimmed off and the plants stood under a bench in a house having a night temperature of about 50 degrees. During this period little water will be required—just enough to prevent the plants from shriveling. By the latter part of March or early in April, the plants can be taken into a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees and be started up.

Some varieties, Optima, for instance, will throw a fine lot of cuttings by May, and these, if placed in the cutting bench, will root quickly. Others, whose habit it is to fall clean away from the plant, if shaken out and potted up, will make splendid plants by the following November.

SOME AMERICAN BEGONIAS.

Excellent Winter Varieties.

The four principal types of begonias are fibrous-rooted, tuberous-rooted, semi-tuberous-rooted and Rex, or fancy-leaved. I shall confine my few remarks to the winter-flowering portion of the first-named section. Orchids have been a good deal boomed in Boston, Mass., of late, but excellent though they are, they will never approach begonias in favor. The advent of Gloire de Lorraine caused a great sensation. If Lemoine had never given us any other plant than this, he would have done a whole lot for floriculture. Lorraine is handsome and still finds some favor, but it is not a good shipper and will not keep in the average house as will Glory of Cincinnati, Melior or Mrs. Peterson. The last-named is the finest keeper of all. I have had it in a house the whole winter in good condition. Under similar treatment, Cincinnati or Melior would last three weeks and Lorraine one week.

Rooting the Cuttings.

Old stock plants of these begonias are not good to carry over, except Mrs. Peterson. I have had plants of this kind 3 years old which received a silver medal from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Leaf cuttings are far the best for all these winter-flowering begonias and now is an excellent time to put them in. Some time ago I was never able to root begonias successfully in clear sand. Perhaps I could not secure the right grade of sand. I overcame this by placing a layer of cocoanut fiber at the bottom of the propagating bench and mixing coarse sand through it; half an inch of clear sand was laid over this. I have never had any trouble in rooting leaves or cuttings successfully in this medium. I do not favor cutting leaves. It is far better simply to break them off. Given a good watering, they would usually be well rooted in three weeks in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. The cocoanut fiber retains the moisture and usually a single watering suffices until the cuttings are ready to pot. Sometimes I have left leaf cuttings in until they lifted with a ball of roots and then placed them in 4-inch pots. Cuttings put in as I suggest possess more vigor and break much better than those placed in clear sand.

I like to give the plants, when potted, an overnight temperature of 60 degrees and not much shade. Some growers do not like pinching. I advocate and practice it as giving much more shapely plants. At one time I favored a light leaf-mold compost for begonias, but I have found that while leaf-mold is good for the first potting, little should be used for later pottings. Plants grown in leaf-mold are soft and flabby and will not stand up or keep as will those grown in cocoanut fiber. For a final potting I use a nice, light loam, a little Scotch-soot, some well rotted cow manure and a generous lot of coarse sand. No artificial manure whatever should be used. I would never again use any leaf-mold for the later pottings of either begonias or cyclamens.

A digest of the talk by Eric H. Wetterlow, superintendent for Mrs. Lester Leland, Manchester, Mass., delivered at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, December 20, 1921.

Regarding the new race of basket begonias, I have raised many fine seedlings of these and they are splendid for piazzas and porch decorations, sometimes hanging down three feet and blooming profusely all summer. The new variety, Frau Helen Harnes, awarded a silver medal by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, is a first-class bedder, as well as being excellent in pots or baskets. The color of this fine variety, soon to be disseminated, is a rich orange yellow.

Fighting the Mite.

Mite is one of the worst foes of both cyclamens and winter-flowering begonias. Perfect cleanliness in the house does much toward preventing its appearance. Should mite appear, however, I dip the plants in a nicotine solution, which also contains a little soap. I never use any artificial fertilizers on either cyclamens or begonias. In regard to varieties, Melior is now the favorite; Cincinnati makes a handsome plant; Mrs. Peterson is a wonderful bloomer and keeper and becomes darker in color as it grows older. Peerless is fine, but I am not convinced that it will displace Mrs. Peterson. Lorraine, the white Turnford Hall, La Patrie and Chatelaine are all useful winter varieties. W. N. C.

CYCLAMEN POINTERS.

[A digest of the talk by F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, delivered before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston December 20, 1921.]

The terrible loss in cyclamens each season, due to defective cultivation and disease, should give thoughtful growers cause for serious reflection. In the near vicinity of Boston this season at least 40,000 plants were a complete loss in about half a dozen commercial establishments. One of the great fundamentals for successful cyclamen culture, as, indeed, for about all other plants, is to keep them growing continuously and to remember that once plants become pot-bound they never amount to much. Continuous fumigation is also necessary; this should be attended to every week.

Get your plants into their flowering pots early; some growers pot as late as the middle of October. This is all wrong; the last shift should not be later than September. Plants must have continuous and persistent attention, the more the better. I use shredded cattle manure at the final potting and I flower the plants in from 4-inch to 10-inch pots. Clay's fertilizer is the only stimulant that I give my plants and I never had them so fine previous to using this. I give a liberal teaspoonful of Clay's fertilizer once a fortnight to my plants when they are well rooted and I do not use liquid manure at all; the latter causes a soft growth and the flowers are more flabby. Cyclamens are now, by all odds, the most valuable and satisfactory of all Christmas plants. Anyone selling them can rest assured that customers will get full value for their money. W. N. C.

Where a small number of clumps are to be stored, I would recommend that they be packed in a barrel or case, the inside of which is lined with paper. Lining with paper prevents free circulation of heat and air and maintains a more even temperature. I have found that it is the circulation of heat and air that frequently causes dahlias to dry up. An even temperature of between 40 and 50 degrees is best.

In heated cellars the clumps should be placed as far away from the source of heat as possible, and the amount of paper lining increased to prevent the circulation of heat. It is well to cover the top of the barrel with paper also.

Dahlias keep during the winter best in clumps; so it is better to wait until planting time before dividing. Then, too, in the spring eyes commence to show, which help in separating.

It is well to look at your dahlias every three or four weeks during the winter to see if they are keeping well. If mold or decay is noticed, they are too damp, and greater circulation is required; if the tubers are too dry and commence to shrivel, they should be covered more. If shriveling too much, they can be sprinkled with water, but, if this is done, care must be taken not to use too much water, which would cause them to sprout too early.

J. K. Alexander.

PROPAGATING GERANIUMS.

During the last summer and fall we put nearly 100,000 geranium cuttings in the sand, beginning August 15 and propagating continually until October 10. All these cuttings were from outdoor-grown stock. We rooted ninety-six per cent.

For propagating beds we used raised benches five feet wide and three inches deep. The sand was procured from a local sand bank and was used just as it came from the bank. It was put in the bed damp and leveled off to the top of the sideboard; it was then packed by using the fist, palm down; next it was leveled again and tamped the second time with a short piece of 2x4. In that way the bed was perfectly level and solid. The bed was then watered sufficiently to wet it through and the cuttings stuck in cuts in the sand made with an old butcher's knife. As each row was stuck the cuttings were made solid by tamping lightly with the outer edge of the palm. Rows were placed as close together as the foliage would permit. For example, in a bed five feet wide and 200 feet long there would be approximately 24,000 cuttings. After sticking, the cuttings were not watered, except applying mist sprays several times a day to prevent wilt, until the sand had become dry on top. In that way, damping-off and fungus were kept at low ebb. Instead of allowing soft-wood cuttings to lie and wilt for several hours, they were stuck at once. The less they wilt, the more will be rooted. During the extremely hot weather in August and September the beds were shaded by hanging burlap or canvas six or eight feet above the beds, so that the direct rays of the sun did not strike the cuttings.

In propagating cuttings in small boxes, the sand dries out so quickly that it is impossible to keep the cuttings wet enough without frequent waterings, thereby encouraging fungus and damping-off. If the grower only wishes to

DAHLIAS

DAHLIAS FROM CUTTINGS.

Will you kindly tell me the proper way to root dahlia cuttings? I can grow them from the seed and bulb, but have no success with the cuttings.

M. L. W.—Tex.

The propagation of dahlias by cuttings is employed chiefly by commercial growers, and the attention required is so great that it is often cheaper to buy plants.

The roots are planted closely in benches in the greenhouse early in January, and cuttings are made from the young shoots as fast as they form the third or fourth set of leaves. These cuttings are then carefully trimmed and placed in pure sand in the propagating bench, using a dibble and putting the cuttings in rows about three inches apart, with from one-half to one inch between the cuttings.

The propagating bench is made by running pipes beneath an ordinary bench and boarding up the sides to confine the heat. Although there may be a difference of opinion among propagators, yet a bottom-of-sand heat of 65 degrees, with the temperature of the house from 5 to 10 degrees less, will give the best results. With this temperature, the cuttings will root in about two weeks, and will be far stronger than if rooted in less time with greater heat. As soon as cuttings are rooted, they are potted off into small pots and grown in a cool greenhouse until danger of frost is over, when they are planted out in the open ground. Cuttings made too far below a joint, or too late in summer, will produce flowering plants, but no tubers. B.

WINTER STORING OF DAHLIAS.

The storage of dahlia clumps is important, because if they decay or dry up they become worthless. I commence harvesting as soon as the foliage is killed by a severe frost. My clumps are packed in large bins, each clump upside down. The object of having them in that position is to allow the watery substance in the stalk to run out. I have found that many varieties commence to decay if this watery substance remains in the stalk. If the stalk is too long and the clumps are upright, the watery substance collects at the base of the crown, causing decay, which many times destroys the entire clump.

root a few geraniums, he may use one end of a bench; the side benches next to an outside wall, if they are narrow, are easier to stick and also to control.

Geraniums can be propagated any time of the year. Next year we shall begin taking cuttings August 1.

SWEET PEAS TURN RED.

Last summer our Spencer peas, Blanche Ferry, after three or four cuttings, turned a solid red. They were planted in a soil composed of ashes and leaf-mold about six inches deep, using lime and half-rotten cow manure as a fertilizer. What is the cause?

E. W. G.—Pa.

These plants were affected with what is known as the striped disease of the sweet pea. During the early stages the flowers are lightly striped with white and red, this giving way later to almost a solid red. This trouble has almost always been traced at our range to spots affected with green fly, especially when plants were young. For next season it would be advisable to change the soil into which sweet peas are planted, carefully keeping green fly down.

DRACÆNA AND PANDANUS.

Please tell me how to propagate Dracæna terminalis and Pandanus Veitchii. Mention the most suitable temperature and also state what part of the plants makes the best material for cuttings.

P. D.—N. Y.

Dracæna terminalis may be propagated by partly cutting through the stem and then tying some sphagnum moss around the cut, the incision being made below the leaves. The moss must be kept moist and the temperature of the greenhouse kept up to 65 degrees at night. After the top is rooted, the remainder of the stem may be cut off, laid in sand on the bench and kept moist; in a few weeks it will make young growths from the joints. These young growths are taken off after they have four or five leaves and are placed in small pots in sandy soil, in which they will soon root if kept warm and moist.

The best cuttings of Pandanus Veitchii are secured from the side shoots around the bottom of the plant. These are taken off with a heel of the old stem and are put in small pots in the same manner as that suggested for dracænas, but will not require so much water as the latter. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees is best for these cuttings.

MAX KAISER'S CYCLAMENS.

With the departure of the azalea, the cyclamen has come to the front as the principal Christmas plant and most florists are better satisfied with the substitution. There is more money in growing cyclamens than there ever was in forcing azaleas. Instead of buying plants at a high price and reaping the profit only from forcing, the American grower now buys cyclamen seeds at a penny or two and grows them, in fifteen to eighteen months, into plants which will retail at anywhere from $2 to $25. The result depends on his skill.

Max Kaiser, proprietor of the Merriam Park Floral Co., at St. Paul, is a skillful cyclamen grower, as is attested by the picture of himself in his house of cyclamens. Be it known that the photograph was not made yesterday. This is a picture as the house looked December 9. December 26 it was quite another story, because all the plants had then gone home. Mr. Kaiser uses Ferd Fischer's seeds.

CINDERS FOR POT PLANTS.

Will you advise as to whether cinders are injurious to pot plants, if placed on benches to hold moisture, so that the plants will not dry out too quickly? If there are bad effects, what will they be?

R. N. S.—Utah.

I have not found any injury coming from the use of cinders on benches and I use them regularly. Also I regularly use screened cinders for drainage in flats, in pots and in propagating beds. Have you ever noticed how luxuriant vegetation is in beds of cinders outdoors? Do not be afraid to use them.

TO ROOT PLUMBAGOS.

How can I root plumbagos? I tried pure sand and a mixture of soil and sand, but all my cuttings fail. I have several large plants of both the blue and white-flowering varieties and I want to grow small plants for spring sales.

E. R. B.—Tex.

Plumbago capensis and its pure white form, also P. coccinea, the scarlet variety, are not at all difficult to propagate in either fall or spring. Use clear, sharp sand and no loam; take cuttings which are short or rubbed off with a heel or cut below an eye. The plants succeed best in what is known as an intermediate temperature under glass, about 55 degrees in winter. In the cutting bench some bottom heat, which will keep the sand about 65 degrees, is a benefit, but not necessary if the temperature of the house is about 55 or 60 degrees at night. Cuttings must, of course, be protected from the sun and from drafts and be carefully watered. Given these conditions, they are always found quite easy of propagation.

Christmas Business.

Florists of the national capital are practically unanimous in their statements that 1921 will rank at the top of the list in the matter of Christmas business. There is a great deal of complaint among the retailers because of the prevailing high prices. The main complaint is on carnations. Because of the fact that the wholesalers were improperly informed as to the probable number of carnations that would be on the market Christmas week, prices reached famine levels, the demand for red carnations, including some Wards, being $20 per hundred, others moving at $12 and $15. To come out even on this basis, the retailers were compelled to ask $5 and $6 per dozen and the people balked at those figures.

What appeared to be a shortage of carnations resulted, when coupled with the high prices, in a considerable quantity of really salable stock being left over. American Beauty roses sold well at high prices and there was the usual excellent demand for potted plants.

William F. Gude believed that the Christmas business of Gude Bros. Co. would show fully ten per cent increase over the same period of last year. "Our American Beauty business was good," he said. "I believe we sold in excess of 2,000 at retail, to say nothing of our wholesale business. Beauties brought up to $36 per dozen at retail and many were sold at that figure. The demand for potted plants was exceedingly good. In fact, to sum up the situation, I would say that everything that took the shape and form of a flower sold well. There is every indication also that we shall have a good business here in the national capital during the coming twelve months."

"Business was exceptionally good at our store," said Z. D. Blackistone. "It was a good thing for us that we had the added space at our store gained by the recent improvements. Even at that we were crowded with buyers. We found business good in novelties, such as made-up baskets, and we sold out completely on novelty candle designs that we had prepared beforehand of preserved flowers. We could have sold more had we been able to fill orders. I am sure that 1922 will be a very prosperous year in Washington, particularly as there will be a great deal of entertaining early in the year."

"We had the best Christmas business in the history of the Washington store," said Otto Bauer, manager of the S. S. Pennock establishment on H street. "We cleaned up nicely on everything."

"Our business this year was most satisfactory," said George C. Shaffer. "For one thing, we made preparations in advance that permitted us to handle an increased volume of trade in a far more orderly manner than ever before. We had the usual number of extra clerks and extra delivery facilities. We had a branch store across the street, where we handled a lot of extra stock, and everything was handled more efficiently. The one comment I would make of this year's business is on prices. They will have to come down. People are kicking and you cannot blame them. Carnations could not be purchased at wholesale for less than $20 per hundred and we had to ask $5 and $6 a dozen for them—prices that the average person would not pay. Lots of people declared they would buy candy instead and we know they did."

"We will go ahead of last year by about ten per cent, I should say," remarked David G. Grillbortzer, president of the Washington Floral Co., "though we have not had a chance to look at the books yet." "We were busy up to the last minute," said J. Harper Hetherington, manager of the concern's retail store. "Everything sold up well both in our wholesale and retail departments, and we have nothing to complain about. Beauties dragged a little bit on account of the price and there was a slowing down of sales of carnations for the same reason. Potted plants sold well at from $2 to $15. It was a good Christmas from the standpoint of the florist."

"We did a nice business," said Elmer C. Mayberry, of the Dupont Flower Shop. "We sold lots of high-priced flowers and had good stock to offer."

WINDOW OF WREATHS.

Realizing the various demands at Christmas time, one of which is for wreaths which will stand exposure to the freezing temperature at the holiday, Charles Henry Fox devoted his window display shortly before Christmas to wreaths. "The Sign of the Rose," as his store is called, always attracts passers in Philadelphia, for his windows are invariably interesting. And this display of wreaths, shown in the illustration on this page, proved a magnet. Each wreath was priced so that a prospective customer might see what his money would buy. Mr. Fox's supply was exhausted ere the holiday shoppers ceased calling.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Contributions for Rose Classes.

As chairman of the committee on commercial cut flower interests, I am pleased to report the following cash contributions to the American Rose Society schedule for the national flower show at Cleveland:

Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.....	$ 50.00
New Brunswick Nurseries, New Brunswick, N. J.....	10.00
S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y.....	25.00
Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.....	25.00
Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J....	50.00
S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia.....	50.00
Duckham-Pierson Co., Madison, N. J....	50.00
Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.....	50.00
Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.....	50.00
Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.....	50.00
Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.....	40.00
Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago....	10.00
A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.....	15.00
Elmer J. Weaver, Ronks, Pa.....	25.00
Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y..	125.00
Henshaw Floral Co., New York.....	25.00
Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y.....	50.00
Harry O. May, Summit, N. J.....	25.00

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—E. E. Nordwall has made a common law assignment to G. W. Gadd as trustee, the reason being that Mr. Nordwall is unable to meet his past due obligations. Mr. Gadd has written the creditors to extend the time of their payments for five or six months. The plan is to reduce immediately the expense of continuing the business. The stock being perishable, it seems most desirable that the business be continued. Mr. Nordwall is willing to assist in this at nominal salary. It is the plan of the trustee to get as much as possible out of the business and to distribute it ratably among the creditors. According to the trustee's statement, assets exceed liabilities by several thousand dollars.

CARNATIONS

LACK OF SUNSHINE FELT.

Our carnations are not doing well; the stems are weak and the flowers small. The buds on our sweet peas will not develop; they appear yellow and then dry up. We are sending you a specimen of these carnations and sweet peas, together with some of the soil in which they were grown. Will you kindly examine these and advise us what can be done to better conditions?

A. E.—Pa.

There is nothing radically wrong with your soil. The weak stems and small blooms may be the result of late planting or failure of the plants to take hold readily after being benched. Water and ventilate carefully, and in time they will come along in good shape. The sweet pea bud dropping is caused by the lack of sunshine, the soil having little if anything to do with it. Experiments are being conducted for the purpose of discovering control methods. Careful watering, ventilating and feeding will help some, but the general feeling seems to be that a lack of sunlight is really at the bottom of the trouble. A. F. J. B.

WARD WITH "WILD GROWTH."

Last spring we bought 2,500 rooted cuttings of Mrs. C. W. Ward carnations and planted them in the field in due time. It was a dry, hot summer, but the cuttings looked good when received and the plants were good, though small, when we benched them in the fall. They were a little slow to start, but recently they have grown rapidly. We find, however, that nearly all are making peculiar growth. They are extremely short-jointed, like the specimen sent you, and at nearly every joint a cutting has started. At first we thought the growths were all going to be blind, but in the last few days flower buds have been appearing on a good many of them. Do you think we shall get a profitable crop of flowers from these plants and would you recommend taking cuttings from them?

S. B.—Ill.

The shoot submitted had every appearance of being what is called "wild growth." It is not certain as to the cause of this growth. It is just possible that the unfavorable growing conditions during the summer, followed by rich culture since being housed, may have induced this unnatural growth. The most common cause of trouble of this kind, however, is improper selection of cuttings. A plant of this kind will appear in a bench and the propagator, seeing the abundant and vigorous-looking cuttings, will proceed to take them off for propagating. As these plants produce young shoots in such abundance, it requires but a few seasons to get a preponderance of this kind of plant. We have talked with several persons this fall who are having trouble of this kind.

These Mrs. Ward will probably throw buds later on, but not in such abundance as normal plants would do. Being well into the season, you could probably not replant with anything else that would pay you better. If these plants persist in this kind of growth, you should not propagate from them. Buy your new stock from a source which you know is free from that kind of trouble.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATION STEMS WEAK.

What can I do to make the stems of my carnations stiff and erect? I can grow a long stem, but as soon as the flower opens the stems seem to be too weak. I have used lime, bone meal, etc., and have dissolved one-half ounce of muriate of potash to a gallon of water and have applied this to about a yard square of bench. Their growth is healthy.

R. D.—Ga.

If you were in this latitude, you would have done about all that should be done in the way of doping your plants to stiffen the stems. But you are in the sunny south, where growing conditions are surely more favorable than here. You can safely use much more fertilizer during the winter months than we can. Certainly you should have no difficulty in keeping the carnation stems stiff.

You have much more sunshine and your climate is milder, permitting you to give abundant ventilation most of the time. These are the biggest factors in imparting this quality. Little trouble is experienced in this latitude until the shorter days, with diminished sunlight and colder temperature, necessitating the closing of the ventilators a large portion of the time.

The most successful growers make a practice of opening the ventilators at least a few hours each day, if at all possible, to change the atmosphere. You will find your clue in the above suggestions. Your soil may be light, which would have a tendency to produce weak stems. In that case use cattle manure for mulching and fertilizers that are rich in potash and do not forget to give abundant ventilation at every opportunity.

A. F. J. B.

TIMING CARNATION CROP.

Would like to have you tell me how long it takes to make carnations bloom from the size of a cutting. J. P.—Mo.

You cannot regulate your crop of carnation blooms by the time you take the cuttings; this can be done only by timing your benching and topping after the plants become established. If you bench during July and cease topping by the middle of August, you ought to have a good crop of blooms by midwinter.

OPEN LETTERS FROM READERS

OUR COLUMNS ARE OPEN.

The preliminary report of the census on the greenhouse industry of the United States contains much interesting matter, particularly to owners of greenhouses.

Assuming a fuel expenditure per thousand feet of glass per season of ten tons of hard coal and twenty tons of soft coal at $12 and $6 per ton respectively, the fuel cost would equal $120 per thousand feet of glass per season.

Using this figure on the total glass area of the United States, it would show a fuel cost of $19,484,231, or twenty-five per cent of the total products sold, set at $77,380,230. If the greenhouse owner would only realize that out of every dollar's worth of plants he sells he must set aside one-fourth of it, or 25 cents, for fuel, it would forcibly impress upon him that the question of fuel costs is the most important factor in the business.

Now that there are some thoroughly reliable figures on greenhouse glass in use, don't you think it would be interesting to your readers if florists would write you making comparisons with the figures given by the census and their own output in value and fuel cost?

If, by investigation and education, ten per cent of this fuel cost could be eliminated, it would mean $2,000,000 to the greenhouse owners of the United States.

This letter is to ask that you throw open your columns for discussion on this subject and solicit letters from growers giving their personal experience on this subject.

KIRCHHOFF OF PEMBROKE.

In The Review for December 1, page 64, there appeared an announcement regarding the changing of our address from Pembroke, N. Y., to Albion, N. Y. The company has not moved, for Kirchhoff, gladioli and Pembroke are a cloverleaf so well formed in the minds of the public that we would never separate the three. The W. E. Kirchhoff Co. is still at Pembroke, with a branch at Albion, N. Y., which is in charge of W. E. Kirchhoff, Jr. It was his address that was changed.

Perhaps it would interest readers of The Review to know just what we are doing. W. E. Kirchhoff, Sr., is devoting most of his time to the hybridizing of gladioli at Pembroke and is introducing several varieties, such as Kirchhoff's Violet, Glory of Pembroke, Mrs. W. E. Kirchhoff, the purest ruffled white, Mrs. W. J. Palmer and Miss Allegra Hamilton. These varieties have attracted much attention at trade conventions and have received much favorable comment from leading authorities on gladioli, who have either grown these varieties or visited our fields during the blooming season. It is our intention to offer these to the trade shortly in a series of advertisements in The Review. We used this medium in introducing Princepine some nine or ten years ago and we should not think of offering new varieties to the trade without an announcement in The Review, the leading trade paper.

At Albion the soil is ideal for the growing of gladioli on a commercial scale. Here we are growing Schwaben, Niagara, War, Peace, Panama, Prince of Wales, Lily White, Mrs. Dr. Norton, Golden Measure, Louise, Early Sunrise, Le Marechal Foch, etc.

GAS THOSE WHITE ANTS.

In regard to the inquiry of J. C. S., Kan., asking for a remedy for white ants, I am sending him a sure cure. Here it is: With a pointed stick make holes about ten or twelve inches apart and two or three inches deep in the soil of the bench where the ants are at work. Pour into each of these holes a thimbleful of carbon bisulphide and quickly close each hole with the finger, so the gas will not escape. One dose will knock the ants out, but should they appear again, give them another dose. This remedy can be procured at any drug store. White ants do not work on the surface; so one has to "gas" them.

The Market.

The Christmas business of 1921 has gone into history as reflecting selling policies on the safe and sane order. A good business was done in the wholesale cut flower markets and there appears to be little complaint as to the conditions under which it was done. Clearances of the majority of items were effected, and in the summing up aggregates are satisfactory all around. To begin with, last year a vast amount of rose stock was carried over, only to be disposed of at job-lot prices after the holiday. This year, the figures set for the holiday were maintained throughout the selling period and clearances were the order rather than the exception. American Beauty specials moved at $150 per hundred, but not all were sold, because there were so many good offerings of long-stemmed stock in the hybrid teas. The latter brought an all-round price of $50 per hundred for the toppers, a few even bringing more, and the lower grades moved at prices down to $10 per hundred. Carnations were fairly plentiful, except in the reds, but $20 per hundred was the maximum for this class. Pinks moved at $12 per hundred, a few bringing $15, and whites were hard to move at $8 to $10 per hundred; in fact, much white stock was left over. There was too much lily of the valley, likewise of stevia, with $6 per hundred the general price for the former. White lilies were not in much demand, and moved at the recent regular prices. Retailers, generally, report a good business, but their buying was most conservative and many plant growers find themselves with a surplus a little larger than usual. Taken altogether, the Christmas business is considered to have been satisfactory.

Tuesday, December 27, the supply of stock was light, with a demand just about able to clear it. Roses are moving on a pre-Christmas basis, with a small stock of left-overs closing out at concessions.

The supply of carnations is light and arrivals move with little difficulty at about $8 to $12 per hundred.

Cattleyas are in fair supply and are meeting only a moderate demand, at prices as about last quoted, $50 to $200 per hundred, and, except in the lower grades, these were the Christmas prices.

White lilies are on the scarce side, but there are few calls for them. Lily of the valley is in oversupply and clearances are difficult.

Violets are plentiful, the best bringing $1 per hundred. There was a good supply at Christmas and sales reached $2 per hundred for the finest stock.

There is a good supply of miscellaneous stock. Paper White narcissi are bringing $5 per hundred for the best. Tulips, of the short-stemmed varieties, are plentiful, but it is hard to move them at three bunches for $1. Iris tingitana is in the market, and meets a small demand, mainly on account of novelty. Other items are calendulas, cornflowers, wallflowers, pansies, gladioli, bouvardia, snapdragons, stevia, sweet peas, gardenias and lilac, all of which are meeting a fair demand.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the club's quarters, Engineering Societies' building, Monday evening, January 9. It will be ladies' night, and the business of the club will be expedited, so that the entertainment may be opened early. Members will receive early notice from the chairman of the entertainment committee as to invitation acceptances for their ladies, and, without doubt, the function will be a most enjoyable one. At the following meeting, February 13, Prof. White, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will give an illustrated lecture covering his recent trip among English growers.

J. H. P.

Mentor, O.—Carl Hagenburger had an excellent Christmas business. Three huge trucks were constantly on the go for over a week between his greenhouses and Detroit, Toledo, Sandusky and Cleveland. The home of the Cleveland cherry was one of the busiest places in this locality.

Blissfield, Mich.—J. F. Sprunk has three children ill at home with typhoid fever, while he and his other two children are at the hospital quite ill. Mr. Sprunk is still in business, however, and even though he is unable to take care of it at present, all orders for stock can be sent and he will take care of them when he recovers.

Price, Utah.—A tract of land north of the city upon which twenty greenhouses, each 50x300 feet, can be built, has been purchased by the Carbon Floral Co., and this firm will begin the construction of two such houses immediately. The Carbon Floral Co. came to Price just in time to open for the Thanksgiving trade this year and has already taken its place as a regular institution. In view of the fact that the manager of this firm has had twenty-four years of experience in this line of business, a good showing can be expected by this firm.

OBITUARY

Adolphus Gude.

The day before Christmas brought the regrettable tidings of the death of Adolphus Gude, of Washington, D. C. He passed away at 6:50 a. m., December 24.

Mr. Gude had been at the Emergency hospital for just five weeks. His illness had extended over two years, but he had been confined to bed only a short time. The evening before his death he had held out hope for his recovery, and so the sudden end was a shock to his family and other relatives, none of whom had time to reach him ere he died.

The funeral was held at 2 p. m. December 27 at his late residence, Gudemont, in Anacostia, D. C. Interment was in Rock Creek cemetery, by the side of his oldest daughter, who was buried just a year before, December 22, 1920. Masons and Knights Templar were in charge of the funeral, which was indeed a notable one, since Mr. Gude had been at one time grand commander of the Knights Templar of the District of Columbia.

Members of the trade deeply mourn the loss of "Dolph," as he was familiarly known, who was never known to depart from the precepts of the golden rule and who expressed the outstanding trait of his character in his own words thus: "My motto all through life has been to start or promise nothing that I could not fulfill, and to fulfill everything that I had promised." As the founder of one of the biggest greenhouse establishments in the country, as a vice-president of the Society of American Florists and as a man of high character and pleasing disposition he had a host of friends.

Adolphus Gude was born at Knoxville, Tenn., April 20, 1863. When 3 years of age he moved with his parents to Lynchburg, Va., and at the age of 7 was on a farm in Prince George county. Until 10 years of age he attended the country school, immediately thereafter entering the employ of the late N. Studer, in which he continued until 1888, with the exception of a short time spent with Peter Henderson & Co. at their Jersey City greenhouses.

Adolphus Gude was the founder of the present Gude Bros. Co., starting in the buying and selling of flowers in 1887. The following year he purchased four acres of land and personally erected his first three greenhouses, thereafter selling his own grown flowers.

In 1889 he took his brother, William F. Gude, into the business with him, giving the latter a third interest in the venture, later giving him an equal share, whereupon the business became known as A. Gude & Bro. William F. Gude took charge of the selling end of the business, while Adolphus Gude continued in charge of production. For seventeen years the business remained a partnership. The corporation of Gude Bros. Co. was formed in 1906, with a capital of $50,000 and a surplus of $26,000.

September 5, 1921, Adolphus Gude announced his withdrawal from the Gude Bros. Co. He had held the offices of vice-president and general manager, devoting his attention exclusively to the producing branch of the business and operating the two big ranges located in Anacostia and northeast Washington. Mr. Gude purchased from the corporation the Anacostia range. This occupies thirty acres of ground and includes 200,000 feet of glass.

A new corporation, known as A. Gude Sons Co., was formed, Mr. Gude being its president. With him were associated his three sons and a daughter. A. E. Gude, who upon his return from service in the aviation corps during the war, had taken charge of the wholesale department of the Gude Bros. Co. store, at 1214 F street, northwest, became vice-president. The twins, Edgar R. and Edwin N., who had been with their father at the Anacostia houses, became general manager and secretary, respectively, and Miss Esther C. N. Gude became treasurer. The new corporation secured property at 1318 I street, northwest, for its wholesale headquarters, in charge of A. E. Gude.

The Gude Bros. Co., with William F. Gude at its head, has continued the operation of the retail establishment at 1214 F street, northwest, and the greenhouses on Bladensburg road. With him are associated his two sons, Ernest and Granville, and his daughter, Amelia Gude.

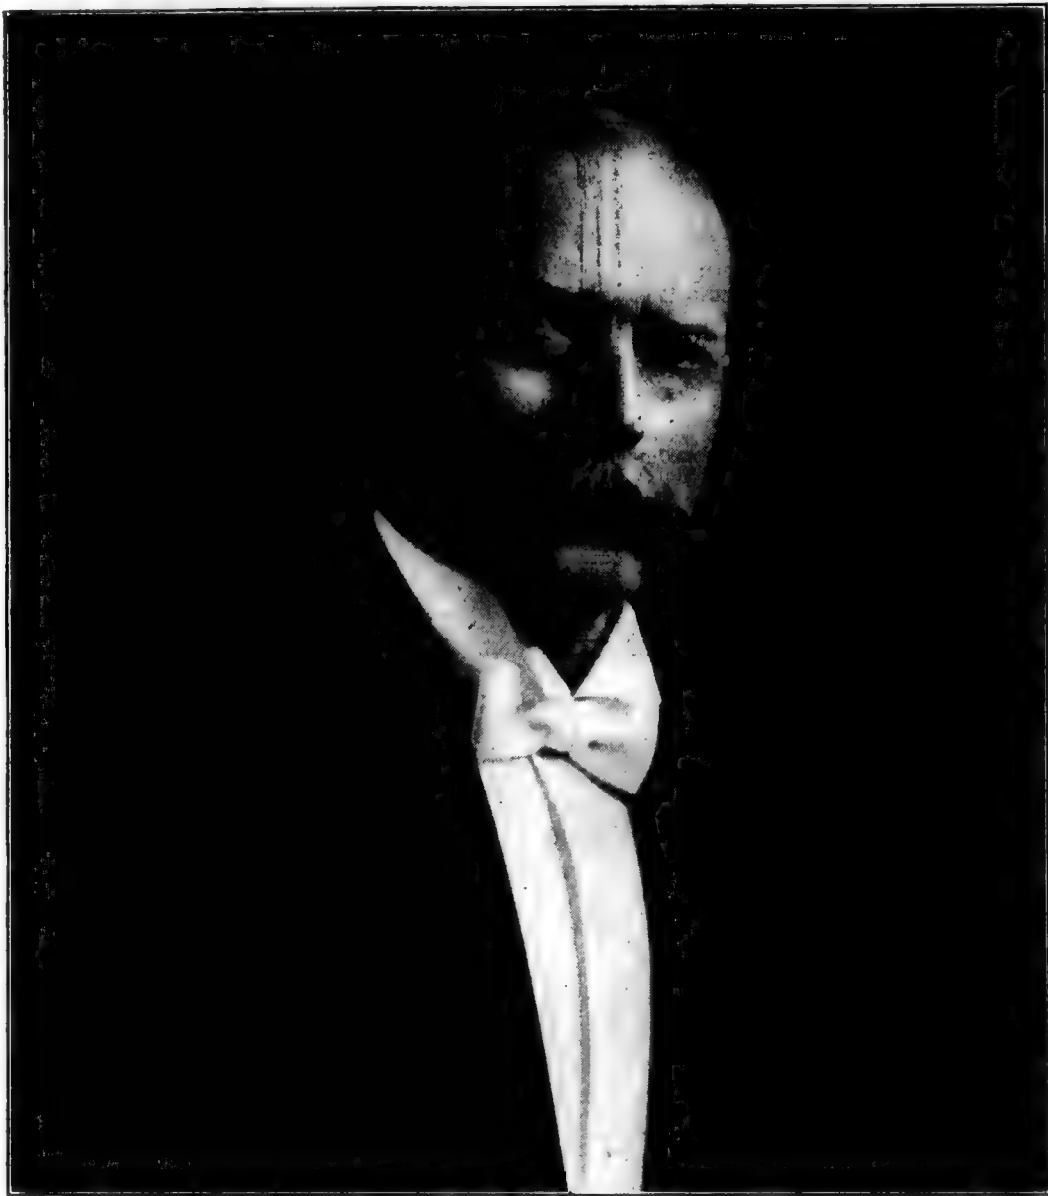

November 20, 1888, Adolphus Gude married Miss Mary E. Knoll, of Washington, D. C. He had three sons and two daughters.

During the war Mr. Gude was chairman of local draft board No. 11. He always was prominent in civic and fraternal activities. He was one time president of the Anacostia bank; was vice-president of the Good Hope Orphan Home; life member of the Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce; member of the Anacostia Citizens' Association; life member of the City Club; member of Washington Lodge, No. 15, B. P. O. E.; Central Lodge, No. 1, Odd Fellows; grand commander of D. C. Grand Commandery, Knights Templar; treasurer and past commander of De Molay Commandery; past master, Anacostia Lodge, No. 21; treasurer and past high priest of Anacostia Royal Arch Chapter, No. 12; past grand high priest of D. C. Royal Arch Masons; a thirty-second degree Mason of Albert Pike Consistory, No. 1; Mithras Lodge of Perfection, No. 1; Evangelist Chapter, Rose Croix; Robert D. Bruce Council, Kadosh; Adoniram Council, No. 2, R. and S. M.; past potentate of Almas Temple of the Mystic Shrine; past patron, Electa Chapter, No. 2, Order of the Eastern Star; past grand patron, O. E. S. of D. C.; director, Masonic Mutual Relief Association, and a member of Kallipolis Grotto, Veiled Prophets.

He was likewise active in trade organizations. He served as vice-president of the Florists' Club of Washington. In 1920 he was elected vice-president of the Society of American Florists and it was with regret that the members of the organization, at the Washington convention last August, learned that his ill health would not permit of his acceptance of the office of president. Hard as he tried to do his part in the convention work and to welcome his fellow florists when they came, he was compelled by ill health to leave the city during that hot month. His absence then was keenly regretted and his loss now is felt poignantly by many florists.

Herman G. Kretschmar.

Herman G. Kretschmar, 71 years of age, of 237 Lincoln road, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., died December 20, of heart disease. He was born in Saxony, Germany, and came to Brooklyn with his parents, Gottlieb and Rosalie Kretschmar, when he was a boy of 16 years. His father established the range on Clarkson avenue. The business is now being carried on by the sons, Armin B. and Winfield F., at West Nyack, N. Y.

Mr. Kretschmar was a member of the Society of American Florists and attended the Schermerhorn Street German Evangelical Lutheran church. He is survived by a widow, two sons and one daughter.

The funeral services were held at the home Saturday afternoon, December 24, and the remains were later cremated at the United States Crematory in Middle Village, with interment of the ashes at Greenwood cemetery.

COAL OUTPUT SLUMPS BADLY.

The cumulative output of coal for 1921 is 41,000,000 tons behind 1919, a year of depression in the coal trade, and 135,000,000 tons behind 1920, according to statistics of the United States bureau of mines, based on reports of loadings of soft coal.

The bureau points out that, although soft coal production is normally at a maximum at this season of the year, it has in fact dropped back to the level of last April, normally the lowest month of the year. For two weeks in succession production has hung around 1,200,000 tons per day, it says, whereas the smallest output in any December of the preceding eight years was 1,379,000 tons.

In connection with this subnormal production two facts must be remembered, says the report. The first is that the movement of coal up the lakes has now virtually ceased. The second is that during October, with a railroad strike in prospect, consumers hastened to increase their stocks, and some millions of tons flowed into storage. At present the flow out of storage, 7,200,000 tons a week, is not sufficient to meet current consumption and exports. Clearly, if continued too long, the draft on stocks might carry reserves below the danger point.

"So great a curtailment of demand has attended the industrial depression that the total production for the calendar year 1921 will probably not exceed 410,000,000 tons," the report adds. "The last year in which the country used so small an amount was 1911."

The total output during the week of December 10 is estimated at 7,235,000 net tons, as against 7,104,000 tons in the week preceding. A year ago production was 12,813,000 tons.

He was likewise active in trade organizations. He served as vice-president of the Florists' Club of Washington. In 1920 he was elected vice-president of the Society of American Florists and it was with regret that the members of the organization, at the Washington convention last August, learned that his ill health would not permit of his acceptance of the office of president. Hard as he tried to do his part in the convention work and to welcome his fellow florists when they came, he was compelled by ill health to leave the city during that hot month. His absence then was keenly regretted and his loss now is felt poignantly by many florists.

age, of 237 Lincoln road, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., died December 20, of heart disease. He was born in Saxony, Germany, and came to Brooklyn with his parents, Gottlieb and Rosalie Kretschmar, when he was a boy of 16 years. His father established the range on Clarkson avenue. The business is now being carried on by the sons, Armin B. and Winfield F., at West Nyack, N. Y.

Mr. Kretschmar was a member of the Society of American Florists and attended the Schermerhorn Street German Evangelical Lutheran church. He is survived by a widow, two sons and one daughter.

The funeral services were held at the home Saturday afternoon, December 24, and the remains were later cremated at the United States Crematory in Middle Village, with interment of the ashes at Greenwood cemetery.

COAL OUTPUT SLUMPS BADLY.

The cumulative output of coal for 1921 is 41,000,000 tons behind 1919, a year of depression in the coal trade, and 135,000,000 tons behind 1920, according to statistics of the United States bureau of mines, based on reports of loadings of soft coal.

The bureau points out that, although soft coal production is normally at a maximum at this season of the year, it has in fact dropped back to the level of last April, normally the lowest month of the year. For two weeks in succession production has hung around 1,200,000 tons per day, it says, whereas the smallest output in any December of the preceding eight years was 1,379,000 tons.

In connection with this subnormal production two facts must be remembered, says the report. The first is that the movement of coal up the lakes has now virtually ceased. The second is that during October, with a railroad strike in prospect, consumers hastened to increase their stocks, and some millions of tons flowed into storage. At present the flow out of storage, 7,200,000 tons a week, is not sufficient to meet current consumption and exports. Clearly, if continued too long, the draft on stocks might carry reserves below the danger point.

"So great a curtailment of demand has attended the industrial depression that the total production for the calendar year 1921 will probably not exceed 410,000,000 tons," the report adds. "The last year in which the country used so small an amount was 1911."

The total output during the week of December 10 is estimated at 7,235,000 net tons, as against 7,104,000 tons in the week preceding. A year ago production was 12,813,000 tons.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

DID you have a Merry Christmas? Hope you have a Happy New Year, prospering through all its 365 days.

THE Review looks forward to 1922 as offering it even greater opportunities for service than has the past.

TRADE is not "good" unless it brings in the cash. If you haven't got it for what you've sold, make sure you do.

DON'T stop pushing because Christmas is past. Business will be good in January for those who try to make it so.

OUR December business leads the publishers of The Review to believe that the first half of 1922, covering the trade's spring season, will bring this paper the largest business in its history to date.

UNWILLINGNESS of part of the industrial world to accept the changes necessary to readjustment prolongs the time till equilibrium is reached. But it is certain that those who last do their part in the restoration to normalcy will not be the first to benefit.

THE meeting of the National Flower Growers' Association and the coöperation of the cut flower section of the American Rose Society will aid in making the gathering of the American Carnation Society, at Hartford, Conn., January 25 to 27, one of the most successful the organization has had.

THE public shows increasing familiarity with the telegraph delivery idea, Christmas customers asking for the service as a matter of course where once a long explanation was necessary to secure such an order. Many large retail stores report that the Christmas telegraph orders, in and out, were more numerous than ever before.

CREDIT men in general mercantile lines throughout the country make no secret of the belief that there will be a reduction in the number of retail stores by February. High overhead and deflation are expected to clear the field for the stronger organizations. Florists, however, are on a firmer footing than most other lines. Being in units of small average size, the retailing of flowers does not have to carry heavy overhead and has comparatively small liabilities. It is a safer business, with few failures.

SIX weeks away is St. Valentine's day.

COMPARISON with the Christmas business done in this and in other lines leads to belief that the florists are still ahead. We shall not slip if we continue to make the sales effort that was in evidence at the holiday.

TIDINGS of good times are seen in the increase of sales forces by some large concerns in other lines. A picking up of business is looked for with the advance of spring. Preparations for it must be made now.

THE grower who produces stock that just "gets by" brings discredit to retailer, commission man and ultimately himself, but the injury to any or all is little compared with that done the trade as a whole. Flowers that fail to give satisfaction drive away customers; those that do bring us more business.

IN the florists' trade there should be no attempt to profit by a falling labor market; quite the contrary, the effort should be to maintain wages. In years gone by this trade paid too little to make it attractive to the better class of workers. Under pressure of necessity, wages rose until they compared favorably with what the same people could earn in other employment. To charge fair prices, avoid waste and maintain wages will make it possible eventually to attract more efficient workers than this trade has known since it passed the stage where the owner of the place did most of the work himself.

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

In general it may be said that florists' business this Christmas exceeded expectations. It was apparent beforehand that estimates of holiday sales were being revised upward, as second, third and fourth orders were received by supply houses. Anticipation was uncertain; retailers were in doubt just how much business to expect. Last year had set a record, yet conditions this December, it was obvious, were quite different. Some florists, now that the holiday is past, declare it to have been a record-breaker. Almost all say it was better than they expected.

The disposition of the public to ask prices and compare values was evident even in holiday buying. Consequently the call was primarily for stock of best quality, though not of the most expensive grades. Growers who sent to market "pickled" blooms, who held for the holiday chrysanthemums which should have been cut earlier and showed it, and who included in their shipments everything that could be called a flower, may be dissatisfied with their returns. There have been occasions when such stuff was sold, but it was not this year. On the other hand, growers who supplied good stock in plants and cut flowers sold all they had and sold them at profitable figures.

The demand was limited for highest-priced stock. The longest roses could not all be sold, though great numbers of them were moved. And fancy plants, such as large specimens of araucarias, particularly big cyclamens and the like, are in many stores still on hand. But sales of moderate amount were many, and the total in quantity of stock moved and in dollars received was high. Prices were lower than last year, and the difference is just about equal to the difference in the dollar totals for the two holidays. Though it is early to state with definiteness the exact returns, it seems likely that, when the figures are cast up, the stock moved this Christmas will prove in excess of that sold a year ago.

The demand for stock of moderate price resulted in a strenuous call for carnations, red in particular, in several large centers. In view of the shortage at the time, prices rose to top levels. Poinsettias were red, but too expensive for many buyers, and the long-stemmed blooms were too numerous. The requests for these flowers are not many, at best, while their ease of culture led a number of growers to fill up a bench with them for a catch crop. Everything else, as a rule, sold well.

In plants cyclamens and poinsettias were most in demand, with begonias and berried plants popular because of their moderate prices.

All in all, it was a highly satisfactory Christmas, and florists may congratulate themselves as having enjoyed a much better holiday business than merchants in most other lines.

AGGRESSIVE SALES METHODS.

The business readjustment, marked in retail circles by the demand of the public for lower prices, was not felt in the florists' trade so soon as it was in other lines of business. So we are in position to profit by other fellows' experiences and steer a course that will enable us to escape some of the reverses that merchants in other lines have undergone, following the examples of those who came through most successfully.

In the cases of these latter, aggressive sales policies stand out as the most important aid to overcoming the apathy of the purchasing public.

"Establishments which are tendering bargains and offer bargains day after day and which also advertise these offerings vigorously and constantly are securing the business," reports a recent review of mercantile trade. "The department stores are doing a most flourishing business along the lines just described. Up to October 1 they kept their volume of business practically at last year's level, with frequent special sales. Unseasonal weather and more reluctance on the public's part necessitated more frequent bargains and of useful goods. Bargains and advertising are bringing out the shoppers."

By equally vigorous sales effort we can get out the flower buyers too.

SELLING WELL.

Fears have been expressed, by some growers, that the so-called saturation point might be reached this season with gladiolus bulbs, but those who have used the Classified columns of The Review to list their stock have received prompt evidence that the demand still is strong. Like this:

Please take out my advertisement under gladioli; will probably have another later.—George Hall, Adelphia, N. J., December 23, 1921.

Please cut out my ad on bulbets and put in the new list.—W. P. Long, West Grove, Pa., December 23, 1921.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BALTIMORE, MD.The Christmas Market.

Last week the Christmas market came up to all expectations. There were more blooming plants to be had than was expected. Poinsettias in pans were especially good and sold up well. Another surprise was the large number of cyclamens that made their appearance at the last minute. A good many of these were stock that would be classed as seconds, yet there was plenty of first-class quality. Flowering begonias were in splendid condition, and there were plenty of fine primroses. In berried plants Jerusalem cherries were plentiful and of fine quality, with a fair supply of ardisias. There was a good demand for ferns. Specimen plants sold well. It was a good plant market, with the supply equal to the demand.

Cut flowers were in good supply, with a demand that was most satisfactory. Roses were never better, with all of the varieties well represented. Cut poinsettias were in fine supply and sold well. Carnations were good, with the usual scarcity of red. The man who could produce a good crop of red carnations for Christmas certainly had a money-maker. Paper Whites were plentiful, and the abnormal demand for every kind of stock relieved the glut on these. There was a good supply of all sorts of miscellaneous stock. There was a fair supply of berried holly, shipped in from Virginia. Local holly was without berries. Never before were so many artificial flowers on the streets. The street peddlers could not touch natural stock; so they plunged on artificial. Among these the most noticeable were chrysanthemums and a good imitation of Columbia roses. The shade was perfect and the flower well shaped, but the manufacturers stopped here. No effort was made to imitate foliage or stems. They were placed on branches of laurel, yet it was remarkable how many were sold. An effort was made to get a comparison of prices with those of last year, but the best that could be learned was that prices were lower than a year ago. Everyone was too busy to go into this phase of the market. To sum up, 1921 will compare favorably with past seasons, with a good, varied supply and a demand that was pleasing to everyone, and no grumbling about exorbitant prices.

Christmas in the Retail Stores.

In the retail stores the same activity was noted as usual at this season, the staff of employees in every case being doubled. It is a remarkable thing about the florists' business, how new clerks can take hold for a few days with such a small amount of friction. I was impressed with this more than ever this year, and upon investigation found that many of these "extras" were not new hands at the florists' business. For instance, lady clerks who had married would give their former employer a lift at this busy season. Then there are friends of the proprietor who help out every year. These people have become acquainted with the business fairly well and can jump in at a minute's notice and render intelligent service.

Never have I seen finer displays of stock than was offered in the retail stores this year. Samuel Feast & Sons had a splendid line of blooming and foliage plants. Made-up baskets were a leader. These, in arrangement and quality, were fine. A noticeable feature in this store was some fine specimens of azaleas. The cut flower orders here were ahead of last year, as were incoming and outgoing telegraph orders.

John Cook's store was a picture. Never have I seen it look better. The plant sales here, both blooming and foliage, were good. Cut flower sales broke all records. This firm had a large number of church decorations, and these were on a more elaborate scale than usual.

At the store of William J. Halliday, Miss Groves had her usual attractive window and a stock of made-up baskets that were as fine as I have ever seen. Miss Groves has a knack of giving that touch to a made-up basket of plants that makes them irresistible to buyers. Although this house is one of Baltimore's latest members of the F. T. D., the telegraph order business was beyond all expectations.

At Mary Johnston's, plants were all cleaned up by Christmas eve. Never has this house had such a sale of plants and here, too, made-up baskets were a leader. Mrs. Johnston had every decorating plant in the store out and was obliged to refuse church orders for decorations. Cut flower orders were the largest in the history of the business. Telegraph orders exceeded all records.

At both the uptown and downtown stores of Robert L. Graham business was only limited by space and the number of people the firm could procure to handle it. Never has this firm done a larger business in both plants and cut flowers. Its telegraph orders, on which the firm is making a special drive with Robert, Jr., as manager, surpassed all expectations.

Altogether it was a great Christmas, with everyone satisfied. Tate.

TORONTO, ONT.The Market.

The flower stores were rushed last week. The displays were beautiful. The thousands of azaleas with their deep pink blossoms, with here and there some light-colored flowers, made the stores look like bowers of beauty. Potted flowers are the order of the day, which is a change from previous Christmas seasons, when wreaths found a ready sale. All the cut flowers available will be sold and more could be disposed of if they could be obtained. The dark weather which has prevailed since the first part of October has had a serious effect upon the flowers, but even with this condition to contend with, the growers have done wonderfully well. During the last fortnight there have been a great many deaths among prominent men and the floral displays have been wonderful. There were designs in all sizes and shapes, and baskets of enormous proportions. Lily of the valley, orchids and irises, with ferns, were used to advantage in some particularly attractive pieces. Practically all the florists shared in the demand.

Gardeners and Florists Meet.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Association was held December 19, with President F. D. Clark in the chair. It was the plan to have W. E. Groves, president of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, at this meeting, but owing to the nearness to the Christmas season and the rush of business, it was decided to have Mr. Groves at the January meeting instead.

There was a large attendance and several important items of business came up for discussion. It was decided to sign a petition against the proposed nursery bill, which, it is feared, will make a monopoly in shrubs and perennials.

Three delegates were elected to represent the association at the Royal Winter Fair. These were P. L. Whytock, Thomas Manton and President Clark.

Alexander Simpson was appointed delegate to the convention of the Ontario Horticultural Association, to be held in Toronto, February 9 and 10.

There was a good exhibition of poinsettias from the Allen Gardens, orchids and ferns from Exhibition park, mums from Sir Henry Pellatt's and begonias.

Following the business there was a program contributed to by the members, and refreshments were served.

It was decided to hold the annual social in February and invite the other associations of gardeners and florists.

Fred Miller, of Miller Bros., has been reelected reeve of York county.

CHICAGO.The Market.

On the whole, Christmas was rather better than had been expected in the Chicago wholesale cut flower market, for, if the truth must be told, there were many who were lacking in confidence. The outcome shows a money total of sales not much different from last year, which was the best ever known. Most of the wholesale houses report total sales nearly equal to those of 1920 and a few report small increases. To have made so good a showing, of course, implies a considerable increase in the quantity of stock handled, as the average price was lower by at least twenty per cent. The most important decrease was in the longer grades of roses, which the buyers refused to take at regular prices in sufficient quantity to clean up the supply.

A fair clean-up was effected. Large quantities of poinsettias were left. The supply of this Christmas specialty was greater than ever before, with no corresponding increase in the demand, with the result that the growers were keenly disappointed. Stevia and Paper Whites also were left. On the other hand, all good colored carnations sold out at straight prices. White was not wanted. Quite a few colored carnations were sold on the buyer's offer and some were lost, but these were flowers which showed their age.

Roses cleaned up in most wholesale houses, but some reports show Columbia to have been an exception to the rule. It was noted everywhere that the principal call was for Premier and that Columbia, of the pink roses, was least in request. This rose, too, seemed to have suffered more than others as the result of the extremely unfavorable weather which preceded the holiday and it may have been because of the quality that buyers called for something else. Russell, too, showed the effects of the bad weather and suffered in price for that reason. The growers were accused of pickling, but some of the roses were not so old as they looked; it was the effect of the weather. An unusual thing was noted with Crusader. Some growers who had counted on making a hit with this rose found that in the dark days of mid-December the flowers stretched up long necks too weak to hold the heads erect. One of the results of the Christmas experience probably will be that Premier will get more bench space next year and will be next season, even more than now, the predominant rose in this market.

Short and medium roses not only cleaned up, but were considerably short of the demand. To meet the situation most buyers were asked to take a proportion of larger roses than they wanted, at a price a little below the price originally quoted for the better grade. There was only a limited call for roses above 25 cents, but some stores took fair quantities of special long roses at 45 to 60 cents for use as a substitute for Beauties. used here this Christmas came from Philadelphia. They were nearly all long and the supply cleaned up at from $15 to $18 per dozen.

While roses were not so good as they usually are here at Christmas, violets were better. The supply was not large and $2 to $2.50 per hundred was about as far as the buyers were willing to go. Three choices were offered: Locally grown singles in small quantity, California grown stock characteristically bunched, and Hudson river doubles, the latter predominating. There proved to be all the cattleyas that were needed at $3 each and enough also to supply those who could pay $2.50, or even only $2.

There were quite a good many pompons and they sold well, but nobody wanted the few, rather bedraggled-looking large mums that were offered. Valley sold well. Other miscellaneous items were not much of a factor. There were scarcely any sweet peas, but $5 was top, where $6 was obtained for them last year.

One of the noteworthy features was the use of the long-distance telephone made by out-of-town buyers. Calls were so numerous December 24 that it seemed plain many retailers in other cities had underestimated their requirements. A good many city buyers did not use so many cut flowers as usual. The reason did not lie so much in decreased business as in heavy stocks of plants, especially cyclamens. The variety of Christmas plants was limited, but the supply was large. The retailers got them at quite reasonable prices, all things considered, laid in large stocks, and pushed the selling. They obtained good prices in most cases, but offered another plant at a lower price if the customer hesitated, and still made a profit. Most of them cleaned up in good shape and were satisfied.

On the whole the trade is not complaining at Christmas business. While the vim and rush of 1918, 1919 and 1920 were lacking, we seem to have done better than most other lines.

The Christmas wholesale business ended toward midnight December 24; there was little doing December 25, although some of the wholesalers kept open all day to accommodate any of their customers who might need stock. December 26 the regular orders were shipped in the morning and there was no local demand of consequence, so the market closed at noon. Since then there has been plenty of stock and little demand—there never is much call until after the Christmas flowers have faded and disappeared from the homes to which they were sent.

It seems to be the general opinion that there will be no immediate scarcity of flowers. Roses will not go off crop immediately after Christmas, as they have some years.

Pushing for Business.

In other lines of business retail merchants did more Christmas advertising than ever before and leading downtown florists did not think it wise to let flowers drop from public view. For four days before Christmas flowers were well represented in the newspapers. A tabulation shows that a half dozen retail florists spent over $3,000 in the Tribune. The rate in that paper is 50 cents an agate line, $7 per inch. The space used was as follows:

How Wienhoeber Worked It.

George Wienhoeber moved into the wholesale store of the E. C. Amling Co. at midnight December 24 and used its ample counters until 7 o'clock Christmas morning. In those seven small hours of Christmas morning he and his staff put up many hundreds of orders for cut flowers, routed them for delivery, loaded them into twenty-three DeLuxe taxicabs and his own three trucks, swept out the place and turned it back to the Amling forces in apple-pie order at the usual hour for opening the wholesale business. Mr. Wienhoeber has system reduced to a science. Peter Miller, who knows the city like a book, does the routing. It is said he had ninety-two corsage bouquets in one taxi. Each cab was accompanied by a delivery boy.

Will They Never Learn?

Nearly every wholesale house, it seems, had one or two growers who saved up most of the week's cut of white carnations and sent them to market December 23. It seems remarkable that the same thing happens year after year. Nobody wants white carnations at Christmas and they can be sold at Christmas prices only by making each retailer take a few with the colored ones. When a wholesaler has principally white, he is distinctly out of luck, as the buyers go elsewhere and leave them on his hands, to be sold for cheap funeral work after the holiday. Growers who might have obtained 6 to 8 cents for their white carnations by sending them in as fast as ready to cut, held them till December 23 and only a few could be sold before Christmas; they were sold this week at 2 to 3 cents. But it was the same last Christmas and, no doubt, will be the same next Christmas.

Various Notes.

There was another increase in telegraph delivery orders again this Christmas. Both in and out, the principal stores handled more of this class of business than ever before, as the public is gradually becoming acquainted with the service.

At 11 o'clock December 24 the employees of the supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co. gathered around the desk of Manager T. E. Waters and, with one of their prettiest young ladies as spokeswoman, presented their chief with a handsome gold ring bearing the Elk's insignia. It is said that for once Mr. Waters was speechless.

The Fleischman Floral Co., in the Railway Exchange building, reports a better Christmas than in 1920, principally done on plants and plant arrangements, but with a good telephone business on cut flowers. The telegraph delivery orders were more numerous than ever before. Manager Edward Mallinson had his usual staff of extra salesmen, among them being I. Rosnosky, W. Abrahamson and Richard Parker. The salesmen say it was not difficult to get good prices for good plants. Cyclamens and poinsettias predominated in the stock, but some excellent ericas sold well. Azaleas were seen here and even lightly flowered white ones were taken at what, in the old days of Belgian imports, would have seemed large prices. The task of getting out orders was so heavy Mr. Mallinson did not leave the store from 8 a. m. December 23 until 4 p. m. December 25.

C. J. Michelsen is well pleased with the Christmas business of the E. C. Ameling Co., as it went ahead of last year, which was the previous high mark. The showing was made possible principally by an increased supply of roses.

Out at Bryn Mawr, where Johnson & Jensen are in the center of a rapidly growing residence district, they report a larger Christmas than ever before, principally with plants. They bought only half as many poinsettia pans as last year, but about three times as many cyclamens, and found they had gauged the demand about right.

Bassett & Washburn sold out so clean December 24 that they did not reopen the store until December 27 and then they encountered so heavy a run of orders they were short 5,000 roses that day.

An attraction in the store of the A. L. Randall Co., during Christmas week, was a vase of the new rose, American Legion, sent by Myers & Samtman, Philadelphia, who are growing it in some quantity.

Percy Jones had room 217 in the Atlas block as an annex for the Christmas trade.

Selling only to the trade, the A. B. C. suspends sales efforts while its customers are busy cashing in and the holiday spirit pervades the establishment. The recess in part was employed in preparing the New Year's greeting, a handsome calendar, to go to its customers.

Chicago is to have, for 1922, a new house handling florists' supplies exclusively. The Allan Humason Co., a partnership between Allan N. Humason, his brother, C. Dewey Humason, and August A. Barz, has leased the double store at the corner of Wells and Illinois streets and is putting in a line of general supplies. The three members of the firm are widely known in the trade throughout the west, as they have been traveling for years selling three or four non-conflicting lines on commission. Under the new plan of operations they will handle the same or similar lines, and others, on a jobbing basis. They expect to be ready for business January 3.

R. E. Kurowski says the John C. Moninger Co. has so many customers who want immediate delivery that the factory is being operated to capacity during the holiday week, a time usually devoted to a shut-down for inventory.

While the furniture houses are perverting our slogan, Paul Weiss calls attention to the support given it by the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, which heads its Christmas advertising, "Say It with Flowers" and confirm it with a document," meaning a life insurance policy.

The Aurora Beacon-News recently called attention to the fact that "Batavia Has New Industry," describing under that headline the cyclamen production at the greenhouses of the Illinois Plant Co. The splendid stock produced for Christmas by Manager Conlon was much admired by local visitors to the greenhouses before it was all shipped.

A. E. Kunderd, of gladiolus fame, was here for a couple of days just before Christmas. He had been lecturing in Wisconsin.

BOSTON.

The Christmas Market.

Contrary to all expectations, Christmas business in 1921 has proved a record-breaker and this in spite of somewhat unfavorable weather conditions. December 22 was severely cold, with a temperature of zero in Boston and a fierce wind blowing. The two following days were milder, but snow, sleet or rain fell almost steadily, making conditions disagreeable and causing curtailment or abandonment of carol singing and other open-air Yuletide festivities. December 25 was cold, with a maximum temperature of 20 degrees, and snow fell about all day. Considering the weather, the sales of both plants and flowers were really remarkable and showed how well the famous slogan, "Say It with Flowers," has sunk into people's hearts. One or two retailers who never advertise complained of dull business, but all the large and up-to-date stores stated that their Christmas business was the best ever.

Plants each year prove more and more a market factor. A fine assortment was offered this year and the quality was excellent. Cyclamens were easily the leaders and plants selling at from $3 to $10 each were in big demand. The call for the larger specimens up to $25 each was not so robust, but about all sold. Poinsettias did not sell so well as a year ago, mainly owing to the cold weather and the fact that they chill easily; on the other hand, begonias were sold in great numbers, Melior far outclassing Cincinnati in favor. Mrs. Peterson did not sell so well as the other varieties.

There was a tremendous sale of solanums, which were finely berried. Otaheite oranges were well fruited and sold well singly or made up in baskets with other plants. Some nice ardisias also sold well, but there were not enough of them. Christmas peppers sold in a moderate way. Erica melanthera was extremely well flowered and there was a good lot of small plants of the long-tubed varieties, like King Edward VII. There were some camellias and even one or two of that rara avis, the azalea, also some bougainvilleas and pans of euphorbia; the latter was freely used in made-up baskets. There were fewer primulas and cinerarias than usual, but some pans of tulips and hyacinths of moderate quality were offered.

Foliage plants, separately or made up in baskets with flowering or fruited plants, were freely offered and sold well. There was also a good call for ferns of large size and for fern dishes. Plant trade was good and leading growers all stated that they had practically nothing left on hand.

There has been a better clean-up of cut flowers. Roses sold well. There are no locally grown American Beauties; a number came from outside, but the prices asked, $24 to $30 per dozen, discouraged buying and some were unsold. Hadley sold at $15 to $100 per hundred; other red roses at from $15 to $65. Some remarkably fine Russell came in, and they realized the same prices as Hadley. Columbia, Premier and Pilgrim made eral average for colored-flowered sorts was $15 per hundred; with whites added, $12 per hundred. Whites separately sold at $8 to $10 per hundred. Rosalia and Laddie realized $20 to $25 per hundred without any trouble. Violets of the best grades sold at $3; others at $2.50. Sweet peas went all the way from $2 to $5 per hundred; yellow marguerites, $3 to $4 per hundred, and Paper White narcissi, $5 to $6 per hundred. Callas and Easter lilies cleaned up at $4 to $5 per dozen. There were small lots of calendulas, snapdragons, myosotis, bachelor's buttons and other flowers, which sold well. Stevia was in more abundant supply than any other flower. Cut poinsettias were a slow sale.

Cattleyas were scarce at $24 per dozen. Cypripediums were in good supply at $3 to $6 per hundred and gar-denias of rather poor quality sold at $6 to $12 per dozen. Lilies of the valley sold at $12 per hundred.

There was a tremendous demand for Christmas trees, wreaths, wreathing and all kinds of holiday decorative material. Red ruscus and some other items were entirely sold out. The market is likely to be rather bare of flowers for some time, the cold weather greatly reducing the output. Chrysanthemums made their final bow. Mistletoe, Golden Mistletoe, Hamburg Late White, Maud Dean and even Bonnaillon came in for Christmas, as well as some bunches of singles and pompons. Most of these were showing signs of age.

Club Meetings.

Although coming on December 20, when commercial men are usually busy, the last meeting of the year of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston attracted a large and enthusiastic attendance. Peter M. Miller, George M. Anderson and William Patterson, committee on resolutions for the late James Nicol, presented resolutions which were adopted by a rising vote. The secretary reported the deaths of Marcellus A. Patten and Frederick Cave, both for many years members of the club. President Judd appointed Gustave Thomen, Peter Fisher and S. J. Goddard a committee on resolutions in the case of Mr. Patten, and James Methven, A. K. Rogers and T. U. Little a similar committee regarding Mr. Cave.

Mr. Rogers, for the executive committee, reported that the committee favored holding a ladies' night January 24 and the annual banquet March 2.

Those present unanimously favored each recommendation. Mr. Downs, chairman of the committee to represent the club at the big union meeting in Horticultural hall, January 17 to 20, reported that his committee had secured the services of Loring W. Underwood for his famous illustrated lecture on "Old New England Gardens," January 17. He asked members to contribute plants for a fine group to be placed in the center of the loggia and mentioned the many fine features of the coming series of meetings.

Five new members were elected. A collection was taken up for a Christmas present to the courteous janitor, Joseph S. Spry, and members contributed liberally. President Judd appointed James Methven, H. H. Bartsch, John Morris, P. J. Van Baarda and Donaldson M. Smith, tellers, to distribute, sort and count ballots for the annual election. There were thirteen candidates for the five positions on the executive committee. The result of the ballot was announced as follows: President, William H. Judd; vice-president, Harold A. Regan; treasurer, James Methven; secretary, William N. Craig; executive committee, Walter H. Golby, John L. Russell, Andrew K. Rogers, Patrick W. Burke and George W. Butterworth.

There were fine lots of exhibits on the tables. The W. W. Edgar Co. received honorable mention for an excellent group of Erica melanthera, oranges, cyclamens, poinsettias, Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, scarlet tulips, begonias, etc. The company also displayed vases of fine poinsettias and euphorbia. F. E. Palmer showed some splendid cyclamens, of which he has a grand lot this season. Walter H. Golby had a fine vase of Lilium speciosum Melpomene.

James Marlborough displayed plants, beautifully flowered, of Fascination and Display, two new winter-flowering begonias of the English type, which were awarded honorable mention. Peter Arnett showed grand plants of Peerless, Cincinnati and Turnford Hall begonias and a superb plant, five feet across and smothered with large, handsome blooms, of Rosalind, which was awarded a cultural report of merit. E. E. Randall showed his new, patented, adjustable plant stand, which attracted favorable notice. W. D. Howard, of Milford, president of the American Carnation Society, drew members' attention to the big midwinter exposition of the American Carnation Society and the American Rose Society, combined, to be held at Hartford, January 25 to 27. now; all seem to prefer golf and football. The several talks on begonias and cyclamens proved interesting and it was quite late when the meeting terminated, closing one of the most successful years in the club's history.

Various Notes.

Carbone, Inc., reports a record-breaking Christmas trade in all departments. T. F. Galvin, Jr., nearly doubled last year's business. T. F. Galvin, Inc., Penn the Florist, T. F. O'Brien, the Houghton-Gorney Co. and others all agree that they did a remarkable business, far ahead of 1920.

The Charles I. Beasley Co., of East Milton, Mass., pansy specialist, had a fine pick of pansies for Christmas. The company is growing several thousand Iris tingitana in a solid bed and these are flowering fairly well and better than the same iris with other bulb specialists.

The W. W. Edgar Co. had a fine lot of Tulip Vermilion Brilliant for the holidays, also hyacinths from prepared bulbs of L'Innocence, Garibaldi and Queen of the Blues. Their euphorbias, poinsettias and begonias were exceptionally fine.

A remarkably fine lot of heavily fruited oranges came from H. J. Borowski & Sons, of Roslindale, who also had a large batch of densely fruited plants of the improved Boston cherry.

In addition to a grand lot of cyclamens, F. E. Palmer, Inc., was fortunate in forcing a nice batch of hyacinths, L'Innocence and Yellow Hammer, for Christmas.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report the largest Christmas business in their history. They were completely sold out of many holiday lines, practically all colored decorative material being sold several days before Christmas.

There are general complaints of Ladie carnation bursting badly in this section at present. Fluctuations in temperature are probably mainly responsible.

At the funeral of Frederick Cave, at his late home at Canton, Mass., December 21, more than thirty members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club were present and A. K. Rogers, James Methven, A. E. T. Rogers and P. J. Van Baarda acted as pallbearers. There was also a large delegation from Canton lodge, A. F. & A. M. There were many beautiful floral tributes. Interment was in Canton cemetery.

The annual inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held January 9. There will be an address by President Burrage and reports of the secretary, the treasurer and the chairmen of the various committees.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will install officers January 24 and there will be an entertainment, a collation and dancing. W. N. C.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Last week opened quietly. There was little doing in the wholesale center. It soon became apparent, however, that there was quite as much as usual before the out-of-town shipping orders commenced going out. Perhaps there was a little more activity than usual. The greatest cause for anxiety came from the weather. Tuesday, December 20, was a warm day. The flowers that had been held too long suffered severely and the market broke at the start. Perfect stock in good condition for a journey brought excellent prices, while stock that was soft or partly developed had to be sacrificed. This condition continued throughout Tuesday and Wednesday, December 20 and 21. Wednesday night brought the coldest weather of the season, which continued throughout Thursday. Production was cut down and by Friday fresh stock in perfect condition was bringing the best prices of the week. The dull weather made this continue throughout Saturday. At the close of business December 24 most of the salable stock in the wholesale houses had gone out. More could have been sold of certain things.

The general opinion was that as many cut flowers had been sold as usual. Prices were much lower and the best quality was absolutely necessary. Partly developed stock would not do, any more than poorly grown or stale stock.

Roses were the feature of the market. As has been the case for the last few years, the long-stemmed, fancy grades were in oversupply. A certain number that arrived at the right time and in the right condition are needed. There were orders for them, but the supply was too great. The fancy stock that came at the wrong time and that was not "just so" had to be sacrificed. It was in this grade of roses that the greatest difference in prices, when compared with last year, was noticed. The lower grades did nicely, as well; the upper grades did not. Columbia, Premier and Russell were the leading varieties, in the order named. Columbia passed Premier for first place, owing to the larger number grown and to the fact that not so many Premier had been cropped for Christmas as was the case last year. Butterfly and Ophelia did fairly well. Hadley was in light supply and brought fair prices. The successes were in the old-fashioned varieties, of which few are grown. Beauty did splendidly. It was in full crop and sold well at top prices. Killarney and Richmond were also in full crop and brought wonderfully good value, due partly to quality and partly to the shortage of medium-grade stock.

Carnations were scarcer than they have usually been at Christmas. The cold, dark weather did not suit them at all. Laddie led, followed closely by Mrs. Ward and the reds. Enchantress and the whites brought up the rear. Carnations brought just as much as they have ever brought at this holiday. If the weather did not suit carnations, it suited violets and sweet peas; they were an important factor. Poinsettias were short of the demand. They are so was necessarily high. A good many Easter lilies were used at the regular prices that have prevailed this month. Pompons were surely plentiful and found a market at low prices. There was a considerable supply of Paper White narcissi, with some Soleil d'Or, daffodils, snapdragons, marguerites, daisies and bouvardia to give variety. Calendulas did not sell.

There were two important factors in the retail stores, one for better, the other for worse, but different from last year. Many orders for plants and made-up combination baskets and hampers were delivered before the end of the week. This is a big advantage. Many department and other stores sold wreaths and greens. This caused considerable loss and disappointment to florists in unsold stock, particularly in the cheaper grades.

Plants sold well with the growers and in the shops. The cyclamen is far and away the most satisfactory blooming plant at Christmas when it is well grown. Some trouble was caused by poorly rooted stock. Begonias are gaining in popular favor with the changing of varieties. Poinsettias hold their popularity, particularly in the basket size. Solanum Cleveland is gaining in favor as a berried plant. Ferns had an immense sale.

Selling a Cut Flower Novelty.

Immediately after the holidays nearly all the growers plan what they are going to grow for next season, whether the same things will be grown or whether there will be some changes, and, if so, what. This is one of the most important of all the decisions that a grower has to make; on the wisdom or folly of his decision everything else hinges. Hard work counts when well directed, but it is often of little avail when poorly directed.

The general tendency of all progressive growers is to try novelties. They know that old varieties may deteriorate; they must keep abreast of the time; they wish to lead, not to follow. There are two ways of trying novelties—to experiment with a few, to plunge with a lot. The growers who do the former learn how to grow a novelty or, it may be, how not to grow it, but they are not in the market while the novelty remains a novelty. The latter make brilliant successes or disastrous failures.

The making of a success is an interesting process. The novelty arrives in the commission house at a time that is usually prearranged. It is shown to all the salesmen and they are told of its

My dear Mr. Neidinger:-

I want to compliment you and tell you how delighted we are with your wreaths this season. They were so original and new.

You know we cater to the best people of Philadelphia, of critical and refined taste, and every one who saw them in the store exclaimed "How striking they are -- how original your wreaths are Mr. Fox." Others would say - "I wish I had seen these before I bought my wreaths."

I am sure we are going to clean up every one of them. I thought you would be interested to know this and I want to thank you again.

Very truly yours, merits and asked to interest their customers in it. As soon as the customers respond, they are adroitly placed in the position of bidding against one another. The market is so large that even a plunger cannot possibly produce enough stock to supply it, provided there is any real demand. Here is the rub—is there any real demand? If there is, the price will certainly advance. Other varieties of stock just as good may be neglected in the icebox in times of over-production, but the novelty will be rushed out at all times at surprisingly good prices. Each buyer is so much afraid that he will not get what he needs to fill his orders that he says little or nothing about the price and often accepts the stock ungraded.

This explains the apparently absurd averages that are sometimes obtained. The grower who most frequently obtains these fancy averages is the grower who, in addition to his knowledge of what to grow from a grower's standpoint, possesses also color judgment.

Why So Few?

to explain why so few varieties of the rose were grown for the market, when the aim of every alert retailer is to afford his customers an opportunity for selection. Mr. Totty replied that while he would prefer seeing great variety in the market, the drift was against it. "There are," said Mr. Totty, "thirty-eight wholesalers in New York and 1,200 retailers in the metropolitan district. Now, you can readily see that if each one of these retailers should want 100 of, say, Butterfly in a single morning, it would take a lot of plants of each variety to supply their wants. When it came to the same in two or three other standard sorts, there would be little room left in the greenhouses for varieties that did not command steady support.

Various Notes.

Samuel S. Pennock will give an illustrated talk on European horticulture before the Florists' Club at the Hotel Adelphia, Tuesday evening, January 3.

George Burton made a notable success of his Christmas Beauty crop at his Queen street place. Every shoot had a bud. There was no blind wood. Most of it being sold direct, it was not seen in the wholesale market.

Edwin J. Fancourt paid a flying visit to Richmond, December 18, when he admired America and Premier on the Hill places.

Stephen D. Green is in this city over the holidays.

Samuel F. Lilley has been seen in the wholesale district once more. He is looking well.

Christmas Trade.

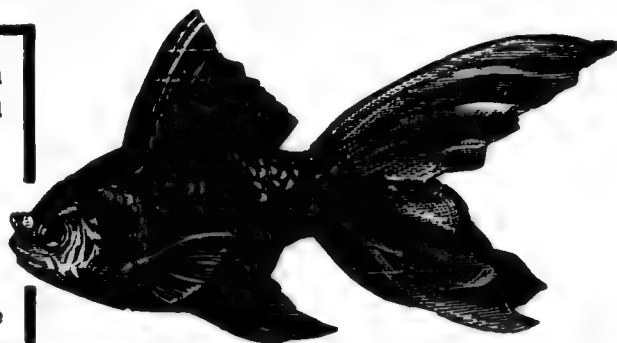

Christmas business this year has been the most satisfactory of recent years, so far as could be learned at this writing. Some of the leading retailers say it went away beyond their expectations. There was splendid weather up to December 21, when rain, with sleet, set in. December 24 found us still with dark weather and cold, which caused wrapping of packages for delivery, making much extra work.

all sections of the city and by far exceeded the call for cut stock, which demanded high prices in all grades. Among the plants that had first choice were poinsettias. These were exceptionally fine this year, while the supply equaled the demand. Cyclamens came next. These, too, were fine this year and there were plenty of them. Fruited orange and cherry plants cleaned up, as the supply was limited. Begonias, primroses, valley and hyacinths in pots and pans were exceptionally fine and the call was beyond the supply. Holly and mistletoe were extra fine. Ground pine was quite scarce; the Pine street commission houses had none to sell. Holly and red frieze wreaths had an unusually heavy call, and all the wholesalers cleaned up on these early in the week.

As to cut stock, the demand by far exceeded the supply in all fancy and first-grade stock and prices ranged high.

Carnations were checked by the dark days, with prices from $18 to $20 per hundred for choice stock. The wholesalers found themselves short on advance orders. Shipping demand in these was heavy. Roses were plentiful, but from the looks of some of the shipped-in consignments, pickling had been indulged in quite extensively, while with the local consignments the stock was clean and had the call. Premier, Russell and Columbia composed most of the rose consignments, while Ophelia, Milady, Butterfly, Ward and Killarney were somewhat limited in supply. Prices ranged high and extra fancies went to $50 per hundred. A great many mums were saved for the last day. Most of them were Bonnaffon and they cleaned up well at good prices. In violets the demand was way ahead of the supply;

$3 per hundred was about the limit. Orchids cleaned up well at $24 per dozen. Extra fine valley and Paper Whites demanded $5 per hundred. Roman hyacinths sold well. Sweet peas had a great call all week, with fancy stock as high as $4 per hundred. Cut poinsettias had a steady call all week at $3 per dozen. The call for greens this year was heavy, and the demand cleaned out adiantum, asparagus and smilax daily. Since the supply in cut stock was limited and prices high, it was only natural that the retailers pushed plants, as the supply in these was unlimited.

F. T. D. members among the retailers say telegraph orders were heavy and that plant orders greatly exceeded those for cut stock. New Year's business should be extra good, as society is going to keep open house and many advance orders have been placed for table decorations at the leading hotels for the ushering in of the new year and in the homes for New Year's day.

Retailers' Christmas Business.

Out in the west end everybody was busy. The leading dealers in this section are Joseph Witek, F. H. Weber, Sander's, Fred C. Weber, Theodore Miller and Paul T. Heil. All had a busy week and a most satisfactory Christmas, while their display of plants was the best seen in years. Waldbart's display house was the attraction on Grand avenue. The M. S. Newman Floral Co. and the Koenig Floral Co. also attracted many with fine displays. Julius Schaeffer's first Christmas in the west end was a most satisfactory one.

The elaborate store of Grimm & Gorly was the attraction on busy Washington avenue all last week. December 24 found them almost cleaned out. V. J. Gorly said: "Last year was a great Christmas, but we are ahead this year." The few days' bad weather made little difference with them.

At both the Mullanphy stores, downtown and on North avenue, the report was that business would equal any previous year's.

Fred Strohmeyer, of the Tubbesing-Ayers Floral Co., says the company's Christmas business downtown was beyond expectations.

Thomas Carr's Union Market shop did its usual big Christmas business in both plants and cut flowers. Miss Killcullen, the artist here, was assisted by Mrs. Carr and Rosemary Forrest.

The Acme Floral Shop, in the Arcade building, had a most elaborate display and reported a busy week.

The floral departments of Famous-Barr and Vandervoort's reported fine business, as did Fred Foster, the Riessen Floral Co. and George Berner.

The south end establishments, Windler's Flowers, Bergstermann, T. W. Bruenig, W. H. Kruse and A. Meyer, had extra fine business up to Christmas.

Various Notes.

August H. Hummert, of the St. Louis Seed Co., says while the all-day rain December 23 hurt somewhat in transient trade, their advance orders were so heavy that this Christmas would likely equal any in previous years.

The trade extended sympathy to Thomas C. Carr in the loss of his mother, who died December 19, at the age of 83 years. She was the widow of Roger Carr, for many years the leading plantsman in Union Market. The funeral took place December 21. The room was filled with an elaborate display of funeral emblems sent by friends in the trade expressing their sympathy to her sons, Thomas, Fred and William, who mourn her loss.

Robinson the Florist, who has moved a few blocks farther up Taylor avenue.

Joseph Deutschmann, the Webster Groves grower, reports a similar visit. Twins, both girls, arrived at his home for a Christmas present.

Miss M. Carroll, the Euclid avenue florist, had her pleasure car in a smash-up last week. Miss Carroll sustained an injured back, but was at her place of business to help during the Christmas rush.

Pierre Schneider, the Creve Coeur florist, struck it just right with a large cut of extra fancy long sweet peas for Christmas, which brought $4 per hundred.

The Bourdet Floral Co., Albert Senger and William Schray & Sons supplied the local retailers with many fine blooming plants this Christmas, the best in years.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold its New Year's meeting at the Eleven Mile House Wednesday night, January 4. Several important discussions are scheduled for this meeting.

The St. Louis Flower Growers' Publicity Association will meet January 3, at 1:30 p. m., in publicity headquarters. At this meeting contracts will be made for January advertising.

The St. Louis Flower Show Association's executive committee, which is composed of the officers and the twenty-two chairmen of subcommittees, will meet at 6 p. m., January 3. Notices will be sent to all by the secretary concerning the place of meeting.

There was no bowling December 21, owing to the Christmas rush. The league resumed operations December 28, Salem, Mass.—A branch of the Terminal Flower Shop on Canal street, Boston, has been opened at 233 Essex street. This new branch will be known as the Essex Flower Shop and will carry a line of cut flowers, plants and fancy baskets.

Stroudsburg, Pa.—A miniature forest in the window of the Herriek Flower Shop was a feature recently in describing telegraph delivery service. There were small trees, a lake, various greens, a railway line, a telegraph line, etc., with Mereury running from point to point with telegrams and flowers. The window was most artistically trimmed and attracted much attention.

Evanston, Wyo.—The business of Louis B. Westholder has been purchased by William Starkey, Jr., who has been a student under Mr. Westholder during the last five years. The new firm will operate under the name of the Evanston Floral & Music Co. Together with the transfer of the Evanston store go the numerous agencies which were established throughout southwestern Wyoming. After disposing of his real estate holdings in Evanston, Mr. Westholder will locate elsewhere, but is as yet undecided where.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

Lindley Florist Box Co., Marion, Indiana

OKMULGEE, OKLA.

Christmas Business.

The Okmulgee Greenhouse Co. made a clean-up on all Christmas plants, of which there was a good supply, while prices were not so high as those of last year.

A great volume of business was done at the downtown store of George Marshall. It was necessary to close the doors in order to get out advance orders. Poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias and made-up pans and baskets of mixed pepper plants sold on sight.

The Ellis Greenhouse Co. reports business as better than that of last year. The salesroom at the greenhouses has been a great attraction. Mr. Ellis has installed an oil burner, which will reduce the fuel bill. He also plans an up-to-date flower store in Okmulgee.

Leonard Marsten, the leading landscape gardener, reports sales of evergreens as improving every year. He has a fine display at his salesyard.

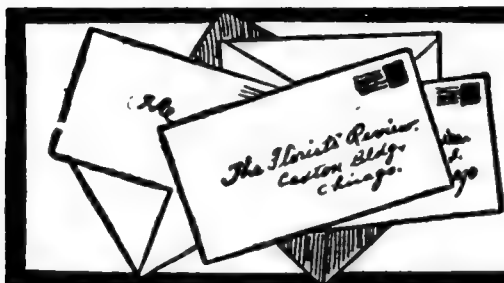

CLEVELAND, O.

Christmas business was good, but supplies seemed to move better than cut flowers. The market cleaned up finely, with the exception of a few long roses, valley and violets. Most of the retailers report a good business, considering the year. Prices were slightly lower than in previous years and this helped to clean up. Roses, for the most part, were good, while carnations were fair, but not quite so good as in previous years. Poinsettias cleaned up nicely in all grades. Violets were good and moved well. Valley, however, did not find so big a demand as in previous years. Narcissi and stevia were plentiful, but moved well.

George C. Eichler, formerly with John Blechschmidt, has bought the West Fourteenth street store of G. G. Stehn. Mr. Eichler has also purchased a new delivery car. W. A. R.

Sheridan, Wyo.—The Floral Design Shop has entered the trade with cut flowers, potted plants and landscape designing. The cut flower department of this firm is under the management of F. M. Edgerton and the landscape department under that of E. M. Lowry.

FLORIST

LEADING SUMMER FLOWER.

A. E. Kunderd Talks on Gladioli.

The gladiolus is fast becoming recognized as the most universally adaptable and useful of all summer flowers. Its possibilities as a florists' flower, not only for outdoor growing, but for greenhouse use, are almost unlimited and just beginning to be realized. It is not an ornamental plant, like a canna or coleus, and yet it adds great charm either to the border or among roses, shrubbery, etc., and is unsurpassed as a garden attraction and as a cut flower. The story of its cultivation, handling, storage, etc., is too long for me to discuss here and I take it that most of you are as well posted on that line as I am.

I want to refer you to a few books that will prove useful to the professional grower as well as to the amateur. The best American book on the gladiolus of which I know is "The Gladiolus," by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet. Allen's "Bulbs and Tuberous-Rooted Plants" is also good. There is considerable literature on the gladiolus published abroad and some by the New York experiment station and elsewhere. I must not forget to mention the Flower Grower, of Calcium, N. Y. The Flower Grower is issued monthly and is devoted to the interests of the dahlia, iris, peony and other flowers, as well as to the gladiolus, and in its columns much valuable information is published from month to month.

Address of A. E. Kunderd before the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, at Madison, Wis., December 16.

History and Improvement.

Now I come to the subject of the gladiolus, its history, past and present, and its improvement and possibilities of still further improvement, or change. There are of what is generally known as species perhaps 200 varieties or more known at the present. These are native mostly in central and southern Europe (what is left of it), central and southern Africa, Persia, the Caucasus and Byzantium. The best of the species are mostly natives of southern Africa. I am fortunate in having a sister living in South Africa (not that I am glad that she is so far away), for her husband, Dr. Hall, brought me last year some fine new, almost unknown species. One of these you will want to know of, as I expect a great deal from it in my work of crossing. I have other collectors seeking for still other yet unknown species in the wilds of Africa; so you can imagine what may yet come from this wonderful flower and see that the work is not yet all done.

The particular species I have just referred to has tall, slender and graceful foliage and stem. It has on the main stem upwards of forty blooms and four of its branches have more than thirty blooms each, giving from one spike about 175 individual flowers.

Variations Many.

When you consider that almost endless combinations can be made from our ten numerals, you will realize what vast possibilities of combinations are yet contained in the many species of gladiolus. Do you wonder that I am fascinated with my work? Do you wonder that I am impatient when I hear that there are too many new kinds of gladioli? Of course, not all of them are good, but only by new introductions and comparison of new varieties can we advance in improvement. When I hear people say that only self-colors, or light and delicate tints are desirable, I wonder if they know what they are talking about. I live on the main line of the Lincoln highway, 108 miles east of Chicago. There are six parallel railway tracks, representing three different railway systems, which pass my home and thousands of people stop at my place during gladiolus time and I can assure you that hundreds of the most prominent people exclaim joyfully when they see thousands of varieties of almost every shade and color. Show your people thousands of rich and even gaudy colors and shades, reds, fancy colored and beautifully blotched varieties and they will forget old notions about only self and soft colors, etc., and your sales will tell you how the people feel when they see something new, something good.

Now I must return more to the history of the development of the gladiolus. Of course, you all know that development of a flower is largely the result of crossing and selection by our new and scientific methods of plant breeding. There is much to be said on culture and growing, but never forget that the three greatest essentials to successful growing of gladioli, as of almost everything else, are good soil, good and frequent cultivation and plenty of water during the growing season. Well grown gla-

Let's Turn It Over You and I

Let's turn over a new leaf.
Let's turn it over to stay turned.
Let's make it read different than last year's.
Let's start with the word "happy."
Let's end with the word "smile."
Let's write on the second line that we cannot have smiles in our voice if we don't put smiles on our face.
Let's write on the third line the word "scat."
Scat to dull care when it comes meowing around.
Meows never yet caught a mouse.
Let's stop wishing we were the other fellow, for he most likely is wishing he were us.
Let's wish each other a Happy New Year.
Let's wish it, because we honestly wish to wish it.
Let's turn over a new leaf, you and I.

dioli are superior to those less carefully grown and a choice variety may be inferior if poorly or only moderately developed. Grow the best and have them in perfect condition; you cannot judge their merits otherwise, nor get the best results.

Productions by Crossing.

The principal older strains of gladioli are the gandavensis, Lemoinei, nanceianus, Childsii, and Groff's hybrids. Gandavensis varieties are the result of a combination of species and previous results of crossing different species, and form the foundation of what later became the Lemoinei strain, produced by that wonderful breeder of flowers and plants, M. Lemoine, of Nancy, France, by the infusion of the species purpureo-

Next came Groff, the celebrated Canadian originator of gladioli, who used still other species among all the best varieties then in existence, and his work has attracted well deserved, world-wide attention and recognition. The work of Groff is monumental.

I had watched this work develop since about 1880, or now over forty years, and having collected as many of all manner and kinds of gladioli as possible, and being a student of evolution and greatly interested in the gladiolus, I began to cross on my own account about thirty-five years ago. Observing an inclination among varieties to show more or less variation towards convolution of the petals, I began the study of the species to learn, if possible, how the ruffled, or wavy-edged, petals might be intensified or improved and a ruffled strain might be produced. By 1904 I was well on the way towards success and by 1907 I had sufficient ruffled varieties to begin to sell a few. In 1908 and 1909 I sent a few corms of ruffled to Crawford and Gage, and to Luther Burbank and Dr. Van Fleet in 1910.

Ruffled Varieties Are Bred.

Now I am going to demonstrate to you the fact that the ruffled gladiolus is the result of scientific work in crossing certain species, which I shall name, with varieties, and quote you some of the authorities who describe these species, and are not a result of sport variation or mutation, and still in much lesser degree due to some later conceived notion of some great law, or rather something said about a law which may not bear the light of scientific investigation or application.

Bailey in his "Cyclopedia of Horticulture" describes species crispiflorus as having "crisped or wavy petals," and species undulatus as "wavy." Childs says of species fasciatus, "The petals have waved margins." Allen, in "Bulbs and Tuberous-Rooted Plants," says of species cuspidatus, "The petals are undulated."

Now notice the names of these species: "Crispiflorus" means crisped. "Undulatus" means undulated or wavy. "Cuspidatus" means cusped.

Fasciatus, imbricatus and other species also show a deviation of edges of petals.

Gladioli for Florists.

On the subject of growing gladioli in greenhouses, I venture to predict that there is a great future open to the florist in this field. Gladioli should not be planted too deeply, as their roots are less liable to feed in the soil which is above the bulb level; in shallow soils this is important. Deep plowing or spad-ing of soils is desirable, but must be done with reference to the depth of the surface soil, as deep spading of shallow soils would bring to the surface too much of the subsoil. A covering of four inches of soil above the corms is generally considered about the best. Mellow loam or sandy soils are better adapted to somewhat deeper planting than is a clay or heavy soil. By successive plantings from early garden-making time until late in June, then following with plantings in the greenhouse from about August 10 until the following March, one may now have blooms of these magnificent flowers almost the year around.You may be interested to know what I consider as the most beautiful colors and types of gladioli and I will try to tell you. The best variety is the one that pleases you the most, be it red, white, pink, yellow or what not, but if you are a grower for commercial purposes, then you must cater somewhat to the public tastes. But, as I said before, the public will soon learn to appreciate many and varicolored varieties if you will have them in fine condition. There are today almost no pure strains of gladioli grown, owing to the great amount of mixed crossing that has been done in recent years, and the field is open to the patient worker to produce yet many wondrous kinds. Let no man tell you that this or that is the best one, for "the best one" has not yet appeared, and you have as good a right to your preferences and to produce the best one as anyone. When two species, or varieties, cannot be crossed directly, try the third one, and with the resultant seedling you may succeed in crossing indirectly and secure about the results you wish.

I want to refer briefly to descriptions, especially of colors. For the expert I believe in a color chart and think we ought to give more attention to this, but authorities seem to differ as to colors and tints, and, as a rule, I find that among the general public our old ideas of colors are suited best.

GLADIOLI FOR MAY 1.

Are 100 days enough to allow gladioli, which I desire to bring in for May 1, without forcing? J. W. H.—Mich.

Such varieties as America, Mrs. Francis King, Halley and Augusta should be planted January 15. The primulinus varieties will come in two weeks earlier in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night. C. W.

FORCING GLADIOLI.

Will you give me some pointers on the forcing of gladioli? What variety is the best for the beginner? When should they be planted, how much room should they have, what temperature do they require, etc.? R. M. P.—Pa.

Much will depend on whether you are planning to grow for a home or for a shipping trade. Gladioli succeed well in the same temperature as carnations, viz.,

50 to 54 degrees at night, but they can be grown at a temperature 5 or 10 degrees cooler successfully. There is a specially good demand for gladioli for Memorial day, but well grown spikes are in demand all the time, or, at least, greenhouse spikes are.

Popular and free-selling varieties for you to try are: America, Augusta, Mrs. Francis King and Halley. Mixed colors do not sell well. Bright colors move well at Memorial day, but at other times pink takes precedence, next coming salmon and pure white. It would be advisable to try some of the primulinus varieties; even a mixed assortment of these would answer well, as so large a proportion come of charming pastel shades. Plant them two to three inches deep. Primulinus bulbs can go four to six inches apart each way, the larger gandavensis sorts, six to eight inches each way. It would be advisable not to plant any before January 15; put in successional batches at intervals of a fortnight until the middle or the end of March.

C. W.

GROWING GLADIOLI.

I should like to ask some questions concerning gladioli. What is the best variety for forcing? Should the variety be a flat bulb or a semi-round bulb? Should a gladiolus flower early and how can this be brought about? What is the best way to clean a gladiolus? Is it best to remove all the skin or not? Is a bulb which bloomed last summer and produced flowers as good a forcing bulb as one which did not have a flower? What date should one plant in order to get flowers about May 15 or on Memorial day in this latitude.

K. & S.—Wis.

Some gladioli have bulbs more rounded than others; the natural preference would be for bulbs of this sort, but it does not make much difference whether they are flat or rounded, provided they are well matured. It would be advisable to remove the old bulbs from the bases of your gladioli, also that portion of the stem which may be left, giving this a twist off. It would not be well to remove the skin covering. This acts as a protection to the bulbs and helps to prevent shriveling. I would just as soon remove the skin from tulips or crocuses as from gladioli.

Gladioli which have flowered will often produce fine bulbs, but these should not be used for forcing. They will give disappointment. Bulbs produced on plants which were not allowed to flower are the best for forcing. In order to insure a good crop under glass, it is necessary to give gladioli sufficient rest. Many people plant in December, sometimes even earlier, as soon as chrysanthemums are cut; these bulbs will grow freely, sometimes four or five feet high, but only a small proportion will flower. One grower planted about 500 Schwaben about January 1, 1920; hardly any flowered, but he got over 1,400 fine bulbs. Those planted about February 1, 1921, under glass, practically all flowered. Bulbs under glass, of course, mature much earlier than outdoor-planted ones and, if from unflowered bulbs, are the best for forcing.

It is inadvisable to soak bulbs in warm water or to start them in a warm room before planting in the greenhouse. Give the plants a shed, cellar or storehouse kept about 45 degrees and they will be all right. You can force the primulinus hybrids earlier than the larger-flowered and heavier gandavensis hybrids. There is an increasing demand for the former; they are splendid in funeral designs, and in vases lend themselves to more artistic arrangement than the older types.

In order to have gladioli, such as America, Panama, Halley, Augusta, Schwaben and Mrs. Francis King, from May 15 to 30 in your latitude, it would be advisable to plant in benches or solid beds from the middle to the end of February, giving the bulbs an average night temperature of 50 degrees. The primulinus varieties, which contain many beautiful apricot, orange, salmon and other shades, will come in from ten to fourteen days earlier than the other varieties named. C. W.

ting new ideas and putting them into practice in his business. Good store arrangement, good window displays and a clean store count for more today than ever before. Many instances may be cited in which competition has been met and the best class of trade secured by giving more attention to service, appearance of the store and efficiency of clerks. Buying is being given more and more attention. It is generally agreed that no merchant can afford to allow other duties to interfere with his buying.

Employees' Efficiency.

Every merchant should realize that much of his success depends upon the ability of salespeople. Educating salespeople in better selling methods and getting them to take a personal interest in the store are two things which retailers must accomplish.

An employee's interest in the store is usually in proportion to the proprietor's interest in his employees. A little encouragement, commendation for good work and a policy of giving credit where credit is due accomplish a great deal in increasing sales.

One merchant recently said: "We are selling service, courtesy and quality today more than ever before. The average clerk who waits on trade is not interested in the store, but simply in getting the work done. Make their work interesting and profitable and you will find that it pays. A plan whereby each clerk gets credit for the work he does has worked out nicely for me. It has built up a spirit of rivalry among my clerks. They have got the habit of suggesting different items to each customer who comes in. The result is that we have a faster turnover, more satisfied customers and more profit."

Aids to Profits.

Special sales on a few leading articles are today endorsed as a means of getting business into the store. Specials are shown to have increased turnover in many cases.

Collecting charge accounts is one of the retailer's most important problems. Collections have been somewhat difficult in the past. Merchants have met this difficulty to a great extent by keeping an unusually close check on charge accounts.

More and better advertising is recommended as one means of increasing business. The importance of absolute truth in advertising is strongly to be emphasized.

Five Factors.

The statement presents the following as maxims a retailer should observe to promote sales and improve profits:

"Make the work of salespeople interesting and profitable. Educate them to be better salesmen.

"Give such good service to your customers that you will hold old customers and get new ones.

"Keep inventories low and stock turnover high. Buy goods that will sell quickly and eliminate dead stock.

Scope of Exportations.

The extent of Germany's trade in flowers and florists' supplies with the other nations of Europe before the outbreak of the world war is indicated by figures collected from various sources abroad.

In 1908 Germany exported $43,000 worth of fresh flowers, $19,000 of green foliage, $8,000 of cypresses, $210,000 of dried foliage and $18,000 of other stock for florists, a total of $298,000. By weight there were 100 tons of fresh flowers, of which forty-nine tons went to Austria, sixteen to Russia and fourteen to Sweden; 124 tons of green foliage, of which thirty-one tons went to Denmark and thirty-one to Finland; thirty-six tons of cypas; 419 tons of dried foliage, and thirty-six tons of other stock for florists, not including the exports to the United States. In 1901 the shipments of bulbs, dahlia roots and plants amounted to more than 2,600 tons.

Germany exported to Switzerland forty-five tons of greenhouse products. In 1900 Geneva received from Germany $1,750 worth of flowering bulbs. Holland imported from Germany and Austria in 1909 approximately fifty-seven tons of bulbs and seventy-seven tons in 1913. Russia imported close to a half million dollars' worth of florists' stock. These included $191,500 of flowering bulbs and decorative plants, and $210,000 of cut flowers; 176 tons of bulbs and 325 tons of cut flowers came from Germany and 115 tons from Austria-Hungary. It should be noted that the fresh flowers, which the customs statistics indicate as from Germany and Austria, really came from France and Italy originally.

cow and Warsaw made their purchases direct from the Mediterranean coast of France and Italy, but smaller concerns found difficulty in this, because the purchaser was obliged to order a considerable length of time in advance and perhaps would not be able to dispose of the stock when it arrived. Taking advantage of this situation, large wholesale houses or syndicates were formed in Berlin, such as the Berliner Gaertner Markethalle, or Berlin Florists' Exchange, in whose hands the trade was concentrated. Cologne was also a forwarding center.

Warsaw was supplied principally from Berlin through the large wholesale houses. The buyer at Warsaw telegraphed his daily order to the Berlin commission merchant, who shipped the flowers by express the same evening on the fast train. At the border an agent in the employ of the wholesaler fulfilled the customs formalities and telegraphed the florists whose names appeared on the package. The following day the latter received the consignments at the station and were able to deliver by 4 p. m. the stock ordered the previous evening. However, the cost of the flowers after passing through so many hands was high.

Hamburg was the forwarding center for palms and perennial plants. The florists at that place made a specialty of transplanting the stock for a year and acclimating it for subsequent shipment to Poland. To avoid reshipment at Berlin, a considerable number were sent by fast train on the South France ex-

TATE'S TIPS

GLUTS AND SHORTAGES.

Overproduction Inevitable.

Temporary overproduction of flowers, like the poor, we have always with us. This question, which means so much to growers, was brought vividly to the writer's attention recently through a committee of florists who were working out a local publicity plan. Just at the time of the committee's deliberation there happened to be a glut of chrysanthemums, so that the question was gone into deeply and considered from every angle.

Let us consider first what causes a glut. Let us take the glut of mums referred to, for example. This was not caused by a falling off in the demand. Upon investigation, it was found that during this particular glut more mums were being sold through legitimate channels than at the same time during previous seasons. To trace the cause for this glut, it was necessary to go back to the past summer. Throughout the east we have gone through an exceptionally hot, dry summer, with an open fall. This was the means of bringing all chrysanthemum crops in virtually at the same time, regardless of varieties. In many places those varieties for Thanksgiving were on the market soon after the first of November. Outdoor stock and that grown inside had to be handled at the same time. It was a condition and not a theory that the growers had to contend with. After a man has devoted his time and space to a crop, and a crop that must be moved at once, after it is in bloom, it is only human nature for him to want to get what he can out of it, regardless of profits.

Hazards of Nature.

In every crop of flowers grown, the main hazard for the grower is weather conditions. Every grower knows that when he is timing a crop for a certain occasion, weather conditions may bring it in several weeks early or late, as the case may be. It may be roses for Christmas or lilies for Easter. He can only force to a certain point and he can go just so far in holding back. Nature cannot be suspended. These are conditions over which the grower has no control.

In any flower center, what happens to one is likely to happen to all in that vicinity. Thus, crops intended for a season when the demand would be abnormal are thrown on the market at a season when the demand is only normal and often subnormal. For it is a well-known fact that after every big flower holiday, such as Christmas and Easter, the demand falls off for a time. As a general rule, this is not noticed, because of the fact that it takes the supply some time to recover.

If growers anywhere in the country will investigate during a glut, they will find that gluts are not caused by lack of demand, but by overproduction, and in most cases this overproduction is only temporary. In the city where the writer lives, for instance, last Easter there was nothing like enough stock to meet the demand and yet, for the two weeks succeeding this holiday, we encountered one of the worst gluts of the season. Crops that had been timed for this occasion did not arrive on time. Cold storage vaults were congested with the finest quality of stock and yet there was as large a volume of business being transacted as ever. Prices broke. Stock was moved without regard for the cost of production. And yet, in just two weeks it was impossible to get sufficient stock at any price.

How Can We Handle Gluts?

This brings us to the heart of the matter—how best to handle these gluts. Here is where the grower and the retailer fail to cooperate. The grower argues that at such times a campaign of publicity and bargain sales by the retailers would move his stock and keep it out of the hands of the street peddlers, while the retailer cannot see that his business would be benefited by selling roses one day for, perhaps, 69 cents a dozen and in a few days being obliged to charge $3 or $4 per dozen for the same stock. Department store sales have been quoted to show how this might be done, but it is well to remember that our business is just a little different from any other business.

There must in all cases be a cause for demand. A need must exist for a certain commodity. This may be immediate or in the future. The bride cannot regulate her wedding day to suit a glut of flowers; yet her gown, or at least the material of which it is made, may be bought at a bargain sale six months in advance. The retailer will have a wedding order for flowers often a month or six weeks before the event takes place. He is obliged to quote prices that are far ahead. If at the time the nuptials take place there is a scarcity and he is obliged to pay an abnormal price for stock, he cannot say to his customer, "Because flowers are scarce, I cannot fill your order at the price agreed upon." If there is a loss or no profit in the job, he is obliged to stand it.

Scarcities Are Worse.

Bad as gluts are, they do not compare, in detriment to the industry, with the extreme scarcities we have had to face in the last few years, when prices were forced up to a point where they were almost prohibitive. Just as gluts are not caused by a lack of demand, neither are these shortages, aside from the big flower days, caused by an excess demand. It is production that fluctuates. The cause for this in most cases is weather conditions. But it has only been in the last few years that shortages have become so acute. There must be a reason for this. Here are two factors for readers to think over: One is the national publicity campaign; the other is the florists' telegraph delivery service. Unfortunately, we have no statistics on the first, but the latter has been throwing from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 worth of new business into the flower markets of this country per year. Is it any wonder that what at one time was only an ordinary shortage should under present conditions become a flower famine? Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter.

Production Unregulatable.

The production of flowers cannot be regulated as can a manufactured article. We are going to have gluts, just as we are going to have seasons when flowers are scarce. Let us face both conditions like business men. In the first place, gluts cannot be handled much better than they are at present; that is, by letting the street peddlers have the advantage of them. The public will buy on the streets, because the flowers are cheap, but the buyers realize there must be something wrong with the stock offered. In times of scarcity we have a harder proposition to deal with, for supply and demand regulate prices.

TRICKING THE FORGER.

The subterfuge used by swindlers of handing a worthless check to an unsuspecting florist in payment of an order of flowers and then asking to have the balance, over and above the amount of the flower bill, paid in cash is not a new one, and many in the trade have, no doubt, had this same experience.

In order to obviate the possibility of this fraudulent practice producing results, Penn the Florist, of Boston, has devised a unique scheme in the form of a rubber stamp on which is the following words: "I hereby declare that I have sufficient funds in the bank on which this check is drawn to meet it upon presentation," followed by lines for the name and address of the drawer. When a check is presented by a stranger, in payment of an order of flowers and for which the balance is demanded in cash, the cashier takes the check, turns it over and stamps it, at the end where the endorsement ordinarily appears, with the above-mentioned stamp. The check is then returned to the stranger, with a request that he sign his name and place of abode on the lines indicated. The moral effect upon the drawer of the check upon being asked to sign his name to such a statement is generally sufficiently strong to cause him to become exceedingly cautious about placing his endorsement upon the check, and any hesitancy upon his part will immediately arouse the suspicion of the cashier. The expense of a stamp of this kind is small and may save you a great deal more than its actual cost.

ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Weather conditions in this locality have been good for the last two weeks. Monday night, December 19, however, the temperature took a drop, going below zero and being accompanied by a snowfall of two or three inches. Business has been fair throughout the fall and last week it began to pick up noticeably, so that the indications now are that holiday sales will be good. As it appears now, there will be an over-supply of cyclamens and poinsettias on the market. Some fine roses and carnations are appearing these days.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association was held in the courthouse at Minneapolis, December 14, and approximately sixty members were present. Some interesting papers were read by Hans Rosacker, James Souden and Professor Eyer, of the University Farm. John Sten, of Red Wing, Minn., displayed lilies of the valley. Out-of-town visitors at this meeting were as follows: Joseph Marks, of A. Henderson & Co., of Chicago; John Sten, Red Wing, Minn.; H. D. Ludlow, Worthington, Minn.; H. J. Saunders, Hastings, Minn.; J. M. Wordell, Northfield, Minn.; N. Neilsen, Mankato, Minn. Committees were announced for the 1922 flower show and E. A. Cuzner and E. Meyer were elected honorary members of the club.

A creditable exhibit was made by the florists at the crop show, held in the courthouse. Hans Rosacker, the Merriam Park Floral Co., Holm & Olson and were well attended. An exceptionally good showing of apples and vegetables was made. Approximately $800 was expended in premiums for horticultural products.

The officers elected by the Horticultural Society are as follows: President, F. H. Gibbs, St. Paul; secretary and treasurer, R. S. Mackintosh. R. A. Wright and Le Roy Cady were elected to membership on the executive board. F. H. Gibbs, Le Roy Cady and Mr. Schlitz, members of the executive committee, are all members of the State Florists' Association. C. R.

LEGION'S OFFICIAL EMBLEM.

What is the official emblem, if any, adopted by the American Legion? Is there any firm which manufactures small iron standards bearing this emblem, to be used in marking graves? I have seen such standards with the G. A. R., Masonic and other emblems, with a place for holding a small flag or banner on the back of them. One of the societies in this city wishes to mark the graves of our Legion boys in the same way, but cannot find any advertisements of such a grave marker.

F. B.—Mich.

The official emblem of the American Legion is the star on a wreath, which forms the pin or button commonly worn by its members. A reproduction of the design in flowers appeared in The Review for December 1.

Official legion grave markers are to be had only through the national headquarters of the American Legion. It is suggested by the head of the emblem department at national headquarters of the American Legion that local florists take

PESTS NOT DANGEROUS.

I began building a new house September 1 and, therefore, had no chance to get prepared soil for my carnations. I went out to an old straw pile and took rotted straw and soil to a depth of three or four inches. My carnations and lettuce are doing well, but there are thousands of little black flies and gnats in them. How can I get rid of these pests?

I did not get my carnations in until October; they are now just beginning to shoot out stems and are showing buds. I wish to take cuttings off in January. Can I leave them in the bed and grow them successfully for another winter's cut or would it be better to throw them out?

B. A. A.—Ind.

The flies will do no harm and will soon disappear. The simplest way of destroying them is to wet down the soil, using one pint of a nicotine extract to 100 gallons of water.

The carnation plants should be renewed each year.

DESTROYING WATER LILIES.

Our ponds are full of white water lilies and we are unable to get rid of them. Could you tell us some way to do it? If we can put something on them, will it kill the fish when the water is let back in?

J. R. S.—Ind.

It is far from easy to clean out the water lilies in your ponds. We have had the same experience and have come to the conclusion that the only real cure is to dig out the roots while your ponds are empty. This is not an easy task, but it is of no use applying any chemical spray to the water which will burn the leaves. The plants make rapid growth

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Rain started in the evening of December 17 and continued up to the time of writing, several inches having fallen. Day after day the growers, wholesalers and retailers have hoped for clearing skies, but the hopes were vain and a wet, unpleasant Christmas seemed almost certain. On several of the main railroad lines leaving Los Angeles, washouts and floods have occurred, delaying shipments and in some cases preventing them altogether. While there are large quantities of stock, the rains have made much of it unfit for shipping and probably many complaints will be heard later. It seemed unfortunate that the rain, which had been so badly needed for many weeks, should have come just as everyone was expecting to make his Christmas harvest. Although the retailers made every effort, by brightening up their stores, to pull business, there was little likelihood of any record-breaking holiday.

As already noted, there is plenty of cut stock of all descriptions. Good roses are more plentiful than for many years at this holiday. Plants, outside of cyclamens and poinsettias, are scarce. Good specimens of Erica melanthera and E. regerminans make a pleasing change from older varieties of stock. There are also a large number of erotons, but in most cases these lack color, having evidently been grown in strong heat and in shade. The made-up baskets are attractive and sell well.

Various Notes.

An unusually large order was that shipped to Grand Canyon recently by the Redondo Floral Co., an entire carload being sent. Funeral pieces of every description were included in the shipment, which was for the funeral of a well known hotel man and pioneer of that place. A. F. Borden said that the advance orders for Christmas were better than in any previous year. He is out with a new Buick limousine. A. Knopf, though far from well, is at the store most days.

The increased space and staff at the store of Geo. J. Hall & Co. were needed for the Christmas shipping business and everybody was rushed.

An immense cut of roses is being handled by W. Armacost & Co. The large new range just came in finely for the holiday.

Among the visitors to the city last week were Robert Newcomb, the well-known representative of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, who was spending his vacation with his folks at Long Beach, and N. O. Gilpatrick, of Chicago, a dealer in nursery stock, who intends staying a couple of months.

At the store of the E. C. Amling Co., on Wall street, every possible effort was made during the trying time to get out all shipments promptly. A fine cut of roses from the Santa Ana range of Amling Bros. is arriving daily.

The California Floral Co. reports exceptionally good business in Christmas wreaths. H. R. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Writing on the eve of the holiday rush, it is impossible to estimate the Christmas business, but it can be said with certainty that the stores are ready for the biggest season in their history. Some report that sales started several days earlier than usual, which made the situation look particularly promising. Out-of-town shipping was about finished by December 21 and the volume was gratifyingly heavy. There was plenty of stock to meet nearly all requirements, and plenty left for the local demand. In fact, the market was never better supplied with flowers and plants for Christmas. The large supply has had the inevitable effect upon prices. It is estimated that cut flowers on the whole are about twenty-five per cent cheaper than they were last Christmas, and flowering plants, ferns, etc., about ten per cent lower. The acute shortage experienced for the last two or three years and proportionally high prices caused the growers this year, it seems, to make extra special provision for Christmas. They pinched back their roses and other seasonable flowers to catch the holiday demand and had splendid success with their flowering plants. Of the latter there are probably not so many azaleas as were grown hereabouts some years ago, but never before was there a finer showing of poinsettias, cyclamens, heather, primulas, etc. The market is flooded with roses, except for good Russells; these are short of the demand, but there are plenty of fine quality Premiers, Ophelias, Columbias and an abundance of reds, so the shortage of good Russells is not keenly felt. Carnations are also in heavy supply and of good quality, particularly the white and pink varieties. Red carnations are good property. The holders are getting higher prices for them than for the other colors and refuse to sell reds unless a fair amount of the other colors are purchased also. The only other thing that can be called short of the demand is violets; they show the effects of the rain and, more especially, the cold weather. Some of the shippers experienced difficulty in filling their long-distance orders on violets the first of the week and the local market is rather lightly supplied now, compared with the demand. There are still some good chrysanthemums on the market for local use, but they are too soft for shipping any distance. Cut poinsettias leave nothing to be desired in supply, quality or demand. Heavy supplies are coming from the southern part of the state, as usual, but the local poinsettias compare well with the southern product this year. Bulbous stock is a little early and the market offers a good lot of Paper White narcissi and freesias. English holly was here in quantity from the northwest, and had a strong call. California red berries were likewise plentiful and good, and met with a good demand, together with wreaths of redwood, cones and other decorative material.

Various Notes.

George Wagner, of Joseph's, says holiday sales started in the first of the week, and he looks for a banner business. This firm made a special showing of Chinese chests and baskets of California fruits, jams, etc., which sold out completely to people wanting gifts to send east.

Mr. Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, reported that the Christmas business started off briskly, and this firm was well prepared to handle all that might come its way. Fifteen extra men were added to the force for the rush and had arranged a splendid showing of plants to take full advantage of the increased floor space, recently added.

With the increased facilities which their present location affords, F. C. Jaeger & Son expected to about double last December's business in the smaller store across the street. They had stocked up accordingly, and Mr. Jaeger, Jr., said that early sales left nothing to be desired.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., says he never saw the market better supplied with holiday stock and he thinks the lower prices will have a stimulating effect on the Christmas trade.

in redwood baskets of their own design, which sell from $5 to $25, and have a good call. P. V. Matraia says that they are easy to handle and deliver, as well as making a good display in the store, and therefore are doubly satisfactory as a holiday item.

J. A. Axell is all smiles over the big holiday shipping business which his staff has just completed, followed by the rush of local orders. With the exception of good Russell, he said that the market offered more roses than he ever saw here for this time of the year. Violets are, however, in noticeably short supply.

Domoto Bros. sold out entirely their large cut of poinsettias several days before Christmas. M. M.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Christmas Market.

Last week indications were that the Christmas business for 1921 would measure up to the trade's best expectations. Early indications pointed to even a scarcity of cut stock in a number of lines, although some figure that last-minute deliveries will make a strong showing. Potted items are being featured in window displays, in individual store advertising and in the community advertising and early orders indicate a good sale on these. The stock of poinsettias offered this year has been the subject of trade comment on its general excellence, most of the growers having better than average results on their work. Cyclamens are another heavy seller, and there has been a moderate demand for primrose and pepper plants. Orchids are scarce all along the Pacific coast and the late deliveries of roses have left much to be desired in the way of quality. Long-stemmed stock is practically unknown, with Ophelia the best current offering. There was a real shortage of carnations to report at the beginning of last week, and here again fine stock is scarce. Probably the most noticeable scarcity in the whole list is to be seen in mums. Small stock is in light supply, and growers had early in the month disposed of their standards for the Christmas delivery. Of the strictly holiday lines, greens and holly have enjoyed a good local demand this season, and the heaviest shipping run in a period of years. As for quality, the holly has been uniformly good and more heavily berried than was the case a year ago. Mistletoe has been in only average demand and various lots show a wide range as to quality. has been about the best offered on the market this year. Artificial offerings, when arranged in the form of novelties, have been good sellers, especially with those shops which made up their selections early and had them on display. Candelled novelty centerpieces were popular. There was also a ready sale in certain shops on pottery, retailing at medium prices.

Various Notes.

Clyde B. Clark, retailer of Salem, Ore., was a trade visitor last week.

A splendid holiday trade was enjoyed by the Woodlawn Flower Shop, with the unusual situation noted of more than fifty per cent of the novelties on hand for the beginning of the season moved a week before Christmas. One-half of the old store and the entire former basement were used for storage of stock, in addition to the facilities of the new store. The main salesroom was devoted to plants, while cut flowers were displayed in the upstairs workroom. An additional icebox, 12x60 feet, was also required.

A brisk shipping business in cut flowers was done by the wholesale establishment of the B. E. Hammond Co., and earlier wide shipments were made of holly and mistletoe, as well as seasonable greens. Trouble is still noted in getting enough cut flowers to care for the trade.

W. D. Desmond, of Risdon & Desmond, is bringing in some fine mixed stevia at the present time.

Some of the finest poinsettias seen this season have been grown at the greenhouses of Hollywood Gardens, by Gus Bjorkman, and their delivery on the market has attracted general trade comment. Not only are the blooms exceptionally good, but from the standpoint of foliage they surpass anything yet offered. This shop did extensive advertising for the holiday business, laying emphasis on the value of fancy floral baskets as gifts, and a gratifying number of these were sold. A greater amount of roses could have been moved had the stock been available.

The Art Floral Co. moved large quantities of potted offerings during the holidays, medium-sized stock selling the best.

As a result of the fine reception given painted novelties prepared by this firm this year, the Seattle Fern & Moss Co. is planning more extensive operations on this score for 1922.

Henry Morgan reports a good demand for small and medium-sized holly wreaths in his new establishment.

Perl Grant, Minneapolis landscape architect, and Mrs. Grant were in Seattle a few days last week on their way to southern California for the winter. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Holmes, of Hollywood Gardens.

The coldest weather experienced in western Washington in recent years has put a severe strain on growers in protecting their greenhouse holdings. Some losses have been sustained already, John Sahli reporting damage to ferns at his Kent greenhouses last week.

Melby's Flower Shop executed a number of home decorations during the holiday season, using principally holly and greens. The cold weather hampered the display of stock in this shop.

W. S. Goldsberry, northwestern representative of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, will call on the trade in this vicinity for two weeks, starting the Tuesday McCoy's handled one of the largest of the recent weddings. Cattleyas, freesias, lilies and maidenhair ferns were used for the bride, the bouquet being backed by pale green ostrich feathers. Columbia roses were carried by the attendants. Corsages were prepared of orchids and lilies and also of bouvardia, while the church was decorated in large and white mums, white panels and candelabra.

ered. This list was in the hands of the retailers early Christmas week, and has already proved its value.

Rosaia Bros. report a clean-up at the greenhouses on Christmas potted offerings, with a short cut still noted on roses. The same is true of orchids at this time. This holiday season was marked by a larger early telegraph business than has been the case in previous seasons, and special arrangements were made to care for incoming orders. Funeral work, especially in the larger pieces, has been heavy of late. Two new delivery cars have been added to the fleet, the larger being a 1½-ton White truck. This is painted green, with the firm's name in gold lettering.

Although this was the first season that this firm has actively gone out for this class of business, the City Flower Shop enjoyed a good volume of shipping business on holiday greens. Trade paper advertising played a considerable part in this, according to the proprietors of the shop.

At the last meeting of the publicity board of the Seattle Florists' Association, it was voted to use quarter pages in the Seattle Times and Post-Intelligencer, to be followed by window stickers carrying the message, "Say Merry Xmas With Flowers." One new retail and one wholesale member were added to the cooperative advertising campaign. This meeting was held at the home of Felix Rosaia, and Mrs. Rosaia provided an elaborate dinner before the meeting. Kenney's Home of Flowers displayed some unusual examples of potted plants for the early part of Christmas week, and these cleaned up quickly. This shop is receiving some of the finest local carnations coming in at the present time.

To care further for holiday trade, the Pinehurst Floral Shop secured the storeroom at 314 Pine street, across from its regular location, as an annex, and Miss McDonald was in charge here.

Irving Harris produced special decorations in the Bon Marche Flower Shop and increased the sales force fifty per cent to care for the Christmas trade.

La Verne Jackson, of McCoy's, is again at work. He was in the hospital the greater part of a week and submitted to an operation on his neck, necessitated by an infected boil.

Felix Rosaia made an almost complete rearrangement of his shop to allow of proper display of Christmas lines. The more delicate ferns proved to be among the leaders in the potted line here.

The University Flower Shop did a good business, a part of this being attributed to a "Buy in the U District" movement, fostered again this year by the various merchants located in that district.

H. D. White is bringing in about the best local violets seen at this time, and is having trouble filling his orders.

Ernst Mayer is still bringing in a good grade of late pompons, but the cut is insufficient to meet the trade demand.

Santa Cruz, Cal.—A. L. Wright, who started in the seed and plant business here one year ago, is making successful headway. His address is 74 North Branciforte avenue.

Long Beach, Cal.—The Art Florists have opened their second store, at 635 Pine avenue. A complete stock of cut flowers, ferns and plants will be carried and special attention will be given to designs. Mr. Rossi will be in charge of the new store.

Fortuna, Cal.—The Humboldt Evergreen Co. has moved its headquarters from Dyerville to Fortuna. In the new location this firm is much better equipped to handle its rapidly growing shipping business in Mexican ivy and other greens, according to Leslie Smith, manager.

Olympia, Wash.—The business known as the Capital City Nursery & Greenhouses has been purchased from Conrad Klam by S. E. Sanford. Mr. Sanford wishes to call the attention of the trade to the fact that there is no business establishment in Olympia called the Capital Point Nurseries.

Oakland, Cal.—A unique Christmas greeting was put out this year by the Mas-Art Basket Works, Inc., which consisted of a neat little folder containing a cut showing the basket filled with rose buds, lilies of the valley and greens which won the Mas-Art prize at the San Francisco fall flower show.

Santa Ana, Cal.—Norris the Florist is the title of a new firm opening at 630 North Main street. The proprietors are F. L. Norris and his son, of Bloomington, Ind. Mr. Norris, Sr., has been coming to California for many years with a view to settling here eventually. The store is attractive, and a fine new delivery car, suitably decorated, forms a neat and good advertisement for the firm in the city.

Long Beach, Cal.—An artistic touch has been added to the life of Long Beach by the æsthetic sense of the designer of the new Lowe Flower Shop, opened at 251 American avenue. An ingenious tiling design that covers the floor and the artistic arrangement of Italian terra cotta benches, tables, jardinières and boxes, together with a series of hanging lanterns, give the shop the appearance of an Italian conservatory. In the rear of the store, under the mezzanine floor, an icebox made of glass has been introduced without spoiling the lines of the conservatory effect. H. N. Lowe is a pioneer in Long Beach, having opened his first establishment here in 1895. Mr. Lowe will retain his West Ocean establishment, and Mrs. L. E. Warner will be the manager of the new store.

95 Chambers St., NEW YORK

largely to the illness of Judge Harris, before whom the case was heard, decision was finally rendered Monday, December 19. The judge decided in favor of McHutchison & Co. on all points and dismissed the charge against the company. When the decision was handed down the case was set for rehearing.

The judge stated that he had carefully studied the law in the case and could not see that the law had been broken. The evidence submitted, he had decided, proved that raffia was not a combustible fiber when packed in bales. The testimony showed that the law was not intended to apply to commercial fibers in solid bales, the only contrary evidence coming from Inspector Briggs, who admitted that he knew little about raffia.

The importance of the decision may be better understood when it is stated that McHutchison & Co. have at present in stock, in storage or en route 2,500 bales of raffia. Of bamboo canes they have 1,400 bales.

PUGET SOUND CABBAGE SEED.

How It Is Grown.

The status of the United States as a seed-growing country was greatly changed by the recent war. It gave American seed growers their opportunity and they made good. This is particularly true in cabbage seed production in general. In particular, Skagit county, in the state of Washington, has advanced so rapidly that the locality has earned for itself the title of "the cabbage country of America." Government statistics show that eighty per cent of the cabbage seed grown on the American continent is produced in Skagit county and sold over two hemispheres as Puget sound cabbage seed.

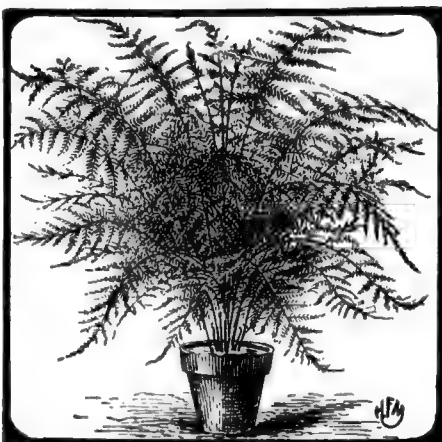

Those seedsmen who are not familiar with the methods of cabbage seed culture practiced in the Puget sound district will find interesting the brief outline of how this crop is produced there which the Charles H. Lilly Co., of Seattle, has recently prepared.

The land is first selected with the utmost care and only land that is adapted is selected. The method of planting is the result of many years' observation and experience, which is essential in growing a crop that hybridizes or pollenizes as readily as cabbage. The custom has always been followed of isolating the fields, growing only one variety on any certain farm, at least seventy rods from any other like crop. With this method of planting and by adhering to the rule of never planting two crops of cabbage in succession on the same piece of land, a much truer and more uniform type can be maintained and the constant change from one piece of land to another has effectively prevented the introduction of diseases.

Cultivation of Land.

After the land has been selected, it is plowed early in the spring and continually cultivated and disked until the plants are transplanted. A spot is selected for planting, which is raked over until it resembles a mellow garden. The seeds are sown about the middle of May. The plants are usually large enough to set out in the field the first part of July, sixteen inches apart in rows three feet apart. Constant cultivation is necessary in order to remove all weeds, keeping the land mellow, thus giving the cabbage a rapid growth which insures a healthy condition and helps fight the root maggots. By the middle of October the cabbage has advanced to a stage where small, stunted or off-type cabbage are cut out and only heads that are firm and true to type are kept for seed production. These true heads are put in their permanent places, the rows six feet apart. This is a task of extreme importance and can be done only by those who have given years of study and close application to cabbage seed culture. About the middle of November or at the first sign of freezing weather, the cabbages are covered and remain so until about the first of March. From this time on, the cultivating must be done with consistent regularity, as this is the time the seed is maturing. Just before the plants are in bloom, stakes five feet long are placed in the rows about six feet apart and a heavy twine is strung along both sides of the cabbage and fastened to the stakes about two feet from the ground. This keeps the heavy-laden branches from breaking off or resting on the ground. Before the cabbage is cut, the last part of July, a deep furrow is plowed between the rows and stakes are laid across this furrow. The cabbage is then cut with large knives and piles of a dozen stocks each are placed on top of these stakes. Thus the furrow acts as a ventilator. The seeds are ready to thresh in about two weeks, and are placed by hand in a canvas-covered box, 4x5x12 feet, and hauled to the thresher on a sled.

Machines specially constructed for this threshing are used. The seed comes from the machines fairly clean and is placed in burlap sacks about half full, where it is kept about two weeks, during which time the sacks are turned every day in order to insure the seed being perfectly cured. Tags are placed both inside and outside the sacks, giving stock number, variety, etc., making a mixture of the different lots a practical impossibility.

Immune From Diseases.

It is said that Skagit county has practical immunity from diseases common to the brassica family, such as black leg, black rot, club root and fusarium wilt, all of which are serious diseases, causing severe losses in other districts where they are common. Fusarium wilt has become destructive in the cabbage-growing sections of the eastern states and bids fair to rank with black rot in importance. It causes yellowing and wilting of the plants.

A contract has been entered into by the recently incorporated Skagit Valley Seed Growers' Association and the Chas. H. Lilly Co., whereby the company has absolute control for a period of years of all the seed crops grown by the association, to furnish planting stock and to sell all the seed grown. All seed crops are subject to the same contract and rigid supervision of the Lilly Co. as they

The World's Best CANNAS

The best varieties from all sources, Foreign and American introductions.

The best quality of roots both as to vitality and size of divisions.

Every order filled with fresh cut roots, which must not be confused with roots cut, packed and stored months before delivered to you.

They cost a trifle more but are worth considerably more. Every 100 roots we supply will, with reasonable treatment, produce 200 or more pot plants.

The subjoined list contains the names of free, large flowering, vigorous growers, any of which will please you and your customers. Order now and say when you want them shipped to you.

Price $5.00 per 100, $40.00 per 1000, except where otherwise noted.

BEACON.—Free flowering dwarf, bright red.

CHEERFULNESS.—Beautiful variegated, orange and scarlet with golden border. The florets are medium sized, but very freely produced.

CITY OF PORTLAND.—A wonderfully attractive rose-pink. Excellent upright habit and free flowering. $15.00 per 100, $125.00 per 1000.

DR. E. ACKERKNECHT.—The bronze foliage blends pleasingly with the carmine rose trusses. Vigorous and free.

DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.—An old favorite with deep crimson flowers.

EUREKA.—The best white Canna. A very strong grower, blooming freely. The flowers are large and become pure white in the full sun. $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

FANAL.—Exceedingly free flowering, deep bright red. A most effective bedder.

FEUERMEER.—Another excellent old sort with a profusion of dazzling orange-scarlet flowers.

GAITY.—Wonderfully effective. Deep orange suffused with scarlet and bordered with yellow. A brilliant bedder.

GOLDEN GATE.—Vigorous and free. A unique combination of yellow and golden shades, blending into rose as the flower matures. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

HUNGARIA.—There is a quiet refinement about this delicate rose-pink Canna that charms every one and has made it one of the most popular. $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 100.

KING HUMBERT.—The most popular Canna of this generation. The large orange-scarlet flowers and particularly the very deep bronze foliage make it one of the most useful.

LOUIS REVERCHON.—The flowers are brighter and more freely produced than on King Humbert, while the foliage is a greenish bronze.

MRS. ALFRED CONARD.—Magnificent trusses of large salmon-pink flowers. Unique and very ornamental. The stock of this variety is very scarce. We have a limited quantity and advise early ordering. $15.00 per 100.

MRS. KARL KELSEY.—A tall, majestic, vigorous grower surmounted by great trusses of large orchid type flowers. Orange-scarlet streaked and mottled with rose.

RICHARD WALLACE.—A well known pure yellow.

THE GEM.—A seedling of Hungaria, more vigorous, with a profusion of large cream-colored flowers dotted with carmine. Very unusual and attractive. $7.00 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

THE PRESIDENT.—The greatest red Canna in commerce. Very heavy, vigorous growths, surmounted by great trusses of immense florets of bright scarlet. We heartily endorse this as the greatest Canna introduction of recent years. $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

WYOMING.—We know of no other Canna as effective as this for large plantings. A giant in growth. Extremely vigorous with its deep bronze foliage as an ideal background for large bright orange-colored flowers of the orchid type. It makes an ideal subject.

YELLOW KING HUMBERT.—A sport from King Humbert, to which it occasionally reverts. Green foliage with yellow flowers, dotted with scarlet. $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

We have good stocks of many other varieties, prices on which will be quoted on application.

have been for the last twenty years, with the added protection to the buyer that every farmer growing seeds for the association is now financially interested in producing a crop that will enhance the reputation of Puget sound seeds. The association will not accept any seed from their growers until passed on and approved by the Lilly Co.

Coöperative seed production and marketing is not by any means a new idea, because it has been practiced in Europe, particularly in Denmark, for many years with marked success, and such combination has usually resulted in great improvement in the quality of the crops raised.

Van Ginhoven & Co., Lisse, Holland, with American offices in New York, N. Y., in care of Maltus & Ware.—American edition of wholesale bulb list; an illustrated book of sixty-seven pages, clearly printed on enameled paper and bound in a strong, tasteful gray cover.

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.—"Livingston's Seed Annual," an illustrated catalogue of "True Blue" seeds, tools and other equipment; ninety-six pages and colored cover. Vegetable, farm and flower seeds are all well represented. "Livingston's famous tomatoes," being a specialty, occupy more than eight pages. In flower seeds, asters and sweet peas are among the conspicuous items.

I. N. Simon & Son, Philadelphia, Pa.—"Simon's Perfection Seeds for Market Gardeners," illustrated, eighty-four pages, in a neat and substantial cover. Gladioli, lilies, cannas, dahlias, miscellaneous perennials, garden implements and other supplies are listed, as well as vegetable, farm and flower seeds. At the beginning, under the title "The Planter's Guide," are two pages of tabulated cultural information.

East Lansing, Mich.—William A. Frost is considering going into business for himself. He has been employed in the horticultural department of the Michigan Agricultural College for the last five years.

Upper Sandusky, O.—Business at Consten's greenhouses has increased to such an extent that it was found necessary to add another automobile to the delivery service. A contract has been let for a new office and store by this firm and the basement under the office will be equipped for a storage room for cut flowers, making the use of an icebox or refrigerator unnecessary.

Windmill Talks on Bulbs

You can but marvel at the gigantic task of the soldiers in digging the trenches on the battle fields of the World War.

It reminds me of the tremendous labor of our own men, in the way we dig trenches, 4 feet deep, across our bulb fields, and standing in them, throw the top soil on the bottom, and the bottom on top.

This we do every three years. Every three years the soil is shifted, a spadeful at a time, so that it will be done uniformly and done thoroughly.

It is how we keep our soil always sweet; always full of that life-giving vigor so necessary to growing the solid, flower-filled bulbs we sell.

It is why, when you buy Tegelaar Bulbs, you get uniform bulbs, uniformly satisfactory.

L. C. STARK, of Stark Bros. Nursery & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., was in Chicago for Christmas.

ALTHOUGH the price of Manetti stocks still is nearly three times what they cost in the old days, the demand has been sufficient to cause prompt clearances of this season's arrivals from England and France.

THE program has just been issued for the thirty-second annual meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen, which will be held at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo., January 25 and 26. A meeting of retail nurserymen will be held at 2 p. m. January 24.

THE official roster of the Weller Nurseries Co., Holland, Mich. is: President and nursery manager, B. H. Weller; secretary and general manager, P. Weller; assistant secretary, A. Weller; sales manager, N. I. W. Kriek; manager shipping department, J. J. Weller; propagator, Jacob Weller.

SMALL STORM LOSS IN EAST.

The "ice storm," as it is called, which raged in Massachusetts at the opening of December, did not do great damage to the nurseries there, although a number of large ones were in its course. The heaviest damage was done to the old trees, on private estates, in parks and along highways, whose stiff branches would not bend beneath the load of ice, which measured three inches or more. Those on high ground suffered most. Many large deciduous and fruit trees were ruined. The evergreens soon became a mass of ice, the branches supporting one another, and did not suffer so badly. The young stock in the nurseries fared better than the older, because their pliable branches bent beneath the weight, and were able to be straightened later.

The Framingham Nurseries, at Framingham, Mass., were in the midst of the storm and probably suffered as much as any other nursery. But Richard M. Wyman, the proprietor, states that "losses from the recent ice storm will be comparatively slight. Few sorts of trees in nursery sizes were damaged. The deciduous shade trees caught it hardest of all, but, with the exception of lindens, the damage was slight.

"Elms, maples and oaks were hardly damaged," he reports, "and then only in the larger trees, generally trees three inches in caliper or more. Lindens of all sizes were considerably broken, branches and leaders being torn off. Lombardy poplars above sixteen feet in height were considerably damaged, but the sizes below that height were scarcely damaged at all, although they were bowed right down to the ground for two days or so. Only a few birches were damaged.

"Shrubs, of course, were practically unhurt. Evergreens, such as red cedars, American arborvitae and pyramidal arborvitae, were bent to the ground. Since the ice left they have, to a great extent, recovered their position. Most of them will undoubtedly be practically straight by spring. We cannot, however, fully determine the damage done to these evergreens. Undoubtedly some of them have had the fibers of the trunk sufficiently shattered to hurt them, but I am inclined to think that the percentage will be comparatively small.

"I believe we have the largest nursery within the limits of the storm and, moreover, we were in the heart of the storm area. Therefore, I feel sure this report of damage can be taken to be a fair sample of general conditions within the limits of the storm area.

"Concerning the damage done to matured street trees, it has surprised me to see the amount of damage done to the American elm. I have always considered it as among the toughest of them all, but, as far as I have been able to observe, it has suffered the greatest damage. Ash trees were surprisingly smashed, sugar maples considerably so. Matured Lombardy poplars have in many cases practically nothing but the main trunk, all the branches having been stripped off."

The J. W. Adams Nursery Co., at Springfield, Mass., was not at all affected by the storm, but states that nurseries about Worcester suffered some losses.

According to W. H. Wyman, proprietor of the Bay State Nurseries, at North Abington, Mass., no injury was done there, since the storm was not so severe as elsewhere. The young stock in the nursery bent and did not break, being straightened up later.

It is reported that considerable damage was done at the Breck-Robinson Nursery Co. grounds, at Lexington, Mass., but the extent is not certain.

GRAPE VINES IN CALIFORNIA.

The department of agriculture of the state of California has issued the following order, having to do with preventing the further spread of grape phylloxera in inter-county shipments, which is an excerpt of the pest control regulation No. 1: In order to ship grape vines or rooted cuttings into phylloxera-free counties, you must have the statement of your county horticultural commissioner that they are grown in a locality at least six miles from a known phylloxera infestation and a representative of his office must be present at the time of digging to seal the vines with a wire and lead seal. Therefore, it will be necessary for you to get in touch with your county horticultural commissioner beforehand, so that he can send an inspector to your nursery at digging time. The vines must be treated by the hot-water method before being shipped. Preparations should be made as well in advance of the shipping season as possible and the apparatus for treating the vines must have the approval of your county horticultural commissioner.

All expense in connection with the preparation of vines for shipment under this regulation, with the exception of the sealing device and the salary of the inspector, must be borne by the owner of the vines.

The following counties, according to the best available information, are free from phylloxera: Alpine, Amador, Del Norte, Humboldt, Imperial, Inyo, Kern, Lake, Lassen, Los Angeles, Madera, Marin, Mariposa, Merced, Modoc, Mono, Nevada, Orange, Plumas, Riverside, San Benito, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Stanislaus, Tehama, Trinity and Ventura.

Shipments to any of these counties must meet the requirements of pest control regulation No. 1, states Harry S. Smith, chief of the bureau of pest control.

The white pine blister rust was recently found on planted white pine at Vancouver, B. C., and on cultivated black currants at several other points in that vicinity. It has apparently extended its range from British Columbia into the northwestern corner of Washington, as it has been found at Sumas
City and Mount Vernon. The disease was brought to America during the last twenty years, and has already done much damage. The white pine forests of the northeastern states are generally infected, and the disease is spreading in Wisconsin and Minnesota.

The rust passes one stage of its life on five-needle pines (white pine) and another stage on the leaves of currant or gooseberry bushes. Cultivated black currants are especially susceptible to the blister rust and usually are the first to become diseased, but all kinds of currants are affected. In most sections wild currants and gooseberries are present in great numbers in association with five-needle pines, and, as they become infected with the disease, transmit it to white pines near by.

Prior to the discovery of the disease in British Columbia and in Washington, the blister rust had been found only in the eastern United States and in the eastern provinces of Canada. The western pine forests in the United States that are endangered are valued at more than $228,000,000, and are estimated to contain over 57,000,000,000 feet of lumber. Much of this timber is located in the national forests. Local control measures have been developed by the United States Department of Agriculture in coöperation with the northeastern and lake states, which have been practicable under eastern conditions.

JOY FLORAL CO., NASHVILLE, TENN.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Christmas Market.

From all reports to date Christmas trade was a surprise to the florists. It was beyond expectations. Some of the more optimistic florists thought it would be good; others attempted to be optimistic, but it was like whistling to keep up spirits while going through a scary place. It was hard to anticipate what the public would do in the way of buying flowers when complaints were being made in all other lines of business. Some of the more conservative ones played safe by ordering one-half as much as they handled a year ago, just as they did at Thanksgiving, when they cleaned up. Forces were not increased much. The regular salespeople were expected to handle things with a little extra effort. They did, too, because buying started early the week of December 19. It was quite heavy December 21. Severe cold and ice-covered sidewalks kept many buyers at home December 22 and 23, but even with these unfavorable weather conditions continuing December 24, buyers were out and telephone orders were heavy. The conservative ones cleaned up. The wholesalers all cleaned up. Dark, heavy days and intense cold held back stock that had been counted on, and the supply was short. The heavy shipping days were December 22 and 23. Some orders were shipped December 24. Orders were turned down by all the wholesale houses for lack of stock the latter part of last week. Carnations were scarce everywhere, while roses were fairly plentiful. There was a glut of narcissi.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray's window was a gorgeous sight. It contained two huge hampers, one old blue and the other pale yellow. Both were filled with Melior begonias.

Up to and including Friday, December 23, Joseph Austin's retail store had fifty per cent more orders than were recorded for the same date last year. The store was $200 ahead on the month as compared with a year ago.

E. A. Humfeld reported splendid business. Customers who always give big orders, but who missed last year, came back this year with generous orders.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. handled 10,000 sweet peas last week, all good stock. Roses ran short the last part of last week. It seemed as if the demand for Japanese frieze wreaths would never stop. These goods were still selling Christmas eve.

Anticipating a demand for medium-priced goods, the William L. Rock Flower Co. had a supply of plants, priced from $5 to $8 each. These were the heavy sellers. Up to December 23 it was estimated that business was ahead of last year.

The T. J. Noll Floral Co. growers were short about 10,000 roses on account of cloudy weather. This necessitated the turning down of a good many orders for better-grade stock. A large number of choice Columbias were handled the last three days of last week. Many more supplies were sold than a year ago.

The Stuppy Supply Co. sold out two or three times, and filling late orders was difficult. Many were turned down. Some good mums were sent out on orders. This stock was good and helped out in the shortage of other offerings.

H. Kusik & Co. cleaned up early December 24.

P. A. Manson, of the Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co., spent Christmas with his family at Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Parker and family spent Christmas with relatives at Pleasant Hill, Mo.

All of the Christmas shipping orders of the Pinehurst Floral Co. were filled at Pleasant Hill this year. This made easier work for the city salesroom. A good plant business was done at both places.

R. L. Isherwood was in the city December 23 on his way to Chillicothe, Mo., for Christmas.

The Alpha Floral Co. had 3,000 plants in its Tenth street greenhouses, December 22. All the stock was brought from the farm to the greenhouses and orders were packed and shipped from there.

J. E. Murray & Co. had one of the best weeks ever preceding the holidays. Besides the regular buying, some good funeral orders were made up. A large number of unusually good plants were handled.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING FOR SWEET POTATOES.

Can I successfully sprout sweet potato plants with a hot water system? It will be necessary to heat the president's residence until well into May, which will necessitate keeping the fires going. I am enclosing a sketch of the proposed beds.

B. A. A.—Ind.

The sketch shows a bench 4x125 feet, with a depth of six inches and the bottom raised one foot from the ground. There are three 1¼-inch pipes running lengthwise under the bench. It is assumed that this is a regular greenhouse bench. The three pipes shown would be sufficient to give the required bottom heat, but about as many more will be needed either under the bench or on the wall, for the growing of sweet potato plants. For a house twelve feet wide there should be twelve 1¼-inch pipes. This merely takes into consideration the amount of radiation needed, but in order to obtain good circulation it will be advisable to use 2-inch returns with 2½-inch flows. For instance, for a 10-foot house, without glass in the side walls, it would be advisable to use two 2½-inch flows and four 2-inch returns. Place one flow pipe on each side wall plate and the returns under the side benches.

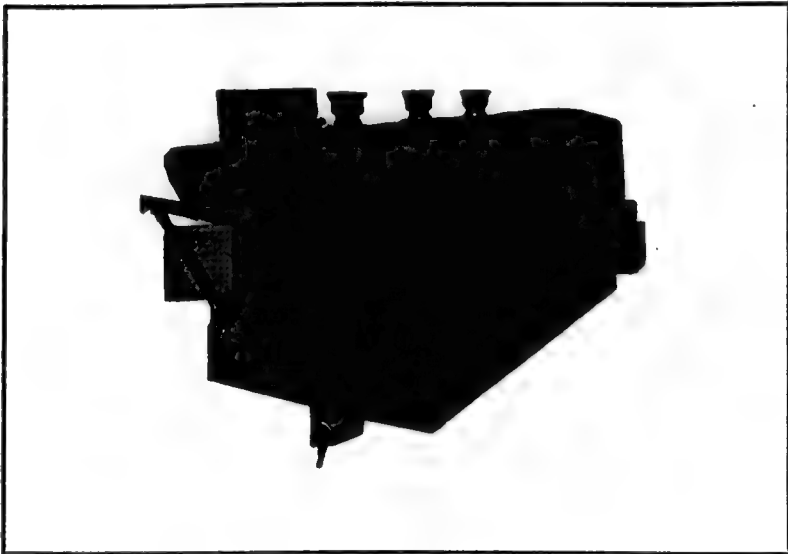

USING PIPE ON HAND.

I have two greenhouses, each 42x100, running east and west, with 8-foot side walls. The north side adjoins the service building. The south side has five feet of glass and three feet of wood. The gable ends have concrete foundations two and one-half feet high. There are fourteen raised benches four feet wide. What arrangement of pipe would it be advisable to use to heat these houses with hot water to a temperature of 50 degrees? I have about 2,400 feet of 4-inch pipe, which I should like to use.

H. H.—Ill.

The 4-inch pipe on hand will answer quite well for heating the two houses. It would be advisable to use one 4-inch flow pipe for two 4-inch returns. This will give eight coils of three pipes each, of which the two lower ones will be return pipes. Place one coil under the south bench and one under the bench to the north. Arrange the other coils under alternate benches.

Give the pipes a rise of one inch in twenty feet from the boiler. If a raised expansion tank is used, it will be necessary to place an air valve at the highest point in each flow pipe, but, by placing a galvanized tank holding forty gallons at the end of one of the houses and connecting it with one of the flow pipes by means of a 1-inch pipe, it will only be necessary to run a ½-inch pipe from the end of each of the other flow pipes to a point level with the top of the expansion tank. There will then be no chance for the air to gather in the pipes, unless the end of one of the air relief pipes becomes closed.

HEATING RANGE AND DWELLING.

Will you kindly tell me how to pipe two houses, one 11x26 feet and the other 18x50 feet, where the small house has two feet of board and three feet of glass in the side walls, and the large house has three feet of board and three feet of glass in the side walls? I wish to maintain 55 or 60 degrees when the outside temperature goes down to 10 below zero, and also wish to heat my dwelling, 20x30 feet with an 8-foot ceiling, with the same plant. I should like to use steam, but do you think an upright high-pressure boiler will work all right when carrying about twenty pounds of steam? I shall use benches, three feet to top of soil, in both houses. Will a heating plant that will maintain 60 degrees at 10 degrees below zero hold 50 degrees at 20 below?

A. R. C.—Kan.

For a plant of the size described it would be more advisable to keep the steam pressure down to five, or at most, ten pounds, as it would hardly be feasible to have a regular night fireman. With the pressure named in the above letter, it would be possible to make a slight reduction in the amount of radiation which will be suggested, but would consider the element of safety of greater account.

An upright boiler would be found satisfactory, provided the floor of the boiler pit is low enough so that the water line in the boiler will be three or four feet below the lower end of the coils; if this cannot be secured, it will be necessary to use a pump or steam trap to handle the return water.

For low-pressure steam, use a 2-inch flow pipe and six or seven 1¼-inch returns in the smaller house, while the large one will require a 2½-inch main and nine or ten 1¼-inch returns.

Carry the flow pipes with a slight fall one or two feet below the ridge, and place the returns under the benches.

A round boiler should have a grate of about thirty-one inches in diameter to heat the dwelling and the two greenhouses, if soft coal is to be used as fuel. This should hold the temperature above 50 degrees when it is 20 degrees below zero outside, if proper attention is paid to the firing.

Des Moines, Ia.—R. J. Shank has just built a greenhouse and plans to go into business extensively in the near future.

J. K. Alexander, the dahlia king, East Bridgewater, Mass., writes, under date of Dec. 7, 1921: "Your thermometer is the best I have seen for my business."

Records are as important in the growing business as in any other business. Progressive growers who spare no effort in raising highest grade stock use Standard Recording Thermometers and know the great aid of keeping records of temperatures. Your equipment is far from complete if you have no Standard Recording Thermometer.

The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal, which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with.

The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

Mr. Greenhouse Owner:

Soon you are going to think of building more greenhouses, and when you have such thoughts we want you to think of us. We can be of very much assistance to you in many ways and want you to call on us for this assistance.

We manufacture everything in Ventilating Apparatus and Greenhouse Fittings. If it is just repairs that are necessary, we have a lot of fittings that will eliminate a great deal of trouble if you use them.

Our catalogue shows all. Why not write for one? They are sent free on request. Eventually you will use Advance Ventilating Apparatus and Greenhouse Fittings—why not get them now?

Our prices will make you forget there ever was a war.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Christmas Market.

The weather preceding Christmas was cloudy, with much rain for several days and with prospects for snow for December 24 and 25. Snow, however, failed to arrive and the rain ended December 23. The weather for December 24, when most of the deliveries were made, was just above the freezing point, making only light wrapping necessary. There was heavy buying in all lines and the florists were getting their share. There were plants of good variety, but the most sought after were cyclamens, poinsettias, primulas and begonias, though there were other plants in good demand. In cut flowers, roses and carnations were most in demand. Roses were in fairly good supply, but carnations were not in good crop.

Various Notes.

The Blackman Floral Co. had large quantities of plants of all kinds. This firm was short on carnations, but roses were in better supply. Morgan Suttle, the rose grower of this firm, had a nice crop of roses, especially in Columbia and Premier, and of these two, Premier was in the lead with magnificent flowers on long, stiff stems. Other varieties of roses are in fine condition for good cuts later. A part of a house planted to old Bride was in heavy growth, and a heavy crop had just been cut when the writer saw it. Buyers thronged the store continually, but at this writing it is too early to say how business compared with that of other years.

The old greenhouses and offices of Julius Niednagel & Sons, have been abandoned and the business transferred to the new office and salesroom of C. L. Niednagel, one block south of the old location. The first Christmas in the new location was up to expectations. Large quantities of plants of good variety were on display in the new, elegant salesroom. The crop of cut flowers was good, especially in roses.

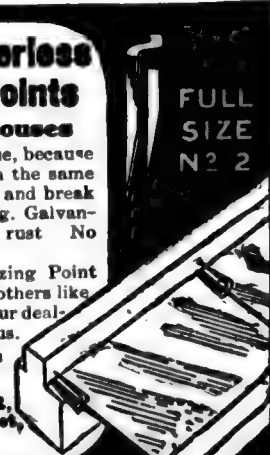

Mrs. J. C. Elsperrmann enjoyed a large demand for the good variety of plants she grows and everything was cleaned out that was salable.

The Lockyear Floral Co. reported a heavy advance call for plants. The crop of carnations was not heavy, but there was a good cut of roses and chrysanthemums.

O. S. Smith enjoyed a nice Christmas trade and sold all of the plants that he had, which were blooming.

Karl Zeidler returned from his annual trip south with a hunting party, just in time for the Christmas rush.

The Christmas Market.

Although weather conditions were rather unfavorable throughout Christmas week for business, conditions seemed to have little effect on the buying public's pocketbook. December 21 was the coldest day of the season, but it got somewhat warmer and snow fell all day December 22, which gave the public the Christmas spirit. In the evening of December 23, all the stores hereabouts were packed and crowds could be seen in the stores awaiting their turn to buy potted plants and other Christmas novelties. All of the stores worked until the early hours of the morning wrapping plants and making up extra wreaths and other novelties, for which there was a heavy demand. Large specimen cyclamens, begonias and other high-priced potted plants are all cleaned up well. One prominent florist remarked that it was astonishing to see the demand for high-priced stock this year. The demand for cut flowers was large December 24 and the day opened with a big rush. All iceboxes were cleaned out by 9 o'clock. Rain and the terrible slipperiness made delivery a difficult undertaking, but all were made without mishap. Flowers and their usefulness were well advertised in the local papers here jointly by all the florists, which undoubtedly helped the impetus for good business. On the streets and in the cars people could be seen carrying several bundles of presents, including a potted plant or a box of cut flowers, and great praise is due to the florists here for their joint advertising campaign at this time of the year.

Retail prices of all cut flowers were moderate this year as compared to former years. Roses were selling at $3 to $8 per dozen, for standard varieties. Some sales were made of American Beauty with 40-inch stems at $35 per dozen. Red carnations were selling at $3 to $4, while Ward sold at $2.50 and $3. The light pink and white varieties sold at from $2 to $3. Orchids were $3 each. Sweetheart roses sold at $1 per dozen and gardenias 50 to 75 cents each. Paper White narcissi went at $1.50 per dozen. Grand Soleil d'Or were taken at $2 per dozen and lily of the valley at $1.50 per dozen. Violets were sold at $1.50 per bunch of fifty and sweet peas at $1.50 per bunch of twenty-five.

it was noted that all their stands were cleaned up on the night of December 23. Other stands around town were badly overloaded and early Saturday night Christmas trees could be had at your own price, if you would take them.

The Serpillo & DePietro Co., Bloomfield, is having a heavy demand for sweet peas. Mr. Serpillo, of this firm, is visiting friends and relatives in Italy and will return after a two months' vacation.

Dutch bulbs were in good demand at Cadwell & Jones this year. All varieties cleaned up well. The first importation of this firm from France came December 21, together with new crop flower and vegetable seeds, and all hands are busily engaged packaging these and other seeds.

The dwelling of George Hunn, expert designer and decorator at Coomb's Main street store, was badly gutted by fire December 21. It is on Wethersfield avenue.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Retailers are busily engaged taking care of their usual holiday rush. They are having a successful Christmas this year. The wholesalers practically cleaned up all the stock they had. Roses have been received in this market in the varieties, White Killarney, White Ophelia, Richmond, Crusader, Premier, Columbia, Pilgrim, Ward and American Beauties. The demand, however, for Richmond and Crusader far exceeded the supply and in some instances it was necessary to substitute Premier or Russell. American Beauties brought high prices, although the quality was not so good. The demand for the special and fancy grades was limited. Carnations of some of the best varieties were received in this market, viz., Laddie, Winsor, Benora and white. Christmas greens moved well and the quality of mistletoe was good. Never before were so many street peddlers on the streets of this city selling all kinds of varieties of Christmas wreaths and made-up artificial baskets. Some retailers have reported that their sales will be almost equivalent to those of last year.

GLADIOLI!

GLADIOLI!!

WE ARE HEADQUARTERS FOR GLADIOLI.
Are fast becoming famous, and justly so, as there are Good & Reese Co.'s Gladioli; no better bulbs grown than we offer. Florists will find our bulbs big and fat; just the kind to produce plenty of flowers.

OUR NORTHERN MICHIGAN GROWN
GLADIOLUS BULBS

Are far superior to bulbs grown farther south, especially for January planting and forcing.

We find that we still have a few thousand of each of the following varieties to spare, if taken at once.

These are all our own growing; fancy, bright plump bulbs; absolutely free from disease; true to name.

Prices are for 1000. 250 at thousand rates.

LILYWHITE.

The long desired pure white Gladiolus of vigorous, healthy growth; great multiplying power; straight spikes opening six to eight blooms at a time; an ideal forcer, early as Halley and the best commercial pure white to date.

Awarded first prize by New York, Massachusetts and St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, Horticultural Societies and American Gladiolus Society.

This variety will be grown eventually by the million and practical florists will get stock at once. Will sell a limited number of bulblets at $4.00 per 1000.

Send for our descriptive list of cut-flower varieties suitable for retail florists; also testimonials from leading growers.

SEEDS

HYBRIDIZED DAHLIA SEED.

This seed is raised from the most up-to-date
Dahlias in existence. No place in the world have Dahlies been brought up to such perfection as they have been around San Francisco. This mixture contains all colors and types of Peony,
Cactus and Decorative varieties. Our rainless
California summers make it possible to get seed even from the very double varieties, a result extremely difficult in States where it is rainy during the time when the seed should set.

The seed we sent out in previous years was highly praised by all who raised Dahlias from it, but this seed is far superior to what we have sent out in previous years. The seedlings will commence to flower two months after sowing and almost a month earlier than plants raised from bulbs.

Price per 100 seed.....$1.00
Price per 100 seed, fancy selected.....3.00

Walden, N. Y., Feb. 14, 1921.

Richard Diener Co., Kentfield, Cal.

Gentlemen: The Dahlia Seed received from you last year turned out fine. Could not think Dahlias could be grown from seed in such short time. Had some very fine blooms. One yellow Peony flowered that was extra fine, some 8 inches and a clear canary-yellow. Everyone who saw it was amazed at the size grown from seed. Had a clear flesh-pink; beautiful under lamp light.
Respectfully, Wm. McBrier.

FOLEY

FOLEY ^{BETTER}_{BUILT} Greenhouses in the Far North

—and January 1, 1923?

What will it mean to you? It's a whole year away yet, but it will get here fast enough. Will it be just a day on the calendar to you, a reminder that another year has passed into the limbo of the past, leaving you where it found you—no farther along the road—no nearer to the success for which you have been striving? or—will it be a day of rejoicing—a reminder that you have just rounded out a highly successful year—a year that has marked a great step forward in your affairs—a much nearer approach to the goal of your ambition?

What you do in the next few weeks will, to a great extent, determine what January 1, 1923, will mean to you.

FOLEY ^{BETTER}_{BUILT} and Heated Greenhouses erected on your place early in the spring will go a long way toward making that day one of rejoicing for you. And so we wish you heartily, sincerely and abundantly

A Happy New Year.

THE FOLEY GREENHOUSE MFG. CO.

3248 West Thirty-first Street, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

WHEN you think of a concern, don't you promptly think of a certain few things about it, that to you mean the concern itself?

To you, it makes but little difference what the capitalization is or who is the general manager or chairman of the Board.

Satisfaction, sure and secure, is the only thing that really interests you.

To our notion, business satisfaction is mainly made up of two things: Sincerity and Pleasant Dealing.

If we are sincere, your interest comes before ours.

It's not a question of what kind of a house there is the most money in for us to build, but what house will at once best build your bank account.

If it will surely build yours, it will just as surely in the end build ours.

So being sincere is not only being sincere, it's good business.

If we believe in Pleasant Dealing, any question of changes or readjustments that may arise, will be handled as one good friend to another.

When it comes to payments, fairness, of course; but always friendliness as well.

For this New Year 1922, we are not seeking to sell you just a greenhouse.

We want you to put your money into Hitchings Sincerity, Friendliness, and Pleasant Dealing.
